An Explosive Blaze Hits Marin Firm

$145,000 Damage To Factory In San Rafael

By JEFF GREER

An explosive, $145,000 fire destroyed the Duracite Manufacturing Co. plant at 121-123 Jordan Street yesterday and briefly threatened to spread to neighboring buildings in the San Rafael industrial district.

The fierce blaze was fed by exploding drums of acetone solvent and quantities of resin that Duracite used in manufacturing imitation marble sinks. The flames were so hot they burned off the building's roof before it could collapse into the plant.

Dense black smoke from the blaze hampered homeward-bound commuter traffic on Highway 101 and drifted as far as Richmond. Thousands of sightseers clustered in a nearby schoolyard or drove to hillside viewpoints to watch firemen battle the flames.

The San Rafael Fire Department sent 25 men, four engines and a truck to control the blaze, according to Fire Chief Vance Trivett. Kentfield sent back-up units to stand by in San Rafael fire stations.

Cause of the fire has not been found, Trivett said.

Duracite spokesmen said no curing ovens nor other heat was used in the manufacturing process, and extreme care was used in handling the highly flammable acetone.

The firm's 11 employees had closed up shop at 4:30 p.m. Fifteen minutes later, the lights began flickering in the adjoining building housing the Nor-Cal Pet Supply Co., and Nor-Cal employees heard noises that "sounded like someone was walking on our roof" — the acetone drum explosions.

They ran outside, saw smoke pouring from the vents of the Duracite factory, and sounded the alarm. The blaze was under control within 30 minutes.

President of Duracite is F. John Dreyfous of 332 Golden Gate Avenue, Belvedere. He told firemen that he estimated damage to his plant and stock at $60,000. Homer C. Rickards of San Rafael, owner of the 10-year-old building estimated structural damage at $85,000.

The concrete, tilt-up walls of the 110-by-100 foot building were badly buckled and one section collapsed.

Two trucks parked inside the Duracite plant were destroyed, as was a third truck parked nearby, belonging to the Pallavacine Roofing Co. A shed and plumbing supplies at the Varlin-Marlow Appliance and plumbing supply firm downwind of the blaze also were damaged. Grass burned in an adjoining lot.

One eyewitness told Independent-Journal photographer Jim Kean that while the acetone and resin-fed fire was at its height, the wind was whipping flames clear across Irwin

25TH BODY

Final Search For Gravesites

YUBA CITY, Calif. (UPI)— Armed with aerial maps showing nine more "possible graves," sheriff's deputies made their last search today in the Feather River orchards where 25 farm workers' bodies have been unearthed.

The latest body of a hacked and stabbed victim to be discovered was dug up from a gravesite spotted by a farm worker yesterday about 500 yards from where the 24th body was uncovered the previous day.

Sheriff Roy Whiteaker said all potential gravesites in the peach orchards and along the river, including those previously underwater, had been checked out.

"We have completed the regular search," he said.

But aerial photographs taken Wednesday with an infrared camera "located nine possible graves," according to sources in the sheriff's office.

Whiteaker said his men's last search in the crude graveyard five miles north of here would be based on the pictures.

Two Navy jets zoomed low over the peach orchards yesterday afternoon, but the sheriff refused to say if the A4D Skyhawks from Miramar Naval Air Station, San Diego, were called in at his request or if they contained aerial photography equipment.

The 25th victim, like all the rest, was a middleaged, white farm worker. Whiteaker said the body had "the same type of stab wounds in the back of the head and about the chest."

Authorities revealed yesterday that a green "ledger book" containing 34 names, including four of the known victims, was taken from the home of mass murder suspect Juan V. Corona. But they refused to discuss its significance in their case against him.

Corona, 37, a former mental patient who has pleaded innocent to 10 of the slayings, was held across the river in Marysville. He will return to court June 16 for a preliminary hearing.

Official sources said the book, one of two taken from a cabinet at his home when he was arrested May 26, contained a list of 34 "names, dates and places." Four of the names matched confirmed victims in the mass murders, but others appeared to be names of places rather than persons.

Tiburon Woman Is Kidnapped From Her Home

BULLETIN

A woman identified as Jan Gregg, 26, was kidnapped from the Cove Apartments area, Tiburon, at 11:20 a.m. today, according to sheriff's deputies.

Her abductor, reported to be armed, drove off with her in her white 1970 Maverick, deputies said. He was described as about 20, with short blond hair, wearing an orange shirt and striped bell-bottom trousers.

The woman, blonde-haired and blue-eyed, was wearing a maroon sweater and blue jeans.

Wichita Police Pelted By Youths

WICHITA, Kan. (UPI) — About 200 young persons pelted police witp bricks, rocks and bottles early today in the northeastern part of Wichita, injuring three officers and causing some property damage.

The officers were treated and released from area hospitals. There were no arrests.

Capt. Kenneth Coffey said the trouble started shortly after midnight where a "block party" was in progress. Quiet was restored less than three hours later.

Anniversary

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI)— Israel observed the fourth anniversary of its lightning victory over the Arabs today by renewing its standing bid for closer ties with the United States.

Five Die In Blockbuster Explosion

WACO, Ga. (UPI)—A small foreign car collided with a trailer truck hauling 20,000 pounds of dynamite and lowgrade explosives last night, causing a "blockbuster bomb" blast that swept away spectators, cars and nearby houses. Five persons were killed and at least 35 others injured.

Highway patrolmen threw a protective ring around a crater 100-feet wide by 20-feet deep in U.S. 78 until army demolition teams could clear the area in daylight.

The explosion cut the two-lane, blacktop road, the main thoroughfare from Atlanta to Birmingham, Ala., and touched off woods fires in a quartermile area. The shock wave collapsed the roof of a school gymnasium where 200 persons were attending a gospel song fest.

The truck driver, A.W. Fielding, 50, of Birmingham, foresaw a possible disaster when flames erupted after the collision of the Volkswagen with his truck shortly after 8 p.m. EDT. "Get back, there are explosives on the truck, they may go off," he screamed at persons who began to crowd around the wreck. Some onlookers heeded the warning and survived the explosion that came several minutes later.

The truck, owned by the

Red Rockets Hit Da Nang Airbase

SAIGON (UPI) —Communist gunners fired about a dozen 122mm rockets into Da Nang and its U.S. air base on the northern coast of South Vietnam today, the U.S. Command said.

South Vietnamese sources said at least five of the rockets hit residential areas near the base, killing five civilians and wounding 10 others. A command spokesman said there were some casualties and slight damage at the base, the largest U.S. Air Force installation in the northern part of the country.

It was the second attack within six days on the base and the city. Last Sunday, a total of 13 rockets hit the base and nearby residential areas and killed 12 civilians and wounded 11 others.

The rocketing of Da Nang followed a second day of heavy shelling against a string of allied outposts along the demilitarized zone (DMZ) and Highway 9 just below it. The road is used by the Communists as an infiltration route. Those barrages caused light casualties, according to the spokesman.

In the A Shau area along the Laotian border, about 60 miles south of the DMZ, South Vietnamese troops crosssed over to the western ridge line of the narrow, north-south valley for the first time in their two-month-old attempt to seal off the flow of Communist supplies. The troops reported they killed 17 guerrillas in their sweep.

Around Firebase 5 in the Central Highlands, government troops fought a minor skirmish three miles to the north but failed to break a two-week-old Communist seige.

They also called in more strikes by B52 bombers to help shake loose an estimated 1,500 Communist troops surrounding theinstallation, five miles south of Dak To. The base was hit by

Dymally's Advice To Graduates

Sonoma State College graduates were told yesterday to work toward a reconciliation among the many conflicting forces in the United States.

Sen. Mervyn Dymally, D-Los Angeles, the first Negro to serve in the state Senate, told a commencement audience to work toward bridging the gap between races, young and old, students and teachers and between children and parents.

He said he hoped the students would turn to politics to achieve the reconciliation and wage war on injustice and poverty.

"We are in a time of crisis where neither Democracy, nor we, can afford to fail. There is not time to talk about cutting back in our commitments, no time to prosecute wars, no time to lash back at the angry poor, no time to move back the hands of the clock," he said.

Nearly 600 of the 950 graduates attended the ceremony held at college lake. Also speaking were college Presi-

Rice Is Reelected As Tiburon Mayor

In a surprise compromise move, Tiburon city councilmen last night reelected Denis T. Rice as mayor and chose M. Carlisle Becker as vice mayor.

The election, which followed three previous abortive attempts to break a 2-2 deadlock between mayoral hopefuls Anne L. Ellinwood and Albert H. Sennett, came when both Miss Ellinwood and Sennett withdrew their names from nomination without comment.

The surprise action presumably was necessary because neither Sennett nor Miss Ellinwood would withdraw in favor of the other.

The five-minute special session followed an impromptu closed session outside of the council's chambers which lasted about 15 minutes.

At two other meetings, Rice had supported Sennett and Becker had supported Miss Ellinwood for the mayor's post. Councilmen Branwell D. Fanning, absent from the last several meetings, has been in South America on business.

DENIS T. RICE
Compromise choice

Had Miss Ellinwood been elected, she would have been the first woman mayor in Marin County in 17 years. Miriam P. Cummings held the mayor's gavel in Mill Valley in 1952-54.

Rice, 38, is an attorney in San Francisco. He was elected to the city council in 1968 and served as mayor pro tem in 1969. He lives at 117 Hacienda Drive.

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Voting At 18

SALEM, Ore. (UPI)—The U.S. Constitutional amendment granting 18-year-olds the right to vote in all elections is just six states from ratification after Oregon's legislature approved it Friday.

The state Senate voted 16 to 14 for ratification, completing action on the amendment. The House previously approved it on a 31-29 vote.

To General

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Senate has confirmed the promotion of the first black general in the U.S. military reserves. reserves.

Brig. Gen. Benjamin L. Hunton, 51, of Hyattsville, Md., will work in his new rank at the Defense Department on active duty two weeks a year as a minority affairs officer. In civilian life, Hunton is assistant director of the U.S. Bureau of Mines in charge of education and training.

Goodyear Fined

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Goodyear Tire Company has been fined $18,000 for producing tires that failed to meet the government's safety standards.

The case involved 34,000 tires size 7.00 x 13, and 11,000 size 9.15 x 15, all of which were recalled earlier when the tires failed to meet the government's speed and strength tests, the Transportation Department said Friday.

Strike Continues

WASHINGTON (UPI) —A strike by 20,000 workers against Western Union company entered its fifth day today and a federal mediator said he had failed in an effort to get negotiations resumed.

Nicholas A. Fidandis, a federal Mediation and Conciliation Service mediator, said there was "no progress" at a meeting of company and union representatives Friday.

No Complaint

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—A criminal complaint won't be filed against Groucho Marx because of his alleged statement "the only hope this country has is Nixon's assassination," U.S. Attorney James L. Browning Jr. said Friday.

The comedian's statement was quoted recently in a lighthearted interview with the Berkeley Barb, an underground newspaper.

Big Settlement

SANTA ANA, Calif. (UPI)—The survivors of four California men killed in a 1968 plane crash in nearby Fullerton have been awarded $21.75 million in damages from the Beechcraft Aircraft Corp. Inc. of Wichita, Kan.

The award was given Friday by an eight woman, four man Superior Court jury which had deliberated for one week.

Ninety per cent of Californians now live in cities and towns.

Joe E. Lewis, Comedian, Dies

NEW YORK (UPI)—Comedian Joe E. Lewis, whose quips about "booze," and "the ponies" brought laughs from thousands of night club patrons, died here Friday. He was 69.

The end for Lewis, who rose from New York's lower East Side to command $10,000 a week at such night spots as the Copacabana and Chicago's Chez Paree, came a week after he was admitted to Roosevelt Hospital in a diabetic coma.

Born Joseph Klewan, the son of Russian Jewish immigrants, Lewis began his career in show business performing on amatuer nights while still a teenager. But his talent failed to be recognized, and, after several months as a clothing salesman, he left New York for Chicago where his career took off —but his life almost ended.

In Chicago during the gangwar years of the 20s, Lewis performed at the haunts of gangsters and when he walked out on "Machinegun" Jack McGurn in 1927 to work for another club, the hoods took their revenge.

Three hoodlums entered his hotel room, beat and slashed him and left him for dead. He couldn't speak a word for weeks and spent more than a month in the hospital.

Since Lewis' strong point at the time was singing, the attack appeared to end his career.

Then, in 1942 at New York's Copacabana, a gravel-voiced comedian named Joe E. —he added the "E" to distinguish himself from heavyweight boxing champion Joe Louis — appeared in what was to become a yearly booking at the fashionable spot. He was an instant hit with jokes about his weaknesses, alcohol and horse racing.

His third foible, women, was taken out of the act for two years during a brief marriage to actress Martha Stewart. In the divorce proceedings in 1948, Miss Stewart complained Lewis would rather associate with "racetrack characters" than stay home with his wife.

"A man doesn't know true hapiness until he's married," Lewis told audiences, "and then it's too late."

In fact, Lewis, who made his weaknessess a way of life, once complained he was the victim of slanderous gossip concerning his drinking habits.

"There are some character assassins running around trying to ruin my reputation," Lewis said, "and I want to set the record straight.

"I drink as much as I ever did, and anybody who says I'm on the wagon is an outright liar."

Holds Steady

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — California's unemployment rate held steady at 7.4 per cent last month—the same as for April—but 7,000 additional workers joined the jobless ranks, the Reagan administration reported Friday.

Laird Hits Saigon On Drug Flow

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird, in rare public criticism of the South Vietnamese government, has expressed dissatisfaction with Saigon's efforts to slow the flow of drugs to U.S. troops.

Laird's complaint came Friday through Pentagon spokesman Jerry W. Friedheim.

"He's not yet satisfied that all the steps that can be taken have been taken," Friedheim said of Laird's views on the heroin traffic in Vietnam.

Friedheim made the comment when he was asked if Laird was pleased that relatives of Prime Minister Tran Thien Khiem had been fired after complaints they were involved in the drug traffic.

Friedheim said the South Vietnamese government has taken "a number of steps" to stop the traffic. But, he said, Laird "would expect a continuing effort.

President Nixon discussed the drug problem with Laird at a meeting Thursday.

Senate Kills Draft Plan By Close Vote

WASHINGTON (UPI) —In an atmosphere heavy with presidential politics, the Senate has spared President Nixon —and itself —from having to take a stand on the draft next year before the election.

A close 49 to 43 vote Friday killed an amendment by Sen. Richard Schweiker, R-Pa., to extend the draft only for one year. If it had passed, the President would probably have been forced to request, and Congress to grant, another extension only months before they face 10 million newly enfranchised 18, 19, and 20year-olds in the 1972 elections.

It was another victory for President Nixon in his fight for a two-year extension of draft authority. Opponents of the draft, seeking to deny Nixon manpower to conduct the Vietnam war, have lost every test so far and have turned to a filibuster to force an automatic end to the draft when the current Selective Service law expires June 30.

An amendment by Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., to end the draft on that date was buried 67 to 23.

the Schweiker amendment was as close as draft opponents have come to changing Nixon's double-barreled proposal to continue conscription and raise military pay and allowances in an effort to attract enough volunteers to make the draft unnecessary by mid-1973.

Schweiker said four hours before the vote he thought he might have a chance to win but the administration —with heavy lobbying —convinced about a half-dozen Senators that another draft debate next year might embarrass the administration politically.

Schweiker, however, said administration officials flatly promised wavering Senators that Nixon would not ask for a draft extension again in 1973—when the new draft law will expire. The election will be over by then.

CAP To Join In Hunt For General, Wife

CHINO (UPI) — The Civil Air Patrol hopes to put about 30 volunteer planes into the air during the weekedn in the search for the wreckage of a missing plane piloted by retired Maj. Gen. Richard O. Hunziker, a spokesman said today.

CAP planes, sheriff's aircraft and military planes have found no trace of the Cessna 182 since Hunziker and his wife, Margaret, took off from Calexico last Monday.

Hunziker retired from the Air Force in 1969 after serving in the Strategic Air Command and later as deputy inspector general at Norton Air Force Base.

The Western Air Rescue command at Hamilton Air Force Base is coordinating the search.

Amount of Real Juice To Be Given

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The citrus industry, bombarded by complaints from consumer advocates, has agreed to print on the labels of diluted orange beverages the percentage of orange juice content.

The industry made the agreement Friday with the Food and Drug Administration (FDA).

But minimum juice levels to be proposed by the FDA in addition to the voluntary action are lower for at least one category than those proposed by the agency seven years ago and then abandoned because of industry complaints.

The issue was revived in a speech to the National Juice Products Association May 7 by Virginia H. Knauer, White House consumer affairs aide.

"The broad range of proposed standards for diluted juice beverages has been essentially dormant since 1964 and consumers have been forced to shop for these products blindly, to confront the myriad juice drinks available, without any objective criteria for quality and value judgment," Mrs. Knauer said.

When A 'Day Seemed Like Weeks Before'

By KATE WEBB
U.P. International

Editor's Note: Following is the 12th and last in a series of personal impressions written by UPI's 28-year-old Phnom Penh bureau chief about her capture and release 23 days later by North Vietnamese troops in Cambodia.

"A day seemed like weeks before, now it seems like years," Sarath said. He was right.

But although we were to walk two more days, our official release came the next morning.

The guards woke us before 5 o'clock, earlier than usual. Mr. Lib arrived and said, "Put on your new clothes. The officer of the High Command is up here."

I emerged from the bath house in a new green uniform they had given me and Sarath said, "Pack, miss, everything."

Each of us was given a small green cloth bag and I packed "everything" — the torn shirt and jeans I had been captured in, the necklace Moonface had made for me, my black pajamas, toothbrush and toothpaste. "Hammock and mosquito net, too," Mr. Lib ordered.

We stared at each other. Was it release or just another long march?

At 9 o'clock we were photographed, individually and in a group, by a man Mr. Lib confided was a "very high ranking officer." Mr. Lib was flustered and nervous, although it is not Communist habit to salute or show deference to officers. We discussed the value of a camera lens with the officer as he squatted beside us. Mr. Lib was mistranslating in his nervousness.

We then were taken to the tree-hidden shelter where we had been interrogated. Wooden benches were arranged in a semi-circle before a table covered with the traditional green and white checkered cloth.

The squat old military man who had been in the background during our interrogation presided. Before him lay a sheaf of documents — "The official orders from the southwest command for the release of four journalists and two driver-interpreters, according to the humane principles of the Liberation Armed Forces."

We felt awkward in our new clothes. The high command representative cleared his throat, put on his spectacles and looked up. He seemed weary and read the order slowly.

Translations were read to us and when the sections about the "humane" policies were read we were signalled to applaud. We did.

More group photographs followed before we returned for our personal possessions. I was handed back my purse, watch, a Chinese charm I wear around my neck, my ring, aspirin, wallet and I.D. cards. Nothing was missing. I signed for them, and for the 300 reils they gave each of us for transportation.

"You now have the opportunity to say thank you," Mr. Liberation informed us, producing his tape recorder.

Suzuki took the microphone and thanked them in English. Moonface followed, in Cambodian, then me and Charoon. We shook hands all around, the officers included, and plates of bananas and candy and tea were placed on the table. We also were given a full package of cigarettes each.

The officer motioned me off the bench onto a chair. "You are very weak," he said. "When you return to your home, you must check your health very carefully." He pushed a glass of tea toward me and lit my cigarette, as he had done during the interrogation.

"Your cameras are tools of the imperialists and their lackeys," he told us. "They will be used for the good purposes of the Liberation Front.

"When you leave you will not tell people where this place is. It could mean difficulty." He looked at me and Suzuki.

"When you go back to your homes," he said, "Tell the truth about us. Tell the truth. You may have to be very brave, but tell the truth."

I remembered that during the interrogation he had said he did not believe UPI would publish anything I wrote about them.

We asked about other journalists (there are 17 missing in Cambodia). The command representative looked almost embarrassed, I thought.

The Liberation forces could not be held responsible for journalists who followed the Lon Nol troops, he said. It sounded like a warning. Suzuki and I pressed the question. He repeated that it was the policy of the Liberation Front never to kill prisoners, but said that in the southwest region he had no knowledge of other captive journalists.

I felt a sense of failure.

It was at 5:40 p.m. that evening under a sickle moon that we moved out on the first leg of the last lap to freedom. The entire camp turned out to shake hands and say goodbye. We were photographed together with the officers, then moved off into the dusk, turning to wave. From 20 yards away, the camp looked like just another clump of trees.

We were not tied. The men carried rice in scarves slung around their necks, and also their "release bags." There were, as usual, six guards — Dad, Dave, Gap Tooth, Mr. Lib, the Teacher and one of the members of the new party that had arrived in camp. The Cambodians were told that if we walked fast it would take one night instead of two to reach Highway 4.

Our column of bobbing grey shadows moved on, through villages, over paddy fields, along paddy dikes and winding trails. On a dirt road we twice stopped for jeeps to roll by. Four men sat in each vehicle, the headlights shaded and each jeep decked out like a carnival float with tree branches for camouflage. Villagers appeared to take no notice.

Twice we seemed to lose our way and three times we backtracked, the guards shining their flashlights on trail forks looking for a familiar sign. Once a village woman carrying a flashlight called to the guards, shouting something in Cambodian, and we retraced our steps.

I was told I was walking "very well" and that I must keep doing my best. My head was swimming, my hair and new suit drenched with sweat. At the next rest stop we simply leaned against one another's backs, too tired to sit.

We stopped at a place lit by the moon and flares, where straw had been stacked under a spreading tree. We were told to sleep but I didn't. The guards went off in groups and seemed to be arguing over their plans.

Gap Tooth appeared out of nowhere, bringing news, and by the light of the flares over the battle on the road I could see him drawing maps in the dust for the others.

"It is time to move," Mr. Lib said. We scrambled up and in minutes were moving off again. I lit my next to last cigarette. It was sometime after 3 a.m. We did not use flashlights.

We stopped suddenly on what I thought was a new trail. The Teacher was whispering in Cambodian, we were shaking hands, wishing good luck to each other.

Then the six of us were alone in the dark.

"Where are we?" I asked Sarath.

"Highway 4, but not at Trapeang Krailang. Quick, we must move from this place. The soldiers say we must move."

Still we stood. The Teacher appeared from somewhere behind us. "Move," he whispered, then disappeared.

We moved about 500 yards, our shower shoes making a loud flapping sound on the road. I walked in front "because you have a white face," as agreed beforehand.

We argued about moving to a nearby abandoned house with old foxholes around it. The guards had said to wait until after the government armored road-clearing patrol had passed. We had said we would take civilian transportation back to Phnom Penh. But we knew we were not in a town, but territory controlled by the Khmer Rouge.

Moonface won out. He took a piece of white parachute silk I had and tied it to a stick. We stripped off our gift clothing and dressed in the dark in what we had left our civilian clothes. The pink grey dawn came slowly, illuminating an empty stretch of highway littered with spent shell casings.

Shakily, I picked up my little bag. Moonface, clad only in his torn trousers — now too large for him — raised the white parachute silk flag. The two of us stepped out onto the highway, the others shuffling behind. There was the familiar flap of shower shoes in the unfamiliar naked light of day.

Troops appeared on the crest of a hill ahead of us. We stopped and Moonface's face fell, as did the flag he was carrying. We quickly shoved it up again, snapping at him nervously.

I could see their uniforms now and for the first time in 24 days my nerves relaxed. I had to blink to hold back the tears. A first lieutenant was standing in the middle of the road.

"Journalists," we said lamely, still waving our flag high.

"Miss Webb," he said.

"You're supposed to be dead."

Cycle Training Book Offered

The California Highway Patrol is offering the training book used by its own motorcycle officers to Marin County groups wanting to learn safe techniques on the two-wheelers.

Capt. Daniel W. Lyons, commander of the Marin-Golden Gate Bridge area, said a CHP officer would attend any such group's first class session to explain the course.

The training is aimed at curbing the growing number of motorcycle acidents.

Nixon Dedicates Oklahoma Waterway

TULSA, Okla. (UPIL — President Nixon today dedicated a $1.2 billion waterway forming an "Oklahoma sea coast" and predicted it would entice people away from congested cities and back to the countryside.

In prepared remarks the formal opening of the 450-mile McClellan-Kerr navigation system, Nixon said there was "virtually unlimited promise" in the growth of the great central section of America.

"This region can become a new magnet for people seeking the good life so that we begin to see a reversal of the decades-long migration trend from rural America to urban America, a trend that too often has acted to deplete the countryside and overburden the cities," Nixon said.

"This great region, so ready for development can provide part of the answer to the increasingly acute problem of congestion and unctntrolled growth."

Nixon predicted that the waterway, which opens the Arkansas and Verdigris rivers to shipping, would bring a whole new era of growth and development. Private investment planned along the waterway already has passed the $800 million mark and soon could exceed the $1.2 billion cost of the project which has been under construction for a decade.

Nixon said the project was an example to the nation in environmental planning and balanced growth and termed it "an exceptional monument" to the resourcefulness and vitality of the region.

"By undertaking a vast project that some called impossible and other called worthless and making it a success, you have demonstrated once again the vitality of the American tradition of daring great things and achieving what we dare," Nixon said.

At a time when many in the nation were urging a "turn from the pursuit of greatness to the cultivation of comfort it is valuable for our youth, our future leaders, to have before them this dramatic example of the young spirit still at work in building our nation," he said.

Nixon flew to the dedication aboard Air Force One along with Attorney General John N. Mitchell, Commerce Secretary Maurice H. Stans and Agriculture Secretary Clifford M. Hardin.

The waterway, the nation's newest canal, was carved along a stream which cattle had little trouble wading in years past on their way to the railheads of Kansas.

Four Are Arrested In Drug Raid

Marin drug abuse agents entered a San Rafael home last night and arrested four persons for investigation of a variety of drug offenses.

It was not immediately known how much narcotics was seized.

Booked into Marin County Jail, and held under $6,250 bail each, were Clayton Stephen Anderson, 22; Kenneth Wilkes Wright, 22; Gregory Moore Shields, 22, and Michael Moore Shields, 23, all of 642 Gallerita Way, site of the raid.

All were arrested on suspicion of possession of marijuana, possession of marijuana for sale, possession of dangerous drugs and possession of heroin. Anderson and Wright also were booked on warrants alleging sale and transportation of dangerous drugs and heroin and possession of narcotis paraphernalia.

Dr. Lamers To Conclude Series With Drug Talk

Dr. William Lamers, psychiatrist, addresses a public forum at San Anselmo's First Presbyterian Church following the 10 a.m. service tomorrow. His talk will deal with the drug abuse problem in Marin.

Dr. Lamers has been recognized as an authority in this area, through his counseling, writing and service on various boards.

He is currently medical director for Marin Open House and staff psychiatrist in several local hospitals as well as being engaged in private practice.

The 11 a.m. forum in the church's Fireside Room concludes a series of spring seminars. The summer schedule begins next Sunday with an outdoor service on the church grounds at Ross and Kensington Avenues in San Anselmo.

Innocent Plea To Burglary

John Michael Van Liew, 20, of 25 Marion Avenue, Mill Valley, has pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court to a charge of burglarizing Quinn's Tavern at 2 Corte Madera Avenue, Mill Valley, Wednesday.

A preliminary hearing was set for June 15.

Van Liew was arrested after a police officer on a routine patrol saw someone move inside the closed bar at 12:57 a.m. When Van Liew came out, he was arrested.

Police said that a rear window had been pried open, but nothing seemed to be missing.

STARS ABOVE

Sky Map For Month Of June

By SHERMAN WALKER

On June 7 the first-quarter moon passes 6 degrees south of Jupiter and about three hours later passes 7 degrees south of Neptune, all of which requires a fairly large telescope for observation.

On June 8 the almost full moon passes very close to Antares, in Leo, as it does every month this year. The May and June conjunctions are the closest of all — only one-tenth of a degree separating moon and bright star.

The moon will be full on June 8. On June 11, in the morning sky before sunup, Venus and Saturn will be less than a degree apart. This will be a close conjunction for two plants but its interest will be decreased for the casual observer because Venus will be so much brighter than Saturn. They will not be visible from the United States at the closest passage but will still be very close later when they can be seen.

On June 13 the moon passes 4 degrees north of Mars and starts its last-quarter phase on June 15.

On June 17 the moon is at the closest part of its orbit to the earth and on June 20 it passes 7 degrees north of Saturn in the early morning hours.

On June 21 Mercury is on the opposite side of the sun from us and, of course, can't be seen. This is called superior conjunction. New moon occurs on June 22 and the first-quarter phase begins on June 30. On July 4 the first-quarter moon will pass 6 degrees south of Jupiter.

Man Booked In Threat To Wife

A South San Francisco man spent part of his 27th birthday in Marin County Jail today on suspicion of threatening to shoot his estranged wife and her companion in San Anselmo.

Booked into jail for investigation of assault with a deadly weapon and released on his own recognizance to appear in Marin Municipal Court Monday was Jerry Lynn Scheffler.

According to San Anselmo police, Scheffler was waiting on the front steps of his wife's house at 19 Buena Vista Avenue when the woman, Carol E. Scheffler, 23, returned home at 1:28 a.m. with a companion, Joseph E. Dulin III, 26, of 1 Fairway Drive, Novato.

Police said Scheffler brandished a .22-caliber Ruger magnum and told the pair, "Get in the house, it's all over, I'm going to kill you."

Mrs. Scheffler began struggling with her husband, police said, and Dulin ran inside and attempted to call for help. Scheffler broke away from his wife, however, and forced Dulin to sit in a chair, where he threatened to kill him.

After another struggle between Scheffler and his wife, Dulin hit Scheffler with a chair and the gunmen fled out the front door.

Police said Scheffler called them from a service station on Red Hill Avenue at 1:53 a.m. and told them he wanted to surrender.

seven rockets Friday but escaped damage.

Also in the Central Highlands, troops of the 23rd Infantry Division reported they killed 50 guerrillas in a separate but related sweep of the major headquarters city of Pleiku. The troops reported two of their number were killed and 10 wounded, the command said.

North Vietnamese forces along the edge of the DMZ sent rocket barrages down on two U.S. units Friday night, wounding several American soldiers, the command reported. It was the third attack of the day along the six-mile-wide buffer separating North and South Vietnam.

Youth Booked In Break-In

A 15-year-old Santa Rosa youth was booked into Sonoma County Juvenile Hall today on suspicion of breaking into Bernard Eldredge School on Maria Drive in Petaluma.

Police said a regular officer and a reserve patrolman acting on a anonymous tip, went to the school at 2:20 a.m. and found Larry Steven Ball outside the office.

Police said they found an undetermined amount of change and a quantity of dangerous drugs in Ball's possession when they searched him. He was held on suspicion of burglary and possessing dangerous drugs.

Ball apparently broke an office window to gain entry, police said.

Stolen Vehicle Is Recovered

A 1970 Volkswagen sedan stolen in December from Budget Rent-A-Car, Third Street and Tamalpais Avenue, San Rafael, was recovered yesterday in San Anselmo.

Police said the vehicle was discovered in front of 22 Bell Avenue by an officer on routine patrol.

Driver Out Of Hospital

A 22-year-old San Rafael man was released from Ross General Hospital yesterday after being held for observation of a possible concussion following a single-car accident on southbound Highway 101.

David Musso of 1825 Lincoln Avenue was injured at 1:10 p.m. Thursday when a small foreign car driven by Sharyn G. Wong, 19, of 579 Cedarberry Lane, San Rafael, rolled over.

Miss Wong was treated at Marin General Hospital for a bruised thigh.

The California Highway Patrol could give no details of the accident.

FIRE

Street, half a block behind the blazing factory.

The firemen took to the air with their snorkle unit, pouring a flood of water into the building by reaching over high-voltage power lines in front of the blazing structure.

The adjoining Nor-Cal Pet Supply firm escaped with smoke and water damage.

Rickards, owner of the burned-out building, mourned today that he was "having the luck of the Irish — in reverse." He also was landlord for the Schwerin San Rafael Tire and Brake Co., at 666 Irwin Street, which was destroyed July 8 in a $150,000 fire that also destroyed a San Rafael fire engine.

Yesterday's fire was San Rafael's most costly one since the tire plant fire, except for the May 25 blaze that hit the unoccupied, 98-year-old courthouse. Cost of that blaze was still being calculated.

Sea Scouts In Mariner Regatta

San Rafael's Sea Scout Ship No. 20 placed in four events in the 19th Annual Ancient Mariner Regatta held Memorial Day weekend at the Coast Guard base in Alameda.

The crew placed first in heaving line, second in sailing, third in mariner's quiz and fourth in problems of naviagation, piloting, scouting and sailing.

Two members of the crew, Steven Hill of San Anselmo and Kenneth Smith of Tiburon recently won four out of five races in the Northern California Sea Scout sailing eliminations at Lake Merritt in Oakland.

OBITUARIES

Mary G. Weber Dies At 77

Mary G. Weber, 77, of 6 Warner Court, San Rafael, a lifelong resident of Marin County, died unexpectedly yesterday at her home.

She was born in Mill Valley and lived there most of her life. She was one of three remaining charter members of the Portuguese Lodge of Sausalito and had been a member for 50 years. She was the widow of William B. Weber.

Surviving are four daughters, Louise McDougall of San Diego, Margo Boje of San Rafael, Clara Henry of San Francisco and Ann Keller of Terra Linda; three brothers, Manuel Santos of Bolinas, and Tony and George Santos, both of Mill Valley; four sisters, Rose Leenbeck of Martinez, Virginia Jorgensen of San Francisco, Lucille Baumann of Vallejo and Josephine Paine of Los Angeles; eight grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

BLAST

Baggett Trucking Co. of Birmingham, was carrying 10,000 pounds of dynamite and 10,000 pounds of a low-grade explosive called "slurry" from Birmingham to a granite quarry in North Carolina.

Fire set off dynamite caps which ignited the explosives.

"It just blew down the onlookers," said Deputy Sheriff Gene Kirk. "And the biggest part of the truck I could find was a wheel."

The Volkswagen disintegrated and its driver, Talmadge L. Adams of Waco, was killed.

Also killed were a wrecker driver, Cleve Heath, of Bremen, and a Bremen fireman, David L. Smith. Other victims were Troy F. Allen and Doyal T. Bell, 31, both of Waco.

Cars were blown off the road like crumpled toys. Several nearby housed were demolished. Trees were snapped like broken toothpicks.

Fortunately, the shock at first only weakened the roof of the gymnasium, where a gospel sing was being held to raise funds for a needy family, and the 200 persons inside got out safely before it collapsed.

There was no accurate figure on the number of persons injured in the explosion. At least 32 persons were treated at Bremen General Hospital, largely for cuts and bruises. Some injured were taken to hospitals in the nearby towns of Villa Rica, Carrollton and Cedartown.

Two Proposals Get Novato Nod

The Novato Plan Review Committee has approved plans for North Marin Investors to construct a warehouse and retail sales building on the east side of Reichert Avenue between Sweetser Avenue and Scown Lane.

Committee members, meeting Wednesday, also approved plans by E. D. McGillicuddy for landscaping at a building to be occupied by United Rent-All adjacent to 6981 Redwood Highway.

An application for a 16-foot high freestanding sign for the Pizza Hut at De Long and Machin avenues was denied.

70 Strep Cases Are Reported In County

Seventy cases of streptococus infection were reported last week in Marin County, according to Dr. Carolyn B. Albrecht, county health officer.

Other diseases reported were 28 cases of gonorrhea, seven of infectious hepatitis, three each of rubella and syphillis and one of mumps.

Rosary will be recited at 8 p.m. Monday at Russell & Gooch in Mill Valley. Mass of Resurrection will be offered at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday at Our Lady of Mount Carmel Catholic Church in Mill Valley.

Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery, San Rafael.

ELMER McGUIRE

Requiem Mass for Elmer J. McGuire, retired drug firm executive, was to be offered today in St. Augustine's Catholic Church, Oakland.

McGuire, of Oakland, was the father of Rev. William McGuire, pastor of the Star of the Sea Parish in Sausalito.

He died Wednesday in an Oakland convalescent hospital after a long illness. He was 83.

A native of Kansas, he came to the Bay Area in 1927 as West Coast manager for E. R. Squibb and Sons. He held the post until he retired in 1956. He had resided in Oakland since 1933.

McGuire also is survived by two other sons, attorney James McGuire of Oakland and Dan McGuire of Honolulu, former public relations director of the 49ers football team; 14 grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

MRS. NALLEY

Nellie M. Nalley, an 18-year-resident of Fairfax, died yesterday at her home, 91 Porteus Avenue, after a long illness. She was 89.

Mrs. Nalley was born in Seattle, Wash. Her husband, Dr. Thomas J. Nalley, a physician who practiced in Mira Loma, Los Angeles County, died in 1953. Since that time Mrs. Nalley had lived in Fairfax with her sister, Matilda Ann Williams.

In addition to her sister, Mrs. Nalley is survived by two nieces, of Seattle, Wash.

Mass of the Resurrection will be at 9:30 a.m. Monday at Saint Rita's Church, Fairfax, with burial in Louisiana, Mo. Rosary will be recited at 8 p.m. Sunday at Keaton's Mortuary, San Rafael.

Reagan Hits Demos On Welfare Program

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Gov. Ronald Reagan said Friday he had paid every tax obligation in his lifetime but acknowledged that there were two years in which he did not pay a state income tax.

Reagan held his usual Sacramento news conference instead in Los Angeles and began by lambasting the Democratic legislative leadership for failing to come up with alternatives to his welfare reform program to reduce the budget.

Shortly after reading a prepared statement on that subject, the governor was asked about a newscast by a woman reporter for the Sacramento State College radio station that he did not pay a state income tax for two years since his first election in 1966.

Reagan had said previously he paid no state income tax for 1970 because of investment losses that year.

"I have paid every tax obligation I have ever had," he said. "I have issued a written statement previously and everything you need to know about my tax status is in that statement."

The newsman persisted, asking Reagan to give a "direct answer" to whether there was a second year in which he did not pay a second tax. Reagan looked irritated.

"I have given you a direct answer," the governor said. "There were two years in which I did not have a tax. I think you will find that in the statement. There is nothing more to say."

Reagan did not specify the second year in which he did not owe a state ncome tax.

The reports regarding Reagan's taxes had originated with Rosemary King, 29, who is also a part-time employe of the Democratic caucus in the state legislature. Miss King had declined to reveal the source of her information.

Most of the conference was devoted to questions about the state financial crisis and the governor's views of how it was to be met.

Reagan said it was "no secret" that further budgetary deficits in his administration's estimates would be made public next week. He said they were the result of failure to act on the welfare reform program and a decrease in revenue from state income taxes.

Reagan said Democratic leaders in the Legislature had not put forth an alternative program on welfare reform although one Democratic senator, Anthony Beilenson, had submitted individual proposals.

The governor said that Beilenson's program actually would cost $200 million more than the administration's plan, that it had no provision to put welfare recipients to work and provided no control over the growth of welfare rolls."

Reagan said property taxes in the state had reached the point where it is becoming uneconomic to own private property in California and said home owners had to have relief.

The governor indicated that it was almost inevitable that a state income tax withholding program be put into effect but he said it would not be the "gimmick of a one year windfall" but that revenues would increase through more efficient collections.

Reagan declined to say whether he would veto a proposal for a straight increase in income taxes.

The governor charged that Democrats were pushing for a tax increase to conceal "gigantic increases" in spending.

Church Announces Summer Schedule

Redwood Presbyterian Church in Larkspur will begin its summer schedule Sunday, June 13, with one service at 9:30 a.m. with church school at the same time.

Also the church will begin Thursday evening services (8 p.m.) on June 17.

Jury Awards $71,000 For Crash Injuries

A jury in Marin Superior Court Judge Samuel W. Gardiner's court has awarded $71,000 damages to Mrs. Merle Osborne McDill, 58, of Greenbrae, who was injured in a traffic accident Oct. 3, 1967.

Mrs. McDill — then a Marin County social worker — suffered facial injuries and a broken thigh that hospitalized her for five months, according to her attorney, Ronald Rouda.

She was making a left turn from Sir Francis Drake Boulevard to the northbound Highway 101 onramp when her car was struck by an auto driven by Frederick Lau, 24, of El Cerrito, employed by the Consumers' Co-op. Lau was westbound on Drake.

The jury reached its verdict Thursday after a seven-day trial.

Richardson Bay District Board Asks $46,000

Directors of the Richardson Bay District board have asked for $46,000 in compensation from the City of Mill Valley for sewer equipment the district will lose in an annexation proceeding.

The Marin Local Agency Formation Commission has given the city permission to absorb about 60 acres near Sabella's Restaurant which had been under Richardson Bay jurisdiction.

In a letter to the LAFC that was approved Thursday night, according to district director George B. Szabo, the board also asked that the city not be allowed to take over sewer service in the area until it is ready to begin operation.

Cost Sharing Asked For Summer School

If Mill Valley children wish to attend summer school classes in Sausalito, the Mill Valley School District must pay $2,000 toward the cost of the program, the Sausalito District board has decided.

The board voted on Wednesday to ask Mill Valley for approximately half the district's costs for the four-week session, which will total about $4,000, Supt. Lawrence A. Lindberg reported.

Mill Valley Supt. James A. Collins said he would present the Sausalito district's proposal to the Mill Valley board at its Monday meeting.

The two-part summer school program, which includes Title One remedial math and reading classes and regular classes, will begin June 14 at Manzanita and Bayside schools, the superintendent said. Classes will be held weekdays from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

The Sausalito board also hired six teachers for the Title One portion of the program, which is financed by the federal government. The teachers, who will each receive a $750 salary, include: Virginia Edwards, Frances Evergettis, Eleanor Spells, Armando Flores, Deborah Brill and Charlotte James. Six education aides — Jackie Harris, Evelyn Magee, Georgia Payton, Ruby Myles, Rachel Hinton and Marjorie Blakemore — were also employed.

Trustees authorized the superintendent to spend $1,000 to hire a principal for the summer program and asked him to employ seven teachers for the regular classes, each at $750.

Courses offered in the program include math laboratory, mathematics enrichment, reading laboratory, literature enrichment, creative writing, nature study, physical education, study skills, arts and crafts, dramatics, public speaking, ethnic studies, ecology, typing, instrumental music, carpentry, home economics, aquatic life and music and rhythm.

After meeting in closed session for about one hour, the board voted to dismiss educational aide Donald Morgan because of excessive unexcused absences.

Ladybug Pre-School To Start June 21

The Ladybug Pre-School of Kentfield has announced a summer program for children 2½ to 8, starting June 21.

The program will include outdoor activities, physical fitness, arts and crafts and field trips.

Poll Shows Trust Wanes In Reagan

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)--The public official least trusted by the California public to tell the truth and the whole truth is Gov. Ronald Reagan, the Field Poll said yesterday. President Nixon was a close runner-up for the dubious honor.

The poll, which posed four questions to interviewees, found 59 per cent believe either Reagan "sometimes doesn't tell everything" or is "often untruthful."

Thirty-eight per cent answered either that he was "completely open and truthful" or "truthful considering his responsibilities."

For Nixon the percentage of doubters was 58 per cent and of trusters 41 per cent. This wasn't much different than the figures for former President Johnson, 58 and 39 per cent, but a reverse of those for former President Eisenhower, 32 and 57 per cent.

Both Sens. Alan Cranston and John Tunney inspired more trust than doubt. Cranston polled 40 and 31 per cent, and Tunney 44 and 30.

Local newspaper editors enjoyed substantially less credibility than network television commentators. The editors were trusted by 37 per cent and were under suspicion by 47 per cent.

For the commentators trusters were 52 per cent and doubters 40 per cent, with the rest undecided.

In the same order, figures for local mayors were 33 and 35 per cent, and for local police chiefs 44 and 23 per cent.

British Couple Feted In Marin

By MOLLY MARIN

A reception was hosted Thursday afternoon for British exchange teacher Roger C. Hartley and his wife, Eireen, by Dr. Amity Buxton at her home in Mill Valley.

Guests included staff members from the Active Learning Center in San Francisco, where Dr. Buxton serves as director and Mr. Hartley has been a consultant during his one-year stay in the United States.

The Hartleys have been living at the Victor Dobyns' residence in San Rafael while the Dobyns family is staying in the Hartleys' home in England. Mr. Dobyns has taken Mr. Hartley's teaching position at Whaley Bridge School. Until last month the English teacher was an instructor at Tamalpais Valley School in Mill Valley, but an eye injury has curtailed his teaching activities.

The Hartleys will return to England in July.

THE 63RD wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Walter A. Sheffauer of San Francisco will be celebrated at a cocktail and dinner party tomorrow, hosted at their home by their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Manion of Greenbrae.

The guests, mostly immediate family members, will include Messrs. and Mmes. Robert S. Manion of Lafayette, Bruce Angell of Corte Madera, L. B. Groezinger of San Francisco, W. P. Watrous of Ross, B. Am Hansec of Menlo Park, E. W. Hansen of Redwood City, Capt. and Mrs. Raymond Zanzot of Greenbrae, Messrs. George Hansen of San Francisco, Rory Koster and L. B. Groezinger Jr. of Sacramanto. Also attending will be the couple's great granddaughter, Kelly Angell of Corte Madera.

The couple are active on the board of directors of the University Mound Home in San Francisco and Mr. Sheffauer is also active in the Islam Shrine Luncheon Club, Occidental Lodge of Masons and the Sons in Retirement.

MRS. ANTHONY Gullota of Novato was honored last Saturday at a surprise birthday party given by her sons in San Francisco. Joseph Gullota and his wife flew in from Boston to attend the party. The other sons, Richard and Daniel Gullota, live in Novato. Also at the party were the honored guest's husband and their daughter, Barbara, and other family members.

MAKING THEIR home in San Rafael are newlyweds Mr. and Mrs. John Martin Pulliam, who were married May 23 at West Portal Lutharan Church in San Francisco. The bride is the former Deborah Carole Jones of San Rafael, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack H. Jones, also of San Rafael. The couple are home from their wedding trip to Yosemite and Southern California. The bridegroom's relatives came from London, England, to attend the wedding.

John is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Pulliam of Mill Valley.

L. W. Cunha, Vicki Graff Wed At Peacock Gap Club

Laraine Vicki Graff of Greenbrae and Lawrence William Cunha were married Sunday at Peacock Gap Country Club. A reception followed at the club and the couple left on a wedding trip to Carmel and Disneyland. They will live in Larkspur.

The bride, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ruben Graff of Greenbrae, chose Sharon Fillpelli as her maid of honor and Mrs. Robert Sciaroni of Kentfield and Mrs. Jeffrey Graff of Daly City as her bridesmaids.

Richard Adams of San Mateo was best man for the bridegroom. The bride's brother, Jeffrey Graff of Daly City, and Gary Goldberg, also of Daly City, seated the guests.

The bride is a Redwood High School and College of Marin graduate.

Her husband is a graduate of Tamalpais High School and Golden Gate College of San Francisco and is employed by Sleezer and Eckhoff in San Rafael.

Square Dance Club Elects New Slate

New officers of the Buzzin' Boots Square Dance Club are Bob Sempell, president; Betty Conkling, vice president; Dolores Southwick, secretary; Tosca Maffia, treasurer; and Lorraine and Warren Brentlinger, membership chairmen.

Nixon To Take To Dance Floor During Reception

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Unlike his predecessor, Lyndon B. Johnson, President Nixon never has danced at White House social functions.

But that will change with his daughter's wedding next week.

The President will dance with the bride at Tricia's wedding reception on Saturday afternoon, June 12, in the East Room, after the newlyweds dance the first dance. Tricia and her fiance Edward Finch Cox spent Memorial Day weekend at the White House making marriage plans. Cox, 24, a Harvard law student, went back to Cambridge, Mass., Monday night for a big final exam

Play It Cool With Portable Coolers

NEW YORK (UPI)—Play it cool with portable picnic coolers, the National Bureau of Standards (NBS), U.S. Department of Commerce, suggests.

In a recent voluntary product standard which was distributed to industry, the NBS recommended including safety feature in portable coolers that will allow the lock to be opened from the inside. If followed, these requirements would help insure that children, who accidently became trapped in the coolers, could release themselves.

First Class Badges To Scout Trio

Three Cadettes of Troop 1925 of Larkspur-Corte Madera have been awarded the first class badge, the highest rank in Girl Scouts.

Winners of the badge are Cari Ann Urban, Janet Smith and Victoria Vance.

Cari, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Urban, is an eight year member of Girl Scouts and she is a freshman at Marin Catholic High School. Her interests include cycling, swimming, training her dog and playing on the high school volleyball team.

Janet has also been a Girl Scout for eight years. The daughter of Mrs. Jacqueline Smith, Janet attends Redwood High School. She enjoys swimming, sewing and camping.

Victoria is the daughter of

Mr. and Mrs. Manuel Vance and won her first class badge in two years of Girl Scouting. She enjoys cycling, hiking, swimming and sewing.

The girls' special project was assisting a new troop at Cedars Development Foundation in Ross, which they will continue as members of Senior Troop 1566.

A Test Shows The Criminal Side Of Women

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Two students at the University of Baltimore say a test they conducted recently indicated women tended to be more criminal than men.

Ben Frazier and Walter Fliecher prepared 615 small gift packages, then asked Baltimore-area taxi drivers to deposit them in the back seats of their cabs.

Records kept by the drivers showed 211 women lifted packages, while only 124 men did so. Packages were returned to the drivers by 155 women and 125 men, the study showed.

The students said the 335 thieves found inside the nicely wrapped packages the message "crime does not pay."

FLOWER CRAFTS using weeds and seeds will be featured at the meeting of the weeders and seeders group of the Novato Newcomer's Club at noon Monday at the home of Mrs. Carl Kuhn in Novato.

Mrs. R. H. Jackson will discuss gathering weeds and seed pods to arrange in unusual containers. Mrs. Neil Kluge will discuss using pressed flowers for stationery or pictures. Judging of the annual seedling contest will also be held.

Mrs. Allen Dahl and Mrs. Kuhn are reservations chairmen.

A "FUN Day" is planned by the Novato Garden Club members to begin at noon Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Fielder A. Nordstrom in Novato.

A potluck luncheon will be followed by a tour of the garden and swimming.

Arenz Takes Bride In Sierra City

A fireside ceremony Saturday afternoon at Sardine Lake Lodge in Sierra City united in marriage Juhli Paterson of Fairfax and Alfred M. Arenz Jr. of Greenbrae. A reception at the lodge followed.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. George B. McClellan of San Francisco. Mr. and Mrs. Alfred M. Arenz of Greenbrae are the bridegroom's parents.

Mrs. Thomas Pischel of Ross was matron of honor, and George Browning of Sierra City was best man.

Juhli is a graduate of Redwood High School and is employed by Lombard Pet Hospital.

A graduate of Tamalpais High School, Alfred attended College of Marin and is the owner of Horseman's Service in Fairfax. He is in the National Guard Reserve and also a member of the Marin County Mounted Sheriff's Posse.

Following a wedding trip in the Sierra the couple will live in Fairfax.

Society To Mark 50th Anniversary

The Dorcas Society of the Fairfax Community Church will celebrate its 50th anniversary with events tomorrow and Tuesday.

Members of the society will be honored at a coffee hour at noon tomorrow at the church, immediately after the regular church service.

On Tuesday a luncheon will be given at the church for all society members, their family and friends. The two remaining charter members of the Dorcas Society, Mmes. Jennie Benson and Nettie Adams, will be honored at both events.

THE DORCAS Society of the church was formed May 11, 1920, with 14 charter members, after Mrs. P. M. Paulson had recognized a need for a Protestant church in Fairfax. It waited until this year, when the church had a regular minister, to celebrate its 50th anniversary.

The club through the years, aside from founding the Community Church, has continued not only to support the church but also to organize community projects. The members began the first library in Fairfax, the first mothers' club in the schools, the first Fairfax Boy Scout troop and the first movies shown there, co-sponsored by the Dorcas Society and St. Rita's Church parish.

THE GROUP through the years has sent boxes of clothes to migrant farm workers and Christmas gifts to the elderly at the Lucas Valley Farm. It has also supported the education of a girl in India.

Mrs. Thomas Humphrey is the society's present chairman, assisted by Mrs. Louis Dallara, secretary; and Mrs. Charles Campbell, who has been its treasurer since 1935.

Changing Of Women On TV Shows

The changing place of women in the American social order as expressed in song will be the subject of "Sing Me a Woman" on "Camera Three" Sunday at 10 a.m. on the CBS television network, Channel 5.

Appearing on the broadcast will be well-known folk singers Oscar Brand and Jean Ritchie, as well as a young newcomer, Cecilia Kirtland. They will examine American womanhood, with musical tributes to pioneering women, laments on finding a husband, women who have taken men's jobs, women in the vanguard of prohibition and songs about women's liberation.

The music will be supplemented by photographs illustrating the changes from a "proper place" for women to today's struggle for liberation.

"Camera Three" is produced by WCBS-TV, New York, in cooperation with the New York State Board of Education.

Asian-Bound Student Will Be Honored

The Marin City Homeowners Improvement Association will sponsor a benefit tea Sunday, June 27, to help defray expenses for a 17-year-old Marin City girl who will study in Asia two months this summer.

Association secretary Flossie Berry said the tea will be held from 3 to 5 p.m. in St. Andrew Presbyterian Church, Marin City.

Maya Howell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Perry Howell, 34 Buckelew Avenue, and a senior at Sir Francis Drake High School, will travel to Hong Kong and Japan as part of a study program sponsored by the Presbyterian church.

Airline In Bid To Attract Women

A major international airline having financial troubles has decided to try an appeal to women passengers, according to Women's Wear Daily.

Designating June as "Ladies Month" the airline will have in-flight fashion shows, a sweepstakes quiz about women in American history and a "ladies first" cocktail on selected 747 trips between Chicago and Los Angeles.

Stewardesses will model.

If your rug has no pad, or if the foam rubber backing has started to crumble, buy a new cushion and you will get more wear from the carpet and a new spring underfoot.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

Driving Rights A Poor Club To Assist. Teen's Studies

DEAR HELEN:

I am 16, and recently got my driver's license. I'm a good driver, and understand that if I was ever caught fooling around, my parents would get my license suspended. This I don't mind.

But I'm gettng a failure in French. I try, but I just can't understand the stuff, though I pull good grades usually.

My father says for this I can't drive all summer, and if I flunk French next year, my license will be revoked until I'm 18.

I have a part-time job and pay for my own insurance. It will be tough getting to work, and I'll never get out evenings.

Don't suggest we have a talk with my teacher, as this has been tried. I just can't hack a foreign language.

I talked with Dad and he says unless I can come up with a better punishment, the no-license thing stands. Please help.

DEPRESSED GUY

DEAR DEPRESSED:

No amount of punishment could made me understand French in college but special tutoring got me through by the skin of my teeth.

I hope your father stops swinging that driver's license like a club, and aims you toward summer school, private lessons, or best of all, a switch to Spanish (which even I could "hack"). H.

DEAR HELEN:

At 18, I can't understand what adults are trying to do to this society. Now, in our state, they want to legalize prostitution and gambling.

They say it will help bring us out of the red, and will lower taxes. As soon as people hear they'll save money, their moral values change. They make all kinds of noises about how gambling and prostitution are here anyway so we might as well make it legal so we can control it, but all they really mean is, "Oh boy, maybe our taxes will drop!"

Isn't it sad that when it comes to a choice between morals and money, money wins?—W.T.

DEAR W.:

Living next door to Nevada, I don't quite agree with you about the evils of legalized gambling. It keeps that state solvent, and crime isn't as rampant there as it is in some of our cities where underground rackets flourish. Nor is poverty a big problem in Nevada (which also has legalized prostitution, by the way.) — H.

P. S. At any rate, I'd settle for a State lottery.

DEAR HELEN:

I got kind of involved with an older woman. I didn't know she was 30, me being 17. Now I've found a girl my own age that I like better, but this woman is making threats.

She says she will go to my parents and tell them about me, which includes a few drug scenes too. I've stopped all that and am going straight. How can I make her let go? — LEARNED BECAUSE I WAS BURNED:

DEAR LBIWB:

The woman is bluffing: She won't chance a "contributing to the delinquency of a minor" charge. Tell her if she doesn't ring off, your parents might make it tough for her. — H.

'FATHER OF YEAR' — The National Father's Day Committee in Spokane, Wash., has named a woman as its "Father of the Year" — Mrs. John Bruce Dodd, 89. Mrs. Dodd was the founder of Father's Day 61 years ago, and she is being honored as the "mother of Father's Day."

Labor Count Finds Women Like Working

If you are a married woman over 45 and thinking of taking a plunge into the job market, bear in mind that you won't be an odd duck in the employment pool.

The last time the Department of Labor took a count, almost half of all married women aged 45 to 54 were working or actively looking; at the ages of 55 to 64, over a third were employed.

Every year, mature people re-enter the labor force or join it for the first time, reports the Institute of Life Insurance. Many are wives who make the decision after their family responsibilities lessen, their children are grown up, or a need for an extra income arises.

Some women seek to continue a career interrupted by marriage and family, or, perhaps want to start one. Or they may want a job that will make them feel more committed and useful. To many, the satisfaction of a job coupled with their own earnings, as well as such on-the-job pluses as group life insurance and health insurance benefits for her family are a heady experience.

Are Husbands At Fault On Plumpness

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI)— The husband who needles his wife for being fat may be the main reason she became, and stayed that way, reports Prof. Richard B. Stuart of the University of Michigan School of Social Work.

The co-author of a forthcoming book on "Behavioral Control of Overeating," has found that some men want to maintain their wives' extra poundage as a "personal one-upmanship." Others believe it keeps the women from being promiscuous, and some think plumpness is attractive.

SEW SIMPLE

Sketches Can Aid Imagination

By EUNICE FARMER

DEAR EUNICE,

I guess my problem is no imagination. I wish you would give us some ideas for using small scraps of fabric that always seem to be left over or else taking advantage of remnants. My budget is very limited, and I love pretty clothes but must get the most possible from my money.

NANCY T.

DEAR NANCY,

I hope from the sketches I have shown that you will have a better idea of what to look for when you are making a garment from small pieces of fabric. You can combine three colors in most of these sketches. You could also combine patterned fabric with solids. Very often you will have a more attractive garment when playing around with the small bits and pieces than if you started out with unlimited yardage. You may also outline some of your joined seams with braids, rick rack or woven ribbons. If you come up with something unusual, please share it with all of us. I would love to hear about your individual ideas.

MRS. B. F. Nicholls of Coronado is this week's Tailor Trix winner for her sewing suggestion.

"I overheard an alterations expert confide her system for lengthening knits, and I found it works like a charm.

"Take a straight strip of double knit, as close to the color and weave of your dress as possible, hems are usually 2½ to 3 inches wide. Lay the strip along the cut edge of the dress, right sides together. Both fabrics should butt together, not overlap, be sure the fabric edges are nice and smooth. Machine overcast the two edges together. When completed, turn hem to inside just above the joining.

"You'll find there is no extra thickness at the joined edge that usually appears when pressed and the hem will have the same stretchiness as if it were in one piece. The overcasting stitches are almost invisible, even with a curved hem, the straight strip just shrinks in with no difficulty. No one is the wiser.

DEAR EUNICE,

Some of the peasant dresses for my daughter have elastic thread placed in rows to shirr the waistline and sleeves in to fit the body. I have never had any luck with this kind of elastic — hope you can help.

MRS. N. M.

DEAR MRS. N. M.,

Most instructions tell you to place the elastic thread in the bobbin, I have never found this too successful. Finally, we experimented by using the elastic thread as an extra. By this I mean, hold it carefully on the wrong side of your fabric, just in front of the presser foot and carefully zig-zag over the elastic; be sure not to catch the elastic in the stitching.

Depending on the amount of shirring desired for fitting, you would have to measure the elastic thread first, making it at least 4 to 5 inches shorter than the actual fabric. Stretch it to lay smooth on your fabric, as you overcast it, your fabric will gather evenly. Both ends must be secured to avoid pulling out. Don't depend on the seamline to take care of this completely.

You may use as many rows of elastic as you wish, proceed the same. Try it my way and let me know how it works.

MOVING TO TEXAS

Cancer Battle Uproots Family

By JEFF GREER

A San Rafael family is preparing to uproot itself to go to Texas in a two-pronged war against cancer.

Dr Richard W Wolk of 108 Coleman Drive has accepted a trainee opening at the M.D Anderson Hospital in Houston, Tex The hospital is regarded as one of the nation's leading anticancer centers, Wolk explained.

And there, the Wolks hope, 10-year-old son Brian will receive the latest treatments for the leukemia he has battled since February 1969.

Brian and his little sisters, Abby and Amy, have braced themselves to leave the only hometown they've ever known, and all their friends.

The Wolks have leased their comfortable hillside home, planning to leave before the end of the month. The doctor has given up the three-year trainee post in cancer treatment that he took at Mount Zion Medical Center in San Francisco only a year ago.

He earlier had given up a thriving general practice built up during 10 years in San Rafael to go into cancer medicine after Brian was found to have the deadly illness.

The Texas trek almost was a case of the family burning its bridges behind itself. The Houston hospital's offer originally was based on the availability of federal cancer training funds expected to be released almost any day. But after Wolk gave up his post at Mount Zion — it was quickly filled — and leased out the home, the Texas institution reported it still had not received federal funding for his position.

This, despite Nixon's declaration of a "war against cancer" in two speeches earlier this year and Congressional approval of $100 million for the war.

But Wolk reported the Texas sun came out on the gloomy scene Thursday. The hospital told him it had found private resources to finance the training staff position.

Wolk's wife, Pat, and their youngsters, who had been unable during the doubtful days to regard the move to Texas as "much of an adventure," are much happier about the journey now, Wolk reported yesterday.

Wolk had been determined to go to Texas, even if he had to wrestle with red tape to obtain a license for private practice there until federal funds eventually came through.

Young Brian has been told he has the deadly illness, but doesn't let it interfere any more than necessary with his attention to boyhood pursuits in and around the rambling, ranch-style home.

His illness had hampered his schooling earlier, but tests in February showed he could undergo intensive new treatments for the leukemia.

After the treatments, his parents were guardedly elated over his memory improvement and restored physical vigor.

All the youngsters played about the fringes of the home's patio the other day, while their parents discussed the impending move. Five-year-old Amy, tall and unusually well coordinated for her age, broke in on the talk periodically to remind the parents they had promised to take the girls shopping for sandals, and to point out the antics of a tiny, truculent spider.

Brian concentrated on play with a neighborhood friend. The slender, dark-haired youngster seemed uninterested in hearing about the journey ahead.

Wolk shouldered the bulk of conversation about the uprooting. His wife, Pat, a redheaded daughter of a large Irish family, only chimed in to help supply some of the details about the bureaucratic difficulties that had complicated their lives.

Wolk, lean and dark, tried to keep a pipe alight as he talked about his hopes of being able to work in the Texas hospital that is pioneering treatments against the child-killer leukemia.

Wolk and his wife have spread their anticancer efforts far outside the family. They helped found the Candlelighters, a group of parents whose children are suffering from leukemia. Wolk, as their spokesman has lobbied in Washington and elsewhere to offset earlier threats to cut cancer research funds.

A similar group of 150 families has formed in Washington, D.C., and the Bay Area Candlelighters now have a parallel group in Southern California, Wolk said.

Wolk had some reservations about the happy solution of problems that he said last week "sounded like a soap opera."

He warned that continued pressure on Washington is needed to "gear up the cancer war" that has invaded the lives of thousands of families in the United States.

Holding back on the anticancer funds, for whatever reason, "doesn't seem right," the doctor declared. "It's no way to gear up for battle — to block the training programs."

GROUNDBREAKING, GIANT ECONOMY SIZE

Heavy equipment gouges a two-acre excavation at Northgate Mall in preparation for a 200,000-square-foot, two-story building planned for a major Sears Roebuck and Co. department store. The building, Sears' first retail outlet in Marin, is to be opened for business in 1972. It is to be joined by three smaller Sears buildings in the 15-acre westerly portion of the shopping center, previously undeveloped. In celebration of the groundbreaking, Sears sponsored "a Ball on the Mall" last night, featuring the Terra Linda High School band and a dance orchestra.

Old Adobe School Employees Get Hikes

The Old Adobe School District board, Petaluma, has approved a 7 per cent cost-of-living increase for all employees.

Schools Supt. Dean D. Magowan said the increase, granted Thursday, would go into effect at the start of the 1971-72 school year for both certificated and classified employees, although the teachers had not requested an increase.

Magowan said the raises were based on a 5 per cent cost of living increase the past year and an additional 2 per cent was added so that purchasing power would be increased to meet the rise in living costs expected to come next year.

He said no estimate has been made on costs of the salary increases to the district. Magowan said the base pay for teachers will be increased from $6,400 to $7,168 while top pay will rise from $12,800 to $14,336.

The Old Adobe School District board also:

SCHEDULES — Approved class assignments and schedules for next fall that will put grades one through four on double sessions at La Tercera School until the opening of the new Miwok Valley School. Magowan said it is not expected that double sessions will be greatly necessary at other schools unless enrollment increases significantly.

SCIENCE — Agreed to permit Sonoma State College to use La Tercera School for a workshop for science teachers next year.

SUMMER — Heard Magowan report that 500 students have registered for summer classes, an increase of 200 over last year.

FILM — Saw a motion picture produced by fifth grade students in a creative writing class.

LUNCHES — Agreed to continue the hot lunch program in all four district schools next year.

Flood Control Budget Is Cut

Advisory board members for San Rafael Meadows Flood Control Zone No. 6 have drastically pared the zone's budget in a special meeting.

Although they had earlier approved three projects for a total of $25,000 that would have meant a tax rate of $1 per $100 assessed valuation, the board members on Thursday eliminated two projects to hold the tax rate to the present 29.5 cents, according to Charles E. Murphy, flood control engineer.

The only one still planned for fiscal 1971-72 is a 30-inch drainage pipe to be installed from Del Prado Avenue to the main drainage ditch at an estimated cost of $4,200, Murphy said.

Pleads Innocent To Stolen Property Count

Dennis J. Hachmyer, 23, of Novato, has pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court to a charge of receiving stolen property. A preliminary hearing was set for June 15.

Hachmyer was arrested by Novato police last week, but officers have withheld details of the case pending further investigation which they said probably would result in more arrests.

Two Presidents 'To Lead' Cal

BERKELEY (UPI) —For the first time in campus history, the University of California at Berkeley will have two students acting as student body president.

Larry Seidman, an economics student, and Alan T. Fong, student of Asian studies, will share the presidency of the Associated Students next year.

They are both graduate students elected on an activist, nonviolent platform.

In the past, students have shared the vice presidency, but this will be the first time the top student post has been shared.

Pleads Innocent To Prison Escape

San Quentin Prison inmate Charles E. Lennon, 28, has pleaded innocent to a charge of escape from the prison Feb. 28.

Superior Court Judge E. Warren McGuire set trial for the week of July 19.

Lennon was indicted by the Marin County Grand Jury on May 11 for fleeing over a prison roof, using a homemade grappling hook and rope. He was captured near the Sears service center on Highway 17 shortly after making his escape.

Lennon is a convicted rapist-kidnapper from Los Angeles County, prison officials said.

Inverness Ridge retreat, one acre plus, among the pines with a full panoramic view over Limantour Spit, Drakes Bay, Point Reyes headlands, Farallon Isalnds and the whole Pacific, and that's just one view from the southwest side of the house. Looking the other way, you're looking right down on the National Seashore headquarters, Bear Valley Road and the old town of Olema with a glimpse on clear days of San Francisco. You can enjoy all this while living in a well-built, 2 bedroom, 1 bath home, all rooms generous in size with living room, dining room extra large. Large, attached double garage. Lots of fruit trees and pine trees with most of the acre almost level. There are very few locations along the Inverness Ridge that command the vista of this home. Well-priced for only $42,500.

Inverness mesa 3-story chalet set high among the Bishop pines with beautiful wood paneling throughout, open-beam ceilings, generous decks. This older home nearly completely remodeled recently, taking full advantage of all the charm of the unique older Inverness cabins. First floor, 1 bedroom; second floor, large living room plus 2 bedrooms, bath and kitchen with beautiful sundecks; third floor, private outside entrance, quite lovely attic loft sleeping room. Gets lots of sun all day. $31,500. Shown by appointment only.

Spectacular, large, 3 bedroom, 2 bath home with fully equipped kitchen, dishwasher, garbage disposal, etc. Located on one acre which runs from Portola Road, Inverness, through to Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, overlooking thousands of acres of pasture on the valley floor and to Black Mountain. The house has a unique setting among a large grove of beautiful mature trees. The basement could be developed into many more rooms very easily. An outstanding buy for only $36,500.

WE ARE NOT KIDDING!

Besides your best place to buy your used parts, we are your best place to buy your used car

BECAUSE..

1-We have the spare parts to back up our mutually agreed upon warranty.
2-We know the weak parts of most makes & models of cars-after all that's our business!
3-We have an educated guess as to the degree of success you will have with any car you purchase from us.
4-We offer terms if your credit is good.
5-We are anxious to increase our numbers of satisfied customers.

Arraignment In Drug Case

Irene Louise Bradley, 19, of 865 Las Gallinas Avenue, San Rafael, was arraigned yesterday in Marin Municipal Court on charges of selling and possessing heroin.

She was arrested at her apartment Thursday by a drug agent who said that she had sold him a balloon containing a small quantity of heroin on May 28. He also said that she had agreed to sell him an ounce of the narcotic later.

She was held in jail in lieu of $3,500 bail and her case was continued to Monday for entry of plea.

Prophylactics Bill Advances

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — A bill permitting pharmacists to advertise and display prophylactics has been approved by the Senate Business and Professions Committee and sent to the upper house floor.

The bill, SB 650 by Sen. Peter H. Behr, R-San Rafael, cleared the committee on a 8-1 vote. The only "no" vote was by Sen. George Deukmejian, R-Long Beach.

Present laws restrict the display and advertising of prophylactics, a restriction Behr said made "little sense when the incidence of venereal disease in California has reached epidemic proportions."

Skyjacker Talked Out Of Flight

WASHINGTON (UPI) —A retired West Virginia coal miner, suffering from black lung disease, was arraigned early today on charges of air piracy for the hijacking of a United Air Lines 737 that he wanted flown to Israel.

The short-haul, two-jet plane was bound from Charleston, W. Va., to Newark last night when a man, identified as Glenn Elmo Riggs, 59, forced it to land at Dulles International Airport in suburban Virginia and then demanded a bigger plane to take him to Tel Aviv.

After his arrest, Riggs was asked why he wanted to go to Israel, and replied, "You know about as much as I do."

Riggs admitted he had been drinking heavily yesterday and didn't "even know how I got on the plane."

The 66 passengers and crew aboard the plane that was commandeered for three hours were apparently as confused as Riggs. The hijacker was described, at one point, as being "foreign looking."

U.S. Magistrate A. Stanley King, in a rare post-midnight session, ordered Riggs held without bond in the Alexandria, Va., city jail until his preliminary hearing June 11. Riggs was handcuffed and led away with a chain around his waist.

Air piracy is a capital offiense.

The hijacking came exactly one year after a former bakery truck driver from Phoenix, Ariz., angered over the Supreme Court's refusal to bear his complaint that the Internal Revenue Service overcharged him $471 on his taxes, hijacked a TWA plane.

That hijack ended when FBI agents shot out the tires of the plane after it landed at Dulles. The agents and the crew overcame the suspect, Arthur G. Barkley, whose case is now before a U.S. district court.

In yesterday's hijacking, the suspect allegedly placed a .32-caliber revolver at the head of the plane's second officer, Gregory D. Colliton, 30, Spokane, Wash.

Colliton said Riggs "cocked that gun 50 or 60 times." He described Riggs as "almost out of contact with reality, it appeared. His eyes seemed to glaze."

Riggs said he had to leave the United States because "a bomb was going to come to America."

219 To Graduate At Miller Creek

A total of 219 eighth grade students will graduate from Mill Creek School in the Dixie School District at 6:30 p.m. Thursday at the school.

Robert Elkjer, student speaker, will talk on "Change in Opportunities for Youth Today." Lori Richards, vice president of the student council, will talk on "We Have Our Freedom."

The graduation message will be given by William A. Cheney, principal.

Home room representatives, assisted by the principal and James W. Heidinger, vice principal, will award diplomas.

Rejects Role

HEIDELBERG, Germany (UPI)—Adolf Hitler's minister of armaments and war productions, Albert Speer, has turned down a panelist's role in a television discussion of alleged U.S. war crimes in Vietnam.

AT SONOMA STATE — Sen. Mervyn Dymally, D-Los Angeles, calling for peaceful coexistence in America, addresses Sonoma State graduates, while a senior attired in a football shirt stands to acknowledge a calling of the graduates. Unlike last year's graduation, however, bizarre garb was at a minimum at yesterday's commencement.

dent Thomas H. McGrath and seniors Dorothe T. Cameron and Joseph A. Jeremy.

Caps and gowns were in abundance, contrasting with the 1970 ceremony in which many graduates wore garish costumes.

Graduates from Marin and Southern Sonoma were:

BACHELOR OF ARTS DEGREE

Belvedere — Paul M. Joses, philosophy.

Corte Madera — James T. Crosby, art studio; Mary L. Killeen, geography; Linda J. Larson, psychology; Candice C. Soderstrom, anthropology.

Sanctuary Fund Drive Scheduled

A fund drive to replace the aged, stone-block sanctuary of the First Presbyterian Church of San Rafael is expected to begin officially tomorrow.

Church officials announced 130 stewards will be commissioned at worship services to seek pledges from members and friends of the congregation.

The three-year goal is $200,000, or about half the cost of constructing a new sanctuary and a chapel-lounge. Total cost is expected to run about $410,000.

The decision to raze the present sanctuary was a controversial one. A dissident group of congregation members challenged the move, saying there was evidence the sanctuary could be saved through means of building a new interior wall, but the church's ruling body was unswayed.

The sanctuary, closed since last year, has been deemed unsafe under earthquake standards.

Angela Davis Offered Job At Nairobi College

EAST PALO ALTO (UPI)— Angela Davis, held on charges stemming from the Marin County courthouse shoot-out last year, has been offered a teaching job at Nairobi College.

Nairobi President Don Smothers said Friday that his offer to Miss Davis, held in the Marin County Jail at San Rafael, was made last week but he has not received an answer.

Miss Davis, an admitted Communist and former UCLA philosphhy instructor who studied under controversial Marxist teacher Herbert Marcuse at the University of California in San Diego, is accused of being involved in the plot which ended with the shoot-out in which a judge was killed.

Smothers said Miss Davis could have the job once released on bail. The bail issue is expected to be decided next week in Marin County Superior Court.

Joint Workshop Is Set Monday Night

The Marin County Housing Authority will hold a joint workshop meeting with the Marin Redevelopment Agency at 8 a.m. Monday in the senior citizens project at 5 Golden Hinde Boulevard, San Rafael, according to Executive Director Wallace K. Shepherd.

The special session was set to prepare for the two agencies' scheduled meeting with the county board of supervisors Tuesday morning to discuss redevelopment in Marin City and general county housing needs.

Toliver's Counsel Levels Charges

Sausalito School District officials want to abolish the post held by special assistant James T. Toliver Jr. because he is a controversial person and because he is black, Toliver's attorney declared yesterday.

Attorney A. Leonard Bjorklund charged that the decision to drop Toliver's $14,773-per-year post is illegal because it was made by a three-man personel committee behind closed doors and not by the district board of trustees. Bjorklund argued the case before George R. Coan, hearing officer from the California Department of Administrative Procedure, at the Marin Civic Center.

Dist. Supt. Lawrence A. Lindberg testified that a big drop in attendance and a "very serious financial situation" are the sole reasons for eliminating Toliver's position. He said race had nothing to do with dropping the post, and the main criteria in determining who would be dropped is seniority.

The school district this year is cutting back more than 20 positions as part of a sweeping budget reduction.

Under questioning by Asst. County Counsel Richard V. Godino, representing the school district, Lindberg testified that the school district's attendance has dropped sharply. In 1966, average daily attendance was 885, but this is down to 540 this year and is expected to drop to 503 next year, Lindberg said.

He said that without the cutback, the school district would exhaust its reserves and go broke.

Trustees voted to eliminate Toliver's job on a 3-2 vote last year, then reversed itself and retained him.

This year, Lindberg said the personnel committee met in January and in February and decided to eliminate his job as part of the budget cutback. The personnel committee is composed of Lindberg and trustees Robert Thompson and Mrs. Delta Christ.

Martha Freebairn-Smith of Mill Valley, who was on the school board from 1965 to 1970, testified for Toliver yesterday. She said the post of special assistant was created three years ago because there was a need for a strong black administrator, and Toliver filled that need.

Another action against Toliver is pending in Marin Superior Court. The school trustees on May 13 voted to fire Toliver for "incompetence," "disruptive behavior" and not following directions. Toliver is fighting these personal charges in court.

This court action is not related to yesterday's hearing, which dealt only with the elimination of his post for budget reasons, and not with the personal charges against him.

Hearing officer Coan took the case under submission and announced he would send his conclusions to the school district trustees, who then would decide whether to retain Toliver's job. Coan said his job is to present the facts and determine whether the school district complied with the state education code on staff reductions.

Eagle Pin Tomorrow For Scout

Gary M. Mitchell, 15-year-old assistant scoutmaster of Troop 82, Novato, will receive an Eagle award at a court of honor at 6 p.m. tomorrow at Good Shepherd Lutheran Church, Novato.

Mitchell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Mitchell of 20 Nassau Court, is a senior at San Jose Junior High School.

Mitchell began his scouting career in 1965 in Cub Pack 48 in Tiburon and joined Troop 82, sponsored by the Loma Verde Home Owners Association, in 1968.

He advanced to first class, star scout and life scout and served in various positions in the troop, now headed by his father.

In May 1970, Mitchell was elected to the Order of the Arrow. He holds 22 merit badges.

Expressway Is Out; Subway To Be Built

TORONTO (UPI) — Saying Toronto "does not belong to the automobile," Ontario Premier William Davis has announced that a controversial $237 million expressway will be halted and a subway will be built instead.

The 6.5 mile expressway was intended to link northwest Toronto with the city's downtown core. Davis said a subway will be built along the same route.

Davis' announcement, ending a 10-year battle between backers and opponents of the expressway, was made to the provincial legislature.

"If we are building a transportation system to serve the automobile, the Spadina Expressway would be a good place to start," Davis said.

"But if we are building a transportation system to serve people, the Spadina Expressway is a good place to stop."

Antisuicide Benefit Slated

An, art show and wine and cheese-tasting show will be held at the American Legion Log Cabin in San Anselmo next Saturday to benefit the Marin Suicide Prevention Center.

The North Bay Chapter of the British American Club will put on the event, featuring paintings by marin artists, and a performance by the Prince Charles Bagpipe Band. The event will be from 6 to 8 p.m. Dancing will follow from 8:30 p.m. to 1 a.m.

Nancy Peppitt of Santa Venetia, committee chairman, said persons interested in attending may call the Suicide Prevention Center of Marin between 9 a.m. and noon for tickets and information.

Probation For One In Drug Case

Judge Joseph G. Wilson of Marin Superior Court has given straight probation to one of four men involved in a big drug raid in Inverness in 1969.

Place on probation for two years was James Willard Clapp, 23, who now lives in Oregon.

Earlier this week Judge Wilson sent a codefendant, John Brad McCall, 23, of Mill Valley, to jail for six months.

In Clapp's case, the probation department recommended six months in jail but the judge did not give him jail time, reportedly because Clapp has found steady employment in Oregon.

Still awaiting sentencing is Craig R. Westlin, 23, of Inverness.

A fourth man, John Lipinsky, 23, formerly of Inverness, is a fugitive.

The four were arrested in May 1969 when agents raided a house where they said they found large quantities of hashish. McCall and Clapp had admitted selling the drug to an agent.

Dixie School To Graduate 313

A class of 313 eighth grade students will graduate at 6:30 p.m. Thursday from Vallecito School in the Dixie School District.

Doreen Cook will be student speaker and Sue Benedict, mistress of ceremonies. Debbie Walker will lead the Pledge of Allegiance.

District Trustee Earl H. Koehler will give the graduation address.

Clifford Campbell, district superintendent, will present the class.

Principal Walter W. Vater, assisted by Trustees Dorothy Brown and Koehler, will award diplomas.

Family Trio Hurt In Auto Accident

Three members of the same family have been treated at Marin General Hospital for minor facial cuts suffered when their car hit a tree in San Rafael.

Boon Linton, 35, of 1358 Lincoln Avenue, San Rafael, and her children, John, 9 and Jinn, 7, were injured when their car struck a tree at Cijos and Third streets at 6:30 p.m. Thursday.

TAKE THAT! — Billy Backus (right) lands a right to the head of Jose Napoles in second round of their world welterweight championship bout in Inglewood last night. However, Napoles went on to regain the championship on a knockout in the eighth round. (UPI telephoto)

WORLD WELTERWEIGHT BOUT

Napoles Regains Crown

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI)— After a lapse of six months, Jose Napoles again reigned as welterweight champion of the world today, regaining his crown from Billy Backus, who beat him last December.

Napoles may have taken Backus lightly in their Dec. 3 fight at Syracuse, N.Y., when the nephew of Carmen Basilio was awarded the title as the fight was stopped in the fourth round.

But Friday night at the Forum, Napoles fought a perfect fight and it ended with the bout being halted in the eighth after Backus was down twice in the round.

The two knockdowns, however, were not what terminated the bout. Just as Napoles had the title lifted the first time because of eye cuts, Backus lost it back for the same reason.

Referee Dick Young, on the advice of ring physician Dr. Jack Useem, halted the fight at 1:53 of the eighth. Backus' right eye was entirely closed and his left eye gushed blood from a cut he suffered in the fifth round.

On most cards, Backus had not taken a round before the sudden termination of the bout in the eighth. Napoles admitted he took a few stiff punches in the first few rounds that made him respect Backus.

"Backus is a fine fighter," Napoles said. "He was one of the best prepared fighters I ever met."

But the champion, who came in at 145 3-4, couldn't solve Napoles' strategy of throwing his left and circling away. Napoles, 146, went contrary to the usual ring adage of not leading with the left against a southpaw.

"After the last fight we decided to use our left more—to hook and jab," Napoles said. "I felt the left had to win it for me and it did."

Napoles never let Backus get set, throwing his left and then moving away like a matador working a bull. The role fit the Cuban winner.

But Backus, while taking nothing away from Napoles, said for some reason he couldn't get started and didn't loosen up until the sixth round. By then his right eye was swelling and his left bleeding.

"Napoles wasn't better this time; I just wasn't as good," Backus said. "I certainly want another shot at him. But he's a very smooth fighter.

"I don't know if he's the hardest hitter I ever met but I went down. I couldn't see out of my right eye so I guess they had to stop it."

Napoles in the eighth dropped Backus with a short left and right to the head. Backus bounced up at three but took the mandatory eight count. A left and right to the body sent Backus down the second time and he did not get up until six.

At that point the referee motioned to Napoles' corner and the crowd thought he was halting the bout but it was to summon the doctor. After Dr. Useem looked at Backus, he advised Young to halt the bout.

Under California ring rules, it goes into the book as a knockout, the first suffered by Backus in his career. But the Syracuse battler was well rewarded for his first title defense. He received $90,000 guaranteed and the closed circuit television rights for the Syracuse area. Napoles got a challenger's $30,000.

Although Napoles is a strong favorite in Southern California and his adopted homeland of Mexico, the turnout of 14,645 and the gate of $185,755 were below expectations. Despite being the challenger, Napoles was a 2-1 favorite.

The new champion says he's ready to meet any worthy challenger but would leave it to his manager and the promoters to arrange that.

JACK HANLEY

Joe Orengo Doesn't Preach To The Kids

Joe Orengo missed the Memorial weekend four-game sweep of the Expos by the Giants but he popped up in the Candlestick press box for the series with the Mets.

None of the press box veterans asked Orengo why he happened to miss the sweep of the Expos. They knew he was doing double duty for the Giants, fulfilling his own speaking engagements and those which Russ Hodges had scheduled before he died.

"I was down in the mountain country this time around Santa Cruz," said Orengo, "and it was beautiful."

What does Orengo talk about other than the Giants?

"For one thing I don't preach to the youngsters but I do try to point out a few facts about life, at least try to bring them into proper focus," said Orengo.

And just how does he do that without preaching?

"Anecdotes," said Orengo, "that contain the message. All kids love to hear baseball stories. I don't know how many times I've told the one about myself and Branch Rickey.

"I thought I had a pretty good year in 1940 with the Cardinals. It was my first full year in the majors. I hit .287 and played second, short and third in 129 games.

"Now, baseball salaries in 1940 weren't much more than what today's players consider walking around money. I knew club owners were having a tough time of it. They weren't the only ones. Competition for jobs was still fierce because the country hadn't yet fully recovered from the depression of the '30s.

"Nevertheless, I thought I deserved a raise. I was shocked when I received my 1941 contract. It actually cut my salary. I sent it back to Mr. Rickey with a note 'I can make more picking oranges.'

"Two days later I received a telegram from Mr. Rickey and it contained two words: 'Pick 'em.' "

So Orengo became a Giant in 1941, the first year he met Horace Stoneham in the old Polo Grounds. When the Giants moved west in 1958, Orengo already was well established in the automobile business in his native San Francisco.

Naturally, Stoneham recognized Orengo as a natural for the club's speakers bureau. As usual, Orengo was in spring training camp this year for a week, getting background data for his talks. At that time he picked the Giants to be a winner this season. Why?

"Because of the rookie crop — Chris Speier, Steve Stone, George Foster, Jimmy Rosario, Bernie Williams, Chris Arnold, Ed Goodson, Jim Barr and others who didn't make the big club.

"But Speier, Stone, Foster and Rosario did, not just because of their talent but the fierce competition they gave veterans and other rookies trying to beat them out.

"There's nothing like competition to bring out the best in a player."

Does Orengo say that in his talks to youngsters?

"Not that way. I quote Satchel Paige's advice: 'Don't look back because someone may be gaining on you.' "

What A Marathon! A's Win It In 21 Innings

Jackson's Walk Ends Struggle

WASHINGTON (UPI) —It was beginning to look as if an act of Congress would have to stop the Oakland A's and Washington Senators.

But in the top of the 21st inning early this morning, the Senators' Jim Shellenback walked Reggie Jackson with the bases loaded and then threw a wild pitch to break a 3-3 deadlock.

The Senators, who had scored three runs Friday night in the bottom of the ninth to tie the score, couldn't come back in their half of the 21st and the A's struggled to the dressing room with a 5-3 victory.

The five-hour, 19-minute marathon was the sixth longest game in American League history. There have been two 24 inning games, two 22-inning contests and one other 21 inning game in the American league.

If the A's hadn't scored in the 21st and the game had remained tied, the game would have been halted and completed before tonight's contest. A league rule prohibits any inning from starting after 1 a.m. The game ended at 1:06 EDT.

Oakland used 20 players and Washington 21 with the Senators using eight pitchers and the A's seven. Diego Segui (42), who pitched the last innings, got the win.

Dick Green opened the 21st for A's with a double and Curt Blefary singled to right, but Green was thrown out at the plate. Blefary went to second on the throw and Bert Campaneris was intentionally walked. Both runners advanced on Shellenback's wild pitch and Larry Brown walked to load the bases.

Jackson, who was 1-for-9 in the game, then worked the count to 3-2, fouled a pitch and drew ball four.

In the bottom of the 20th Blefary saved the game for the A's when he leaped above the left field bullpen fence to rob Don Wert of a homer.

Campaneris drove in two of Oakland's first three runs.

Washington tied the game in the ninth on a two-run single by Toby Harrah.

Jim Hunter (3-3) will be on the mound tonight for the A's against Dick Bosman (3-7).

Giants Still In A Slump But Lose Little Of Lead

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— Jim Bunning says he doesn't mind one bit helping out in the bullpen as long as the Philadelphia Phillies need him there.

The 39-year-old one-time star righthander relieved for the second time in nine games Friday night and he retired five consecutive batters to save a 53 victory for Chris Short over the San Francisco Giants.

"I don't mind at all going back to the bullpen," said Bunning. "The club needs me there and after all that's what I'm here for—to help out in any way that I can."

Bunning broke into the majors way back in 1956 as a reliever with the Detroit Tigers and he has worked out of the bullpen on a couple of occasions since then.

"There is a world of difference between starting and relieving," Bunning said. "I have no trouble getting loose in a hurry and I think I can pitch three days running if I have to, but then I would need a couple of days off."

Bunning struck out two batters in his 1 2-3 inning stint Friday night to push his career total to 2,825, second highest in the history of baseball.

Phils manager Frank Lucchesi said Bunning's tour in the bullpen should be a short one.

"He's there because we are short," Lucchesi said. "Dick Selma is on the injured list and we need a dependable right-hander down there until he gets back. When Selma returns Bunning will go back to starting."

"Naturally, I would rather start," Bunning said, "But it's no great tragedy for me to relieve if that's where the club needs me."

Short, who won his fourth game in 11 decisions, took a 4-1 lead into the eighth inning of Friday night's game and then was sent to the showers after a single by Bobby Bonds, his third hit of the game, a triple by Chris Speier and a single by Tito Fuentes netted the Giants a pair of runs to get them close. Short hit Willie Mays with a pitch and that's when Bunning came on to close out the Giants, who suffered their third consecutive loss.

It marked the first time this season the Giants have lost as many as three games in a row but it made no difference in the standings. The second place Los Angeles Dodgers lost, too, so the Giants remained a comfortable 9 1-2 games in front in the so-called National League West Race.

San Francisco played with another patchwork lineup Friday as Willie McCovey and Ken Henderson remained on the shelf. Still, the Giants managed 11 hits off Short in the 7 1-3 innings he worked.

The Phils touched Gaylord Perry for eight hits and three runs in 4 1-3 innings and sent the San Francisco righthander down to his third loss in nine decisions.

The Phils and Giants resume their four-game weekend series today with Ron Bryant (5-2) pitching against rookie Ken Reynolds.

Giants manager Charlie Fox said there is a possibility Henderson may start today's game. Kenny has been on the shelf for two weeks with a pulled groin muscle. He pinch-hit unsuccessfully Friday night. McCovey, though, looks like he might be sidelined for at least another week with a gimpy knee.

"It sure feels good to see the other teams losing while we are having our problems," said Fox. "We lose three games in a row and it cost us only a half game in the standings."

Nicklaus Gains Tie In Atlanta

ATLANTA (UPI)—Jack Nicklaus sometimes surprises himself.

Here he is, tied for the lead with young John Miller going into today's third round of the $125,000 Atlanta Golf Classic. And, really, this tournament was intended as limbering up exercises for the U. S. Open a couple of weeks from now.

"I only played a few holes after winning the Byron Nelson Classic four weeks ago," Nicklaus explained. "I felt I needed the rest and I didn't want my game to go stale approaching the Open.

"My plan was to come here and then go on to Philadelphia (scene of the '71 Open) next

PHILADELPHIA (UPI)—Arnold Palmer, wearing eyeglasses, went through a practice round Friday at the Merion Golf Club in preparation for the 1971 U.S. Open June 17-20.

Palmer said he was "just trying out" the glasses.

He said an optometrist recommended he use them occasionally.

He wore the glasses for a couple holes as he played best-ball on the par-70, 6,554-yard East Course.

The 41-year-old Palmer said the glasses were mainly for distance.

Palmer said the course was in "excellent" shape and basically the same as in 1964 when he played a charity match with the late President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Palmer, who last won the U.S. Open in 1960, said if the course "is as good two weeks from now, then it will be excellent."

Pittsburgh Sub Kills Houston

By JOE CARNICELLI
UPI Sports Writer

Sitting on the bench hasn't spoiled Gene Clines.

Clines, playing in place of fluweakened Robert Clemente, smashed a pair of run-scoring singles Friday night to help the Pittsburgh Pirates post a 3-2 victory over the Houston Astros.

Clines, one of the Pirates' "Supersubs," singled in a run with two out in the third and knocked across the winning run in the fifth after Dave Cash singled, stole second and went to third on a throwing error.

"There's a lot of pride among the guys sitting on the bench," said Clines. "Guys like Jose Pagan, Bill Mazeroski, Charlie Sands and me, we pull for one another. When one of us gets into a game, it means something to the rest of us if you come through and you don't always have to get a base hit to contribute. A little thing like moving a runner over with a bunt means as much to me as a hit, because this might be the particular job I'm supposed to do."

Elsewhere in the Natiocal League, New York beat Los angeles 3-1, Philadelphia downed San Francisco 5-3, Chicago ripped Atlanta 11-0, Cincinnati trounced St. Louis 12-0 and Montreal defeated San Diego 3-1.

In American league action, Oakland outlasted Washington 5-3 in a 21-inning marathon, Boston routed California 10-1, Baltimore shut out Milwaukee 2-0, Chicago edged Detroit 3-2, Kansas City downed New York 4-2 and Ceveland beat Minnesota 4-2 in a game called during the sixth inning because of rain.

New York moved into first place in the N.L. East by taking advantage of five Dodger errors, three by third baseman Bobby Valentine. Don Hahn singled to open the fifth, took second on a sacrifice and scored on Bud Harrelson's double to give the Mets a 1-0 lead.

An inning later, Cleon Jones singled, stole second, moved to third on a throwing error and scored on Valentine's error. Bob Aspromonte was safe on Maury Wills' error in the eighth and pinch-runner Al Weis scored on another Valentine error.

Tom Seaver pitched a sixhitter for his seventh victory against two losses and 10th in 11 decisions against the Dodgers. Richie Allen's homer provided the lone Dodger run and Seaver stopped Willie Davis' hitting streak at 25 games.

Ferguson Jenkins followed teammate Kenny Holtzman's no-hitter with a three-hit shutout and Joe Pepitone lashed four hits, including a homer, as the Cubs mauled Atlanta.

Pepitone drove in three runs as he highlighted a 19-hit Cub assault.

Cincinnati, held hitless by Holtzman the night before, broke out with a 17-hit attack to wallop St. Louis. Tony Perez and George Foster pounded out four hits each and Buddy Bradford had three, including a homer, to back rookie Ross Grimsley's three-hitter.

Johnny Bateman slashed a two-run double with two out in the top of the ninth inning to boost the Expos past San Diego. With the score tied at 11, Ron Fairly and Boots Day singled and Bateman delivered them with an opposite field double.

Bill Stoneman pitched a four-hitter and struck out nine to boost his record to 7-3.

NICKLAUS

week," Nicklaus continued. "I really didn't expect to start out so well here although I hoped my game would be up by the end of the week."

The 31-year-old "Golden Bear," only golfer to win all of the world's top four professional golf tournaments at least twice each, had a 67 Thursday, good enough for a four-way tie for second behind the 24-year-old Miller who opened with a 65. Then he outscored Miller 68-70 Friday as both stood at 9-under-par 135 and a stroke ahead of 43-year-old Gardner Dickinson who also surprised himself with his second straight 68.

Nicklaus, who has already won three tournaments and nearly $132,000 so far this year, needed a birdie on the final hole Friday to keep his share of the lead since Miller, who tied Nicklaus for second in the Masters, sank a 22-footer on the next to last hole.

But Miller doesn't let the fact that the man he is tied with is the omnipoent Nicklaus worry him. "I don't just look at Nicklaus," he said. "There are 20 other guys out there who can catch us."

Four, including Gary Player, Ray Floyd, Dave Eichelberger and Tom Weiskopf, were just two strokes back at 137 and the always dangerous Lee Trevino and Bobby Nichols were at 138.

Floyd, who had eight birdies in each of the first two rounds, went to 11 under par through his first 10 holes Friday, but then took a pair of triple bogeys in a three-hole span.

"Obviously I'm not very smart," the former PGA champion said wryly. "You have to fall asleep to make worse than a bogey on a hole."

Friday's best round, a 7under-par 65 that matched Miller's opening round, was turned in by Bobby Mitchell who shot an Atlanta Country Club course record 64 here two years ago.

Mitchell was in a five-man group of 139 shooters that also included Rod Curl, Dale Douglass, Bob Lunn and John Schroeder.

Canonero Statue Will Be Erected

By U.P.INTERNATIONAL

CARACAS — The Board of Trustees of the Venezuelan Institute of Race Tracks said Friday that it will order the building of a statue for Canonero II even if the Venezuelan horse does not win the Belmont Stakes today. Canonero was the surprise winner of the Kentucky Derby and Preakness classics.

The statue is to be located in the gardens of Caracas' luxurious "La Rinconada" race track.

ALBANY, — Caroline won the $9,000 feature race at Golden Gate Fields yesterday by taking a half-length victory over Kacy Time and Mystic Ayre.

Jack Arterburn rode Caroline to a 1:38 clocking for the mile. In her third victory in seven starts this year, Caroline paid $8.20, $4.20 and $2.80. Kacy Time returned $5.00 and $3.00, while Mystic Ayre paid $2.40.

Football

LOS ANGELES — The Los Angeles Rams of the National Football League announced the signing of their No. 1 draft choice, small college All-American linebacker Isaiah Robertson of the Southern University of Baton Rouge.

CARSON CITY, Nev. — The Oakland Raiders will be honored at a picnic here June 16.

Governor Mike O'Callaghan said Friday the event will be sponsored by the Carson City Booster Club. Expected to be present at the picnic are Fred Biletnikoff, Ben Davidson, Dan Conners, Tony Cline and Wayne Hawkins.

Golf

STATELINE, Nev. — A field of 300 golfers, including some of the top names in sports, will tee off Tuesday in the Harrah's Resort's 10th annual invitational golf tournament on the three Lake Tahoe courses.

Among the entries are professional football quarterbacks Roman Gabriel of the Los Angeles Rams; John Hadl of the San Diego Chargers; Craig Morton of the Dallas Cowboys; Joe Namath of the New York Jets; Johnny Unitas of the world champion Baltimore Colts.

Ice Hockey

DETROIT — Goaltender Roy Edwards, still suffering dizzy spells and headaches from a fractured skull he received in a National Hockey League game last season, Friday announced his retirement from the Detroit Red Wings.

Edwards, 34, suffered a hairline skull fracture last Dec. 6 when Craig Cameron of the St. Louis Blues crashed into him after scoring a goal. Edwards was knocked backwards to the ice, and his head hit the goalpost on the way down.

STOCKHOLM — Bill Harris, 35, a former member of the Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League, became coach of the Swedish National team Friday after signing a one-year contract with the Swedish Ice Hockey Association.

Baseball

ST. LOUIS — The St. Louis Cardinals Friday called up righthanded relief pitcher Bob Chlupsa from their Class AAA farm club at Tulsa to replace another righthander, Mike Torrez who will be on military reserve duty over the weekend.

Winds Ruin World Record In Hurdles

BILLINGS, Mont. (UPI) — Rod Milburn, the young man from Southern University who is burning up the track in the outdoor season, ran a 13.0 in the 120 high hurdles Friday at the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics championships, but he had too much help from the wind to eclipse the world record.

Milburn's time was probably the fastest ever, but he was aided by a wind speed of 2.2 meters per second. The allowable wind speed for a world record is two meters per second.

The world record for the 120 high hurdles is 13.2 and Milburn's time easily beat the NAIA record of 13.5 set in 1967 by Willie Davenport.

Behind Milburn were Ron Draper, North Carolina Central, 13.4, and Efren Gipson, Sam Houston (Tex.) University, 13.5.

Willie McGee of Alcorn (Miss.) A&M had the only claim on the record books as the meet goes into the final events today.

McGee tied the previous NAIA 100-yard dash record Friday night when he ran the course in 9.3. The record was established in 1961 by Bob Hayes of Florida A&M and again in 1969 by Earnest Haynes, Texas A&I.

Trailing close behind McGee —All with 9.4 clockings—were Robert Taylor, Texas Southern; William Miller, Southern (LA.) University; and James Batie, Troy State (Ala.).

The three-mile run finals turned out a surprise winner—Gordon Minty of Eastern Michigan, with a time of 13:46.3.

The pre-meet favorite in the event, Rex Maddaford of Eastern New Mexico, came in second with 13:53.3. Third was Mike McDonald, Adams State (Colo.), with 14:05.2.

First place winner in the javelin finals was Bob Winn, Otawa (Kan.) University with 240-5.

Erich Hardaway, Sul Ross State (Tex.) won the shot put finals with a heave of 58-8 3-4.

In the long jump, it was Joshua Owusu, Angelo State (Tex.) with 25-6.

The decathlon champion is Bruce Jenner of Graceland (IOWA) College. With only three events left, Jenner was in fifth place with only 5,193 points Friday, but he won the pole vault to help amass hiw winning 7,407 total. The NAIA record is 7,551 points, set by Jeff Bennett of Oklahoma Christian in 1969.

BOWLING

Barbara Eastland Fires 649

Barbara Eastland, wife of Country Club Bowl veteran instructor Lou Eastland, bowled her high game and high series all on the same night.

Bowling in the Sleepers League, Barbara had a high game 257 and wound up with a 649 series to top the week's scores for the women. Over at Greenbrae Lanes, Sharon Peicich was right behind with a 644 three-gamer.

High scores for the men came from Dick Treadway, 662, at Greenbrae, and Bill Henderson, 861 for four at Country Club. Top junior was Wayne Ziegler, 649 at Greenbrae.

Three Marin County gals are high on the list after the first week in the West Coast match game eliminations going on at Castle Lanes in San Francisco.

Pert Penny Tauscher is 10th with a 745 four-game series; Bea Nickel is 12th, 730; and Marilyn Epidendio 15th, 720. Leading is Pinky Yee of San Francisco, 813.

The week's honor role of Marin County league bowling:

Oakland's Blue To Receive Gift Cad From Finley

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI)— Vida Blue, the Oakland A's brilliant rookie southpaw, will receive the new car promised him by A's owner Charlie Finley in about 10 days, Finley said Friday.

The A's owner said the car, a thank-you gift for Blue's excellent start this season, now is being shipped here from Detroit and a California license plate bearing the letters "VBLUE" has been obtained for it. Finley said he will present keys and title to the car to Blue as soon as possible, probably in 10 days.

Best Scores Hat Trick; West Ham Over Nexaca

A three-goal "hat trick" by Clyde Best paced West Ham United of England to a 5-1 victory over Nexaca of Mexico in an international soccer match last night at the Oakland Coliseum.

Best, a six-foot, 200-pound forward, set up a fourth goal for West Ham on a pass to Brian Robson.

Geoff Hurst, the only man ever to score a hat trick in a World Cup final match, recorded the other British goal.

West Ham shut out the Mexican squad until the final minutes, when Nexaca tallied on a penalty kick by Miguel Perrichon.

Novato '9' Triumphs

Four key seventh inning hits and six innings of shutout pitching by Dennis Bueler led Novato's American Legion baseball squad to a 3-2 victory over Vacaville Thursday night.

Back-to-back singles by John Kidder and Dave Judnick, followed up by a double by Randy Jackson and a single by Jack Burnam netted Novato's squad its second victory of the year to raise its league won-lost mark to 2-1.

According to Gene Ferretti, coach of Novato, the team "looked real good," and cited the fact that Novato didn't make an error.

The squad played Vallejo this afternoon, and has a game against Marin City slated for tomorrow at 2 p.m. at Novato.

33 Horses Die; Arson Suspected

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS, Ill. (UPI)—Two men were sought for questioning today in connection with a fire that destroyed a barn and caused the death of 33 horses at Arlington Park racetrack Friday.

Arlington Heights Fire Chief Harvey Carother said, "This fire looks to me like somebody touched it off." He and others who arrived at the scene shortly after the blaze was reported told police they saw two men running from the burning barn.

A trainer told authorities he tried to put out one small fire with a fire extinguisher and saw several others start at the same time.

Miami trainer Robert Cramer, who lost more than a dozen horses in the blaze, said he fired two men Thursday night after having trouble with them. Police said the two were being sought in an arson investigation.

Among the horses killed was Norman, owned by Tracy Bougon, which won the Frontier Handicap at Detroit and was valued by its owner at $75,000. Other trainers who lost horses in the fire included Henry Mojena, George Geier and Joseph Dorignac Jr.

Authorities estimated the loss to the building and animals at $500,000.

Several horses escaped from the burning wooden barn but were injured so badly they had to be destroyed.

NANCY

ALMANAC

Today is Saturday, June 5, the 156th day of 1971.

The moon is between its first quarter and full phase. The morning stars are Mercury, Venus, Mars and Saturn. The evening star is Jupiter.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Gemini.

Madame Chiang Kai-shek, wife of the Nationalist China president, was born June 5, 1897.

On this day in history:

In 1917 more than 9.5 million Americans between the ages of 21 and 30 registered for the World War I draft.

In 1966 American astronaut Gene Cernan left Gemini 9 for a two-hour, 10-minute "space-walk."

In 1968 Sen. Robert Kennedy was shot in Los Angeles by a 24-year-old Arab national later identified as Sirhan Sirhan. The senator died and Sirhan remains in prison with a life sentence.

A thought for today: Franklin D. Roosevelt said, "There is no indispensable man."

Cycle Plans To Be Studied

Plans for a day of riding will be discussed at a meeting of the newly-formed motorcycle explorer post at 8 p.m. June 15 at the Bel Marin Keys Community Center.

The post, sponsored by the Marin County Motorcycle Association was organized for boys and girls, 14 to 18 years of age, to promote safety and enjoyment in motorcycle riding.

Further details can be obtained from Frank W. Joyner, 568-A Wilson Avenue, Novato.

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Correct Use Of Dummy Vital To Garner Winning Tricks

In many bridge hands there is no problem about winning certain tricks. The only question is whether you win them in the dummy or in your own hand. The difference is illustrated in today's hand.

LOW TRUMP

West led a low trump, partly to get off lead safely and partly to reduce dummy's ruffing power. The lead gave South the chance to get started on the wrong foot.

The average declarer would win the first trick with dummy's eight of spades in order to lead the ten of clubs for a finesse of some kind. If East has the ace or queen of clubs, and if South can guess which, declarer may manage to hold the club loss down to one trick.

In the actual hand, this line of play would fail dismally. West would take two clubs and the ace of diamonds, after which he would sit back smugly and wait for his high trump to take the setting trick.

BETTER PLAN

The actual declarer had a better plan. He overtook dummy's eight of spades with the jack at the first trick, cashed the top hearts, discarding a diamond, and then ruffed a heart with the queen of spades.

West discarded a diamond since it would do him no good to overuff. South thereupon led one of his carefully preserved low spades toward dummy. West could take his king of spades, but he could not prevent dummy from winning a trick with either the nine or the ten of spades.

RUN HEARTS

Declarer would then be in position to run the rest of the hearts, on which he could discard four clubs.

West could get one trump, one diamond and one club, but nothing else.

DAILY QUESTION

As dealer, you hold:
♠-10 9 8
♥-A K 8 7 4 3 2
♣-10 9
What do you say?

ANSWER: Pass. The hand is too good for a shutout bid of any kind, but not quite good enough (in high cards) for an opening bid of one heart. Pass, with the intention of being heard from later.

Loch Lomond Head Reelected

Two officers of the Loch Lomond Homeowners Association have been reelected to second terms.

Donald B. Edmondo, of 10 Tweed Terrace, was reelected president of the 200 member organization, and Dorothy Childress, 24 Dunfries Terrace, was reelected secretary.

Other officers include Robert Robey, 51 Locksley Lane, vice-president, and J. M. Lifschiz, 27 Dunfries Terrace, treasurer and membership chairman.

Besides appointing chairmen to its various committees, the group voted to suspend meetings until October. Meetings will be called as dictated by need during the summer, Edmondo said.

Is 'Rap' Revolutionary? If So, In What Sense?

MORE NOTES FROM the bulging pocket:

Verle B. Johnston of 213 Humboldt Street, San Rafael, says that the term "rap session" derives from RAPP, used to describe meetings of the Bolshevik Alliance of Revolutionary Poets and Writers.

He doesn't cite any authority for this bit of information.

Johnson is a senior economist for the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco. He authored an article headed "So — What Else Is New?" printed in the March-April issue of 12-L NEWS, published for employees of his bank.

An over-simplified description of his article would explain it as citations of recent instances of history repeating itself.

His comments on the origin of the term "rap session" are a part of "So — What Else Is New?"

"How many, do you suppose, of those who participated in the I-J's Rap Session and have taken recourse to the expression actually are aware of the origin of the t e r m ? ' ' he asks in a letter to the editor.

It is a safe bet that most people who gave it a second thought assumed that "rap" derived from rapport which the dictionary defines as relationship marked by harmony, conformity, accord or affinity.

ONE DAY LAST WEEK a Marin City resident, who understandably doesn't want his name divulged, made his way through I-J security guards to deliver a message to the editor in person. His message is a warning to those who pick up hitchhikers.

"People who pick up hitchhiders deserve no sympathy if they are subsequently beaten and robbed by those they have picked up," said the visitor.

''Why isn't there a law against hitchhiking?" he asked.

Others have asked the same question.

At times over the years, legislators have attempted to secure passage of laws prohibiting hitchhiking. Several problems emerge. How do you write a law, for instance, which, prohibits hitchhiking but does not penalize the fellow who runs out of gas in a remote area and needs to thumb a ride to a distant gas station?

In the present session of the legislature a strong argument against anti-hitchhiking legislation contended that it would discriminate against the very poor who have no way to travel other than beg rides.

On the other hand, the I-J's visitor from Marin City said he frequently sees hitchhikers he recognizes as being among the toughest element of Marin City. "Anybody who picks them up should know better," said the visitor.

WE ALL LIKE nice neighbors who never make waves. But this is one of our troubles. Nice people sit at home idly while activists and special interests influence the actions of our government, at all levels.

Mrs. Harriet Beckwith of Kent Woodlands is an exception among nice neighbors who don't make waves.

Like the rest of us, she is concerned about the situation in which our nation finds itself right now.

Unlike the rest of us, she doesn't dismiss it from mind and go about her own business as usual.

She has become interested in the so-called Hatfield-McGovern Amendment (to the Selective Service Act — S.B. 376) which would set a definite date for final and complete withdrawal of U.S. troops from Vietnam.

Mrs. Beckwith has obtained reprints of Congressional Record arguments supporting the Hatfield-McGovern proposal. She is busy urging friends and acquaintances to familiarize themselves with the material and then to communicate their views to our senators and congressmen in Washington.

Since S.B. 376 will be voted on in another week or two, she urges haste.

"If we want our government to act according to our wishes, we must make our thoughts known to those in Washington," she says simply.

The country can use more nice neighbors like Mrs. Beckwith who let their thoughts be known and urge others to do likewise — without rabble rousing, demonstrating, cursing or abusing.

FREEDOM OF the press has "further deterioriated" in the western hemisphere during the past six months, according to the Inter American Press Association.

The deterioriation has choked freedom to express opposition to or criticism of regimes in Cuba, Haiti, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Bolivia, Guatemala and Brazil. Press freedom, and all that goes with it, is under threat in Chile, Colombia and Uruguay.

The IAPA Committee on Freedom of the Press described the first eight nations named above as a "black list of repression and tyranny . . . where the people are denied their right to be informed."

The chairman of the Committee on Freedom of the Press speaks from first hand knowledge. He is Julio de Mesquita Neto, publisher of O Estado of Sao Paulo, Brazil. His newpaper plant was once seized by the troops of Brazilian strong man Getulio Vargas.

Such "primitive methods" as outright seizure by force are no longer being utilized. Totalitarian governments now use more subtle, sophisticated means to silence or intimidate the press.

In Chile, President Salvador Allende's Marxist regime has not yet directly suppressed press freedom, but newspaper wages have been raised astronomically by government edict while advertising rates are to be fixed at new low levels by government authority to "curb inflation." The expectation is that when the newspaper inevitably faces a financial crisis, the government will have to step in and take control of it to "save the jobs" of those it employs.

Chile is not yet on the IAPA black list because the press of Chile is still technically free to express its opinions.

But if someone offers you stock in a Chilean newspaper publishing concern at a seemingly favorable price, you would have to be daft to buy it.

Greyhound Racing And Vivisection

Assemblyman (Walter W.) Powers has introduced Assembly Bill 935 which permits greyhound racing in California. This bill is due to be heard June 10.

On the face of it, it would seem there is nothing wrong with permitting greyhound racing. However, I think your readers should know the background facts and I urge them to write Sacramento and do their utmost to kill this noxious legislation.

The simple fact is that thousands of dogs will be bred for racing. Only the best are then used for this purpose — the balance either abandoned or sold to the vivisectionists. These so-called "scientists" are usually apt to be most inhumane in their treatment of animals. Aside from the torture inflicted on these defenseless creatures, they are kept penned in cages with scarcely room to lie down. Further, most of this "research" is completely uncalled for. The same experiment is performed over and over again on trusting animals for no purpose whatsoever . . .

What happens to dogs that are selected for racing? When they become too old to continue this activity, they, too, are sold to the vivisectionists.

I hope a large number of your readers will write their assemblyman to urge this legislation be defeated.

'Accountability' Test For Students Proposed

During the past four years the parents of Old Mill School students have been split into two camps, with much bitterness and unpleasantness. There are those who approve of the experimentation being conducted on the children and those who are against it.

The parents who are against this "self-education" by the children are against it primarily for one reason, and that is that they believe the chidren cannot and do not achieve academically, and will eventually emerge from this school district unable to compete with their peers emerging from more conventional schools.

At a PTA meeting last week the principal, Mr. (David) Erskine, stated that the arithmetic and reading scores were higher than four years ago, and it would seem from this statement that the goals of greater achievement are being reached. However, such things as conditions under which tests are conducted, the admission two years ago that an undetermined number of children were not included in the testing because they had been designated "educationally handicapped" by the teacher, and the poor achievement of their own children tends to continue to spawn "unbelievers."

It would seem that the aim of all parents and the board of trustees is academic achievement, and only the method by which it is obtained is in dispute.

May I suggest therefore that the board of trustees consider the proposal that all Old Mill students take the Stanford Achievement Test at an independent school by an independent testing staff . . . The results would give an accurate and clear assessment of the impact of the last four years.

How You Can Help The FBI: Say Nothing Against Hoover

WASHINGTON — "The people who attack the FBI and its leader, J. Edgar Hoover, are doing the country a terrible disservice."

Thus spoke Prof. Heinrich Applebaum, chairman of the criminology department at the Bonnie and Clyde Institute for Advanced Studies.

"How so?" I asked.

"There are 8,400 FBI agents in the country," Applebaum said, "including 57 blacks and no women. These agents are desperately needed in the war against crime."

"NO ONE DISPUTES that," I said. "But why would criticism of J. Edgar Hoover affect our country's battle against the forces of evil that would attack us from within?"

"Because," said Applebaum, "every time someone attacks J. Edgar Hoover, which is synonymous with attacking the FBI, two agents have to be assigned to the case to find out who made the attack and what is behind it. So far this year there have been 4,166 attacks made against Mr. Hoover in the press and at universities and in Congress. This means 8,332 agents have had to be taken off their duties, which has left only six agents free to fight criminals."

"You mean the FBI has to devote most of its time these days to defending itself from attacks on the bureau?"

"That is correct," said Applebaum. "There was a time when the FBI was completely free of criticism. Then it was possible for Mr. Hoover to devote all his energies to capturing public enemies, Nazis, Communists and those who would destroy our way of life.

"But recently the attacks on the FBI director have made the bureau switch its game plan. Now hundreds of thousands of man hours must be spent finding out who is saying what about J. Edgar Hoover. As the criticism escalates, more and more people have to be assigned to making out reports on the attacks, and the backlog of criminal cases is building up."

"PROFESSOR," I SAID, "do you believe the criticism of the FBI director is a plot by criminal elements in this country to detract from the work the FBI has been chartered by Congress to do?"

"There is no doubt about it," he said. "Any time a professor, student or a former FBI agent says something uncomplimentary about the FBI director, everything stops and hundreds of bureau employees are involved in the investigation.

"Now, these attacks are no accident. They are inspired by people in this country who are aware that the more agents and employees are assigned to tracking down critics of J. Edgar Hoover, the less law enforcement people will be available to go after them. The time will not be far off when all the resources of the FBI will be used for only one purpose: to get the people who are demanding Mr. Hoover's retirement."

"THIS IS THE MOST insidious plot I have ever heard of," I said. "Surely the FBI must be aware of what is going on."

"They are," Applebaum said, "But the first priority of any law enforcement agency is to protect its leader from attack, particularly from those who want to force him to resign."

"What is the solution?" I said.

"We must persuade the media that every time they print a story or an editorial attacking Mr. Hoover, they are taking two agents off a criminal case. If the media want law and order in this land, they have to knock off their criticism of the FBI director so the bureau can go back to its original business, which is making America's streets safe after dark."

Supremely Confident Heath Plans New Role For Britain

LONDON — The poet of empire, Rudyard Kipling, wrote in "If" a flamboyant challenge to defeatists that could serve Prime Minister Edward Heath today. Not that Heath is in any sense an imperialist, since a primary goal is to overcome the dependence on the revenues of a vanished empire that gave Britain a false sense of security and well-being.

What Heath now intends to carry through must set the ghosts of the imperial past, the past of Rule Britannia, hovering over Downing Street. He means to unite Britain with Europe not only in a common market of trade and tariffs but eventually in a monetary and economic union subject to majority decision of the members. It is an earthshaking move, the full thrust of which neither Britons nor the world fully realizes.

SINCE 1940 this reporter has talked with four of Heath's predecessors in the historic and yet cozy precincts of 10 Downing Street. They all faced varying degrees of trouble in the slide from imperial power to little England, and they did not conceal their concern. With Heath the striking difference is his overwhelming confidence.

Taking Britain into the European Common Market will, he says, create a new entity. He does not use the term third force, since he and President Georges Pompidou in their meeting in Paris last week understood that inevitably they would continue to shelter under the American nuclear umbrella.

But it will be a third force in economic power, rivaling the United States and the Soviet Union in productivity and worldwide reach, both in the developed and developing nations. The two heads of government discussed at length how they would pool resources for help to peoples emerging from colonialism in Africa and Asia. To use a phrase rare in the prime minister's careful lexicon, this is an exciting moment.

He is a cool man presiding over a break with all that has gone before. Not only does he believe that Britain will become a partner with Europe, but he is confident Parliament will ratify this step before the summer recess at the end of July, and if it doesn't come by then, the Parliament can go on, against all precedence of sacred seashore holidays, into August.

THIS IS A determined man. He scoffs at the argument that Britain could not become part of a monetary and economic union bound by majority decision on such vital issues as inflationary control and interest rates. Why not? he says, confident as though Britain were already a part of the new order.

The "ifs" could be daunting to a prime minister less rooted in the rightness of his own policy. Opposition to the common market is strong both among his own Conservatives and the Laborites, with some members insisting on a popular referendum before parliament acts. In the recent county council elections, Labor scored a landslide. Upcoming by-elections threaten to nibble away the Tory majority.

Heath is a new kind of John Bull. The presence, the tricks of popular appeal, are not for him. Young Tories call him "the chairman," the take-charge director seated at the head of the table.

On the day he reported after Paris to a story Parliament, shouts of assent and-dissent ringing in the crowded chamber, he could talk cool as a cucumber, dissecting the future of Heath and the nation, the two being roughly parallel. He fully expects to be sailing his 41-foot ketch at Cowes during the regatta in August. Rising from a modest middle-class background, he is no egalitarian.

INCENTIVES, EFFORT, competition, earned rewards — these are the motivations he hopes to inject in a Britain turning away from the welfare state. At their last meeting President Nixon expressed admiration for Heath's audacity in undertaking to reverse four or five decades of history. The President added that he would hardly undertake such a radical change-over. But, after all, Heath has four years to go, barring a political disaster, while for Nixon the next election is only a year and a half away.

Grudgingly, Labor party leaders concede Heath's ability, his managerial capacity, while scorning his cool, calculating personality. With their own party in disarray, he may, they allow, just make it. And if confidence is any measure there is little doubt he will.

WINDOW ON THE WORLD

South Africa Can Count Gains Despite Apartheid

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

"We are of Africa," declared Prime Minister John Vorster of the Republic of South Africa, "and we are prepared to make our contribution to the development of Africa according to our ability."

The occasion was South Africa's observance of its 10th anniversary as a republic.

ON MAY 31, 1961, in bitterness and anger South Africa had broken with the Commonwealth of Nations and established itself as a republic committed to apartheid, condemned by new black African nations and by most of the world as a blatant example of the theory of white supremacy.

In the following 10 years, South Africa survived economic boycott and, in the last year especially, won positive gains for the Vorster policy of "verligte" which calls for working toward friendly relations with black nations and preaching to others the validity and merits of apartheid.

Opposing the Vorster policy within his own Nationalist party are the "verkramptes" (literally the cramped ones) who favor strict isolationism.

Both major South African parties, Nationalist and United, favor racial segregation but the United party to a lesser degree.

IN RECENT MONTHS support for Vorster had come from a surprising source. It was from President Felix Houphouet Boigny of the Ivory Coast, one of the most prosperous of the black African nations.

Said Houphouet-Boigny:

"The revolting system of apartheid outrages us all ... (but) it will not be eradicated by force."

Of the white men who rule South Africa, he said:

"We must help them to consider themselves first as Africans regardless of color. The future of the continent, our joint patrimony, is at stake."

BETWEEN VORSTER'S and Houphouet-Boigny's words there was a remarkable similarity, and upon the Ivory Coast president it brought down the expected abuse from more militant African leaders such as Sekou Toure, president of nearby Guinea.

It made the Ivory Coast the first black African nation not economically dependent upon South Africa to accept the theory of dialogue over force.

There has not yet been time to assess fully the effect of the Ivory Coast action.

Ghana has accepted the idea of a dialogue with South Africa in principle and the South Africans are known to have been in contact with others among Africa's more conservative leadership.

Malawi was the first black African state to establish diplomatic ties with South Africa.

Swaziland, Botswana and Lesotho, all within South Africa's economic sphere, have custom agreements which could lead to diplomatic relations.

AGAINST ITS CRITICS, South Africa has moved to the offensive. To United Nations demands that it give up jurisdiction over the territoy of South-West Africa it has replied with an offer to let the people decide by a plebiscite under U.N. supervision.

And despite U.N. condemnation, its trade with western nations is increasing.

San Rafael City Council voted to go ahead with a half-million dollar straightening and improvement of the D Street grade, despite county reticence to contribute funds to the project.

The Marin County Board of Supervisors endorsed an Assembly bill to raise the salaries of county superintendents of schools. Under it, the pay of Marin County Supt. Wallace W. Hall would rise to $10,000 per year.

WORTH SAYING AGAIN

The government is not an almoner of gifts among the people, but an instrumentality by which the people's affairs should be conducted upon business principles, regulated by the public need. — Grover Cleveland.

While a fox is a fox and a wolf is a wolf and a bear is a bear, man can be a lamb today and a wolf tomorrow, can play dove in the morning and hawk in the evening, talk like a parrot or be mute as a fish. — Dagobert D. Runes.

There are many humorous things in the world, among them the white man's notion that he is less savage than the other savages. — Mark Twain.

ANOTHER ANNIVERSARY — Rev. Stanley Reginald Hammond, currently rector-emeritus of the Episcopal Church of Our Saviour in Mill Valley will celebrate his 60th anniversary as an Episcopal minister tomorrow. An 'old hat' at anniversaries, Hammond will assist his son, Rev. D. Murray Hammond in the morning services.

Rev. Hammond Will Celebrate 60th Anniversary As Minister

Rev. Stephen Reginald Hammond, who at 88 apparently doesn't believe in the word "retirement," will celebrate his 60th anniversary tomorrow as an Episcopal minister.

Rev. Hammond will assist his son, Rev. D. Murray Hammond at both the 9:15 and 11 a.m. services at Church of Our Saviour in Mill Valley — a church he served from 1950 to 1957 before becoming organizing pastor of the Church of the Redeemer in Glenwood.

"He's still very active," the younger Hammond said this week as his father prepared for the services. He was ordained into the Episcopal priesthood in Winnipeg, Canada, on Trinity Sunday in 1911.

Ten years ago when he observed his 50th anniversary as an Episcopal priest, he was actively engaged in directing the church in Glenwood. By that time "golden" celebrations were rather old hat for the minister. He and his wife, Hattie, celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary in 1959 with a gathering of the clan in the Erskine Baker McNear mansion which was the first home of the Church of the Redeemer.

The senior Hammond was born in Guilford Surrey, England, March 14, 1883, and came to Canada with his family in his su(-teens when his father, a dentist, bought some "sight unseen" land.

At 14 his father took him out of school to learn a trade and by 19, Hammond was foreman in a harness-making concern.

Following his ordination in 1911, Hammond began his ministry in Canada. In 1917 he became rector of St. Paul's Parish in Ventura, a post he held for 20 years. Following World War II, he was called to a mission in an industrial area in East Los Angeles.

Since 1950 when he preached a sermon at Christ Church at the suggestion of his late son, Keith, who was rector of the church at the time, the senior Hammond has been involved in the ministry in Marin.

Study Of Russian Churches

By PETER J. SHAW

MOSCOW (UPI)—Soldiers of the Red Army have come under fire from their own official newspaper for not fighting the battle against belief in God as resolutely as they should.

"In some detachments," the army newspaper Red Star (KRASNAYA Zvezda) said in a lengthy commentary, "commanders and political workers have weakened anti-religious propaganda. They do not conduct the resolute fight for the uprooting of leftovers of religion in peoples' consciousness."

Even old women, Red Star noted sarcastically, can best soldiers in religious argument and it told the story of one old woman named Anna who sat in a train compartment with several young soldiers, one of whom asked her:

"Are you a believer, old woman?"

"Why do you ask, Sonny?"

"Because it (religion) makes me laugh."

"What is there to laugh about?" said the old woman. "God helps us in everything. He is everywhere —in this bread, Sonny, in your thoughts."

Red star said "an argument began in which the old woman took the upper hand. The private could not counter her arguments with any of his own. One could see he was not prepared for an argument of this sort. He just kept repeating, 'everybody knows there is no God ...'"

Such a state of affairs, Red Star said, proved that "anti-religious propaganda should be conducted uninterruptedly, not just from time to time."

Anti-religious propaganda is official Soviet policy. Freedom of worship is guaranteed by the Soviet constitution but the state considers religion a "serious ideological adversary."

Children are told "religion is a harmful superstition. Everything is explained by science." Jesus Christ is usually referred to as "the mythical Christ."

Moscow in 1917 had more than 600 churches for a population of one million. There are today no more than 40 or 50 active churches for a population of seven million, and some are the size of small chapels.

Many former Russian Orthodox churches have been converted to museums, sobering-up stations for drunks, trade exhibition halls and warehouses. Scores have been ripped down. Rarely is a new one built. Famous St. Basils Cathedral in Red Square has been renovated—as an admission-charging museum.

There is no official estimate of active Russian Orthodox believers in the Soviet Union. Unofficial estimates run to more than 20 million. Those attending services are few, mostly elderly and mostly female.

Several other branches of Christianity still exist in the Soviet Union although services are scant. Unofficial estimates suggest there are several million persons born as Roman Catholics, Lutherans and believers in a Quaker-styled Baptist sect called the United Baptist Evangelist Church.

"There are facts which testify to the activization by clergymen of their attempts to spread their harmful influence on the youth," Red Star said.

The state continues to teach there is no God. Religion is eroded by quiet antireligious indoctrination which begins when children start school and follows them throughout their lives.

The Soviet constitution gives the state the right to propagandize for atheism. It forbids religious instruction for anyone under age 18.

The Soviet Union recognizes the right of established religious sects to their regular services but bans any effort to spread religion through public instruction, to publish underground religious magazines or to set up Sunday schools.

The Communist Party has built "houses of Atheism," and children are sometimes "baptized" in "palaces of happiness" where party officials may give them tiny Lenin medals.

Communist-style marriage ceremonies are devoid of religious content. A couple who wed at the Moscow Palace of Marriages stand near a bust of Lenin to say "I do."

"Each citizen is ensured the right to believe in God or not to believe in God, the right to perform religious rites and the right to conduct antireligious propaganda," the chairman of the government Council on Religion said in 1966.

The government contends that if the churches have the right to preach, the government has a right to preach against them.

"Grandfather Frost," the Russian Santa Claus, used to arrive at Christmas in pre-revolution days. Now he comes on New Year's Day. Secular holidays are substituted for Christmas, Easter and Saint's days.

Before the 1917 Bolshevik revolution, an old Russian saying held that, "If you're not Christian, you're not Russian."

That is not heard in Russia today.

NOW A MUSEUM — St. Basil's Church in Moscow — once a house of worship — is now a museum. This is typical of what has happened to the vast majority of the 600 churches which dotted the city at the time of the revolution. There are now only about 40 or 50 churches which hold services.

Teacher To Become A Church Minister

Eb Andrew, an English teacher at Redwood High School for the past seven years, will be ordained into the ministry at 4 p.m. services tomorrow at Lucas Valley Community Church.

Andrew, who will become pastor in Jackson, Hole, Wyo., received his bachelor of divinity degree from the Berkeley Baptist Divinity School in 1960. He did his undergraduate work at Pepperdine College in Southern California.

Participating in the ordination will be Dr. Russell Orr, executive pastor of the American Baptist Churches of the West; Rev. Doug Sidon, president of the Bay Area Council of Churches; Rev. John Andrew, the ordainee's father; Rev. Hugh Collett, and Rev. Dale Nystrom, pastor of the church.

Ike Doerksen will present the candidate and Gordon Lindstorm, moderator of the church, will present Andrew's certificate.

Andrew, his wife, Barbara, and three children, Melissa, Gary and Laralyn, will leave later this month for Jackson Hole.

Church Relations To Be The Key Issues

ST. LOUIS (LC) — Church relations will be one of the major issues at the biennial convention of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, according to the convention workbook just published here.

The convention will be held at the Milwaukee Arena, July 9-16.

The largest number of resolutions submitted to the convention are in the area of church relations, particularly altar and pulpit fellowship of the LCMS with the American Lutheran Church.

Fellowship, adopted by the Denver convention in 1969, allows pastors to preach from the pulpits and members to commune at the altars of the other church body.

Although a small number of resolutions recommended that the convention "reaffirm" and "give thanks" for ALC fellowship, over 150 resolutions are, in one way or another, opposed to it.

The suggestions range from immediate termination to a temporary suspension of fellowship until further doctrinal agreement is reached.

For many, the major obstacle to fellowship is the ALC approval of the ordination of women at its 1970 convention in San Antonio, Tex.

Lack of unity, characterized by differences in doctrine and practice, along with ALC membership in the World Council of Churches and in the Lutheran World Federation are additional reasons given for rescinding the fellowship resolution.

A large number of resolutions also request that the LCMS sever its involvement with the Lutheran Council in the USA. Established in 1966, the council is a cooperative agency serving the LCMS, the ALC and the Lutheran Church in America.

Running five to one against LCMS membership in LCUSA, the resolutions cite excessive costs, religious unionism, political involvement and failure to promote unity of doctrine as some of the grounds for withdrawal from the council.

Another area of debate at the convention will center around the supervision of doctrine within the synod. One of the questions asked is whether this authority rests solely in the hands of the synod president.

Many of the resolutions relate specifically to the investigation of teaching at Concordia Seminary at St. Louis which Dr. J.A.O. Preus, president of the LCMS, initiated last year through the appointment of a fact-finding committee of five.

A related issue to be decided by the convention is whether or not pastors, teachers and professors are bound to teach only in conformity with Scriptures and the Lutheran Confessions, as stated in Article II of the LCMS constitution, or whether they are also bound by the doctrinal statements and declarations adopted by the synod in convention.

Baha'i Faith Sets Special Observance

The Baha'i Faith in Marin County will observe Race Unity Day next Sunday.

Theme of this year's observance is "Men Divide — God Unites." The event is an annual observance.

Social Action Programs Slated

Congregation Rodef Sholom of Marin will hold two social action programs this month with the first one next Friday on juvenile deliquency led by Rev. James Upshaw, chairman of the Marin County Juvenile Delinquency Prevention Commission.

The sabbath service on June 25 will be followed by a population national population led by Dr. Martin Carr.

Second Man Is Charged In Robbery

A second man was charged yesterday in Marin Municipal Court with taking a part in the hold up of 10 young people at gunpoint Wednesday in San Rafael.

Accused of armed robbery was Larry Cleary Walker, 23, of 31 Cole Drive, Marin City, who also was jailed as a parole violator. Walker was arrested after being identified as one of the men who held up 10 persons at 27 Hillview Avenue.

Also charged with the crime is Wendel Lynn Smith, 19, of Terra Linda. Their cases have been continued to Monday for entry of pleas.

The victims were forced to lie down after the men entered the house at gunpoint. The robbers got $20 from one of the young men in the group.

Smith was arrested at his home a short time after the robbery and Walker was picked up later.

Two Marinites Get Smith Degrees

Two Marin County coeds were among 500 seniors graduated from Smith College, Northampton, Mass.

They were Margaret O. Webb, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin P. Webb, 445 Woodland Road, Kentfield, and Judith B. Hooper, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roger F. Hooper of 70 Ivy Drive, Ross.

Second Annual Novato Flower Show Opens

The second annual standard flower show sponsored by the Novato Garden Club and the city parks and recreation department opened today at the Novato Community House.

The show, on the theme "June Is Busting Out All Over," is to continue until 5 p.m. and will reopen from 11 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. tomorrow.

Ribbons will be awarded for best in show in the horticulture, cut specimens, container plants and artistic arrangements divisions.

The show, which attracted more than 1,000 in one-day last year, has been expanded to two days and includes junior competition for those from 6 to 16.

Five nurseries will present commercial displays. Stephen Halbe's sixth grade class from Marion School has an ecology display and the Miwok 4-H Club has a display about planning and planting a garden.

Bids Opened For Landscaping

Bids for reconstruction and landscaping of Tamalpais Drive in Corte Madera were opened yesterday with a low of $163,569 submitted by Ghilotti Bros. of San Rafael.

According to Arthur N. Morrison, town engineer, the bid does not include costs of street lighting or proposed brick crosswalks.

Three other bids were received for the project, with the high submitted by O.C. Jones and Co. of Berkeley at $193,200.

Tarr Floors One During War Round

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Curtis W. Tarr, 6-foot-7 director of Selective Service, floored one of five persons, including a Catholic priest, who tried to arrest him on a "citizen's" warrant because of the conscription of U.S. citizens to fight in the Vietnam War.

The five had been meeting with Tarr for 45 minutes Friday when they read a statement charging him with "complicity" in war crimes. Then they asked him to sign an affidavit. He refused.

"I think I've heard enough of what you have to say," Tarr said. He asked them to leave.

Three members of the group approached Tarr with handcuffs and said they were putting him under arrest. He pushed them away, and one fell on the floor.

"I've now heard you and from my point of view the conversation is over," Tarr said.

"The killing is not over and we want you to bring this before the American people," said Jim Good, 27, New York.

Bobwhite quail have an annual mortality rate of about 80 per cent whether they are hunted or not.

Bob Nelson Has Proven He Can Wear Many Suits, And All Will Fit

HIS CURRENT POSITION as manager of the San Rafael Chamber of Commerce represents for Thomas Robert (Bob) Nelson his third career. He was first a civil engineer, and then a highly successful insurance underwriter. As manager of the chamber, Nelson has set as a major objective a membership of 512, or double its numbers, when he accepted the position a little more than a year ago. Already a 36 per cent gain in memberships has been achieved, and Nelson feels his campaign is "on schedule." (Independent-Journal photos)

By HARRY CRAFT

For a little more than a year, Thomas Robert (Bob) Nelson, manager of the San Rafael Chamber of Commerce, has been a "staff man."

In itself, this classification is not out-of-the-ordinary. But for Bob Nelson, whose vocation for the preceding years had been doing things mainly for himself, it has meant a considerable switch, to promoting an organization that has become the chief beneficiary of his labor.

FORTUNATELY he is no stranger to group activities. His experience in fund drives and club work, including a long association with the Rotary Club, has enabled him to make the change more smoothly than might have been expected.

As an insurance man — 23 years as a life underwriter with Penn Mutual Life Insurance Co. and two years with Metropolitan Life before World War II — Bob carved a career marked by numerous awards and special recognitions, including a 20-years membership in the Million Dollar Round Table and a Chartered Life Underwritership, in addition to the financial rewards for his work.

The life insurance business is no easy profession and it takes a particular type of man to succeed in it. But it is generous to those who discipline themselves to its demands and stay with it.

BOB DID NOT start out his working career in insurance. Indeed it was as much of a change from his original profession as a civil engineer as it has been to move out of insurance into the chamber of commerce field.

He says he was born in the little South Dakota town of Dupree on a Cheyenne Indian reservation.

"Dupree had a population of 385 in 1930, and I daresay it hasn't grown any since then," he said.

His father, of Norwegian and Swedish extraction, was an attorney who had gone to the Dakotas to open a law practice and homestead a piece of land.

His mother, still living today in good health in San Rafael, was of Holland Dutch stock and from her Bob acquired some strong religious convictions which may have been modified by present-day concepts, but which still dominate much of his thinking and purpose in life.

Even as a youngster, Bob showed tendencies to "participate," which, had they been fully analyzed then, might have prophesied the type of career that later made him a success.

He was president of his high school student body, president of the sophomore class at the South Dakota State School of Mines and Technology, and also president of the student Junior Society of Civil Engineers at the college.

UPON GRADUATION and receipt of his Bachelor's Degree, he became a junior engineer for the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation, working as an instrument man for reservoir location sites. After six months he came to California to work for the State Highway Department, and there he spent another six months as traffic analyst and as a draftsman.

He moved to San Rafael in 1936 and became assistant city engineer for the city of San Rafael, staying with this almost three years.

He was not the only one from his college to settle in California. As president of his alumni association he has discovered that there are more graduates now living in this state than there are remaining in South Dakota.

Bob credits a Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. manager with convincing him that he should give up engineering for a career in life insurance. Reflecting on his eventual decision to make the change, he says he was imbued "with a missionary spirit and desire to be in control of his own destiny."

He joined Metropolitan, working in the San Rafael area where he planned to remain, and he stayed with the company until World War II. During that time he was in its upper 1 per cent in sales volume.

Deciding to devote himself to the war effort by drawing on his technical training, he first went with the U.S. Corps of Engineers for 17 months. But he was commissioned an officer in the U.S. Navy in June, 1943, and was assigned to public works activities until his discharge in 1946.

Life insurance had attracted him once and it did so again after the war. This time he became a representative of Penn Mutual Life Insurance Co.

Checking back on his accomplishments in the underwriting field, he finds that he has sold life insurance coverage to more than 1,800 persons for a total exceeding 17 million dollars.

With his experience in and inclination for meeting people, one wonders why Bob Nelson never went into politics — even at the local level. But he claims he is not cut out for it.

"I don't have that skill," he said simply. "I am more a one-to-one operator than a group operator."

BE THAT AS it may, he still has a long list of credits for his group activities and participation in civic affairs — with the Rotary Club (of which he is a past president of the Terra Linda chapter), with the Marvelous Marin Breakfast Club, with United Crusade (heading its fund drives), with the San Rafael Chamber of Commerce as a regular member — and previously with the junior chamber.

It might be said that his present job with the San Rafael chamber was tailor-made for him, and this is all the more true in that he can wear many suits, each with a good fit.

Bob's desire for a change from life insurance that eventually led him into this psotion was probably multi-motivated. He admits to a certain amount of fatigue in his previous work which he believes might have come from achieving success too early in life.

He says "it was a case of there being much more pleasure in running the race than looking at the trophy after the race was run."

BUT THERE must have been deeper motivations, for there is no sign of fatigue about him today when his eyes light up in

"What Do All Those Terms On Hang Tags Mean?"

Here are additional terms defined by the U.S. Dept. of Commerce booklet "Fibers and Fabrics."

Heat Sensitivity: Property of a material which causes softening, shrinking, melting or discoloration when heat is applied.

Heat Set: The use of heat on man-made fabrics to stabilize size or shape, or to make pleats or creases durable to repeated laundering or drycleaning.

Pilling Resistance: Resistance to the formation of pills (bunches of balls of tangled fibers) on the fabric surface.

Sanforized: A trademark indicating that fabrics so labeled conform to the shrinkage requirements of the trade name owner not to shrink more that 1% in length or width.

Wash-and-Wear: A term applied to garments which satisfactorily retain their original appearance after repeated wear and suitable home laundering with little or no pressing or ironing.

Wrinkle Resistance: The property of a fabric which enables it to resist the formation of wrinkles.

a discussion of his goals for the Chamber of Commerce.

"My real thrill now is finding a new, public-spirited member who might become president of the chamber in another 10 years," he said.

Finding new members and keeping them in the chamber, whether or not they become presidents, is no easy matter. There are some men who join early in their careers in order to improve their contacts with the public. Once this has been accomplished and they are in the higher income brackets, there no longer seems to be a necessity for it and the tendency is to drop out.

The incidence of dropouts appears to be more prevalent among professional men than among merchants, who are inclined to stick, on the premise that they need the chamber as much as the chamber needs them.

Bob fights hard to minimize these losses because he believes it takes all kinds of men to have a balanced, effective membership.

"There is always room in the chamber for a man with a cause of any kind," is the way he puts it. "We need both 'investors' and 'volunteers,' if we are to get all the things done that are expected of us."

HE BELIEVES also that one of the main requirements of his job is to make it possible for other men "to get things done" — to run interference, perhaps, for them, but not carry the ball himself. He is the chamber's principal "staff man." His is the supporting role — not the star's.

In his own words, "What we need are stars like Irv Chapman, Bob Severin, Wish Brown, Sig Herzog, Walt Zurcher, Bob Ritter, Paul Ciampi and others like them who have contributed so much of their time and effort."

Much to his personal satisfaction, membership has increased substantially since he took office last year, and today the roster stands at 348 — up 92 in the past 13 months. Always in front of him is a graph sheet showing the goal for 1975 — 512 members, or twice the number when he took office.

BOB NELSON, the individual, is a simple man and a family man, although his family is now grown.

He and his wife Eunice live on Convent Court, San Rafael. They also own 20 acres in Sonoma County where Bob frequently gets out with an axe and chops wood for exercise (he says it also helps him with his golf swing).

When this was written they were planning to leave on a month's vacation in Asia and the South Pacific. Bob had plans to look up some members of far-flung Rotary groups in those areas.

Their son Bill, now 26, is assistant products manager for Frito-Lay Potato Chips in Dallas, Tex. He is married to the former Darrel Shone of Marin County (Ray Shone's daughter).

Bob and Eunice expect to be grandparents in June.

They also have a daughter Nancy, who was married to Larry Lahargoue in March. The Lahargoues live in Larkspur.

ROTARY CLUB is a long-time interest of Bob Nelson, a "participant by nature." He is a past president of the Terra Linda unit and a holder of the certificate of merit of Rotary International. His work with such organizations, Nelson believes, helped prepare him for the transition from insurance man to his present post as manager of the San Rafael Chamber of Commerce.

HERMANN ZOPF grew his own grapes and made his own wine for his resort and restaurant on Fourth street at H in San Rafael. And visitors from afar enjoyed the hospitality. Later the resort was purchased and operated by the Joseph Coppas.

THIS HILLSIDE at Fairfax was covered by the 50-acre vineyard of Camille Grosjean, who also operated a grocery and liquor store in San Rafael. The wine from his own winer was among the goods stocked by the pioneer merchant.

When Marin Was A Grape-Growing Wine-Making Area

Vineyards Covered Its Hillsides And Claret Flowed At Resorts

(Editor's Note: This is another of the manuscripts completed for the Independent-Journal Marin Magazine by the late historian, Florence Donnelly, prior to her death.)

By FLORENCE DONNELLY

Nowadays Marinites interested in visiting the wine country must drive to the Napa or Santa Clara valleys.

But there was a time when their own county was a grape-growing and wine-making center.

This comes as a surprise to many Marin residents, accustomed to thinking of their county in its earliest years of white settlement as cattle-grazing and beef-raising country. But grape-growing and wine-making were introduced to Marin early by the Franciscan friars of the Mission San Rafael Archangel.

The hills behind the mission were planted with vines, and the grapes picked and processed into wine at the mission. Most of this was used for sacramental purposes.

THE MISSION was allowed to sell its surplus wine, but this was subjected to heavy taxation.

Travelers, however, could always count upon a glass of refreshing mission-made wine as part of the hospitality when they stopped at the San Rafael Mission.

Long after the Franciscan fathers were gone, people continued to pick grapes from the vines they had planted and to make wine. But now the vineyards were not tilled, and gradually the vines died for want of care.

HOWEVER, THE county was being settled. And part of that influx of population consisted of people from Southern European countries with a tradition and skill for growing grapes and making wines.

By the latter part of the 19th Century and into the early 20th Century a number of vineyards flourished in Marin and much of their produce went into locally-processed wines. Perhaps the best known of the Marin vintners were Hermann Zopf, Joseph Coppa, Camille Grosjean and Jean Escalle, although there were others who earned a reputation for the quality of their grapes and wines.

These vineyards were scattered throughout the county, although San Rafael and its environs remained the principal wine-making point.

EARLY HISTORIES of the county make mention of the fact that many of its large estates contained "orange groves and vineyards." And while it is not stated whether those owners ate the fruit as it was picked from the vines or made some of it into wine, it is a safe assumption that at least some of the crop was put to the latter use.

The Marin County Journal published a special edition in 1887 that featured a large sketch of the Zopf Family Resort with a brief accompanying story.

"Hermann Zopf's Family Resort, vineyard, wine cellar and wine garden is one of the best known and most frequented places in San Rafael or Marin County," reported the Journal.

THE JOURNAL continued: "Located on the Marin County road, contiguous to the West End Station, this vineyard is a conspicuous object, and draws attention of every passenger by the NPC Railroad or travelers coming from the southern, middle or northwestern townships.

"The vineyard rising behind the cellar and dwellings is a prominent feature in the panorama of San Rafael, and is about the oldest in a county which seems destined to becoming one of the most important claret-producing districts in California.

"The cellars are good and airy, the arbors are sheltered by fines, the attendance is all that could be desired, and the wine, both red and white, is excellent."

THE RESORT, popular with San Franciscans as well as Marinites, was on Fourth Street near H, and the vineyard was on a high hill behind the resort. The area is now covered with dwellings and apartment houses.

A biography of Zopf, which noted that he was known as "Honest Hermann," said that he first left his native Germany to go to Brazil where he had a tea, coffee and tobacco plantation. Later he continued on north, settling first in Sonoma, then in Solano County and finally, in the fall of 1867, coming to Marin.

The Great Register of Marin County for 1892, in listing Hermann Zopf as a San Rafael resident, also reported that he became a naturalized American citizen in Marin County Superior Court on Nov. 2, 1868.

ZOPF BOUGHT the property fronting on Fourth Street from Alexander Forbes for $300, and, since he had no horse or plow, he began cultivating it by hand, harrowing the soil with spade and rake. He planted grape vines. And while awaiting his

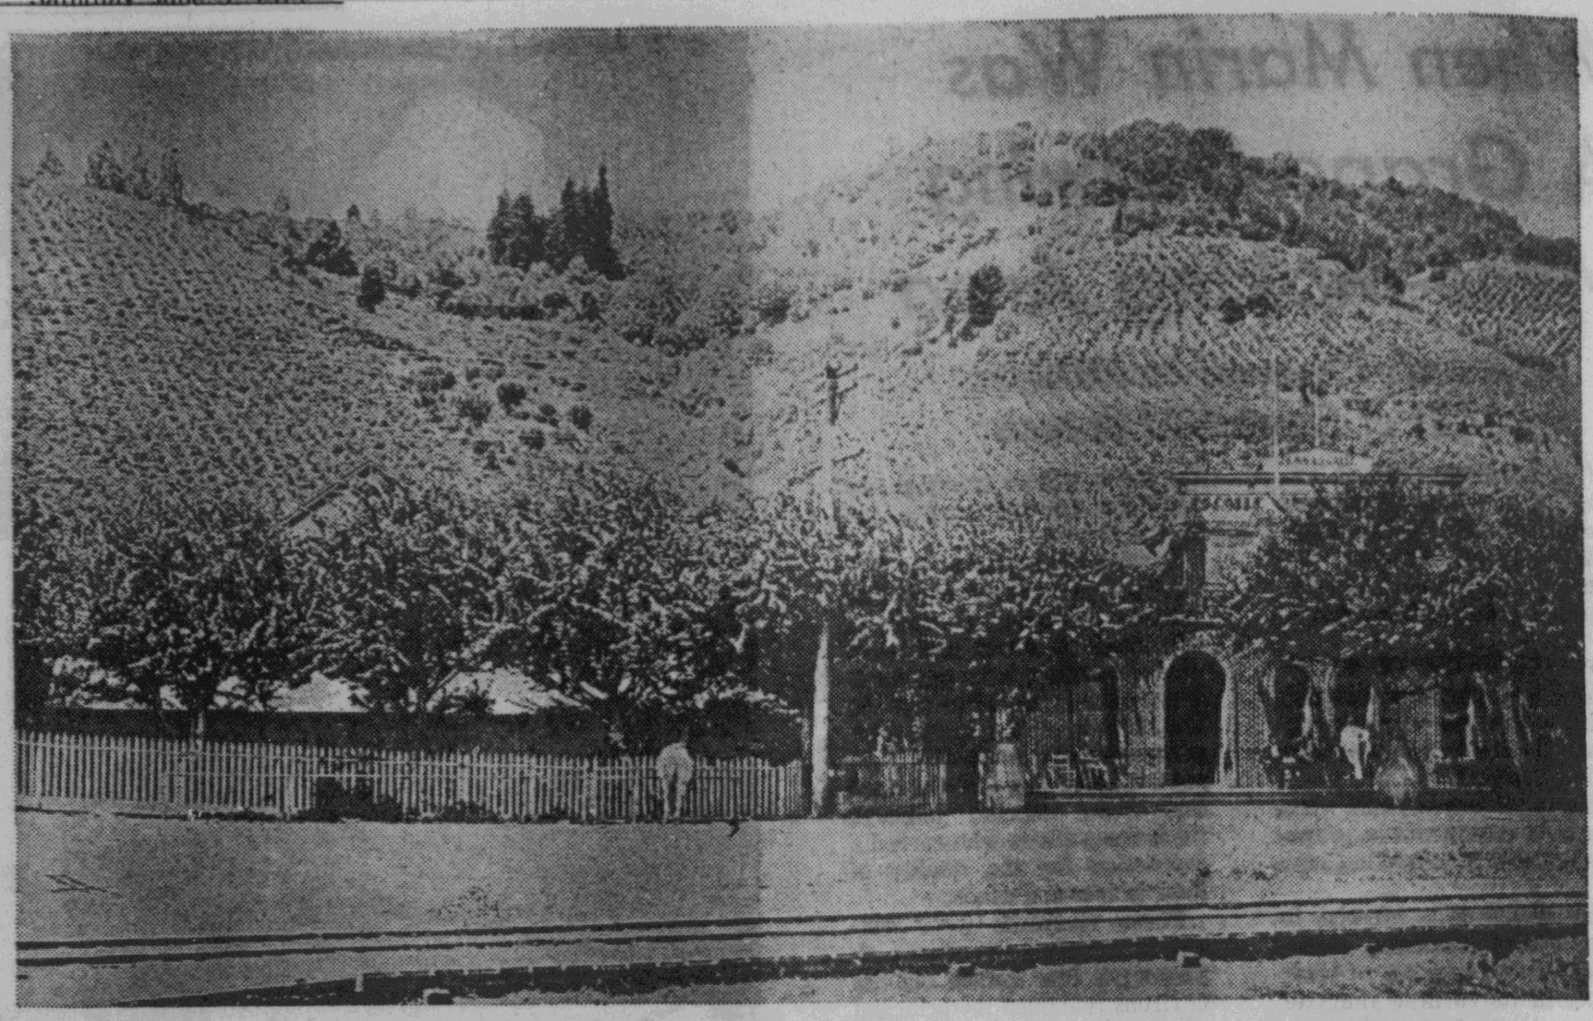
Marin's Era Of Wine-Making

Local Product Lured Visitors



PERHAPS THE MOST widely known of Marin's several vineyard, winery and resort operations was that of French-born Jean Escalle. Located near Larkspur, the resort was housed in a brick building that was first known as the Limerick Inn before Escalle became the proprietor. But under Escalle, it took on a Gallic character. And when Escalle, widowed, married a German woman, Teutonic societies also met frequently at the resort.

first crop, began selling beer from the one-room shack he built at the rear of the property.

He was also an expert well-digger and responsible for many of the wells of San Rafael.

When his vines began producing grapes, Zopf built his winery and restaurant facing Fourth Street. He called it Zopf's Wine Garden. And as his business increased and the fame of the resort grew, so did the name of the establishment, becoming Zopf's Family Resort, Vineyard and Wine Garden.

AN EARLY writer waxed eloquently over the resort:

"It would seem that no meeting place of kindred spirits, and hundreds of them did meet there, it is said, could have a finer 'send-off.'

"In this Bohemia, gathered the young and lovelorn, the older and travel-worn, to enjoy the cuisine, the wines and the genial hospitality of the proprietor, Hermann Zopf."

Near the end of the 19th Century, Zopf sold his resort to a young couple, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Coppa. In his advanced years he operated a small store in San Anselmo, selling ice cream and sodas in contrast to his former business.

THE COPPAS had come from their native Italy, first to Guatemala where they operated a small restaurant. Among their many friends there were the brothers Guy Anthony Ciocca, who had a plantation in Guatemala, and Edward Ciocca, a partner in the Ciocca and Lombard Wine Co.

Edward Ciocca's widow, Mrs. Lena Ciocca, was for many years a San Rafael resident, and he was the grandfather of Mrs. Leon Smith.

His company had a vineyard and winery near Geyserville in Sonoma County. And it was from him and his brother that the Coppas began to hear of the wine-growing advantages of Northern California and particularly those of a community called San Rafael. The result was that the Coppas left Guatemala to come to San Rafael where they acquired the Zopf property.

THE COPPAS immediately built up a large restaurant trade at the San Rafael resort. The green-latticed summerhouses were filled with customers who came from all parts of the Bay Area to enjoy the gourmet foods and wines.

Encouraged by such patronage, the couple also opened a restaurant in San Francisco that proved an instant success.

For a time, the Coppas continued their business in San Rafael. But the property became so valuable that they felt compelled to sell it.

They then — in 1908 — purchased five acres of San Anselmo land, near where the Sir Francis Drake High School now stands, built a large house there, planted a vineyard, and opened Coppa's Villa.

GRAPES WERE made into wines and bottled in the basement of the house. When aged, they were served to the connoisseurs of good food and drink who came to the Villa, as well as at the Coppas' restaurant in San Francisco.

Many a struggling artist and writer found free food and wine plus stimulating company at Coppa establishments.

The Bohemians of San Francisco flocked to the restaurants, and the Coppas at various times had food and wine operations at different localities and under different names operating in the city. Included were the Rsd Paint, the Neptune Palace, and Coppa's, the last, on Pine Street.

JEAN ESCALLE came to this country from his native France as a young man of 23 and for a time engaged in brickmaking. But farming was more to his liking, and be became one of Marin's pioneer grapegrowers and wine-makers.

THE COPPAS' son, Victor, a Tamalpais High School and University of Santa Clara graduate, joined his parents in the restaurant business. Later Victor's wife, Gladys, also became a part of the family enterprise.

Coppa's Villa in San Anselmo functioned until 1915. After the death of the senior Coppas, that property was sold, and Victor and his wife operated a small restaurant on San Rafael's Fourth Street for many years before retiring.

Many old-time residents and students of Marin County history remember Camille Grosjean as a business man, for his store on Fourth Street in San Rafael. But he was also a pioneer grape-grower and wine-maker.

A NATIVE OF France, he emigrated to America, first going to New Orleans and then living in a number of cities in the United States and Mexico before coming to San Rafael from Houston, Tex., in 1872.

He first engaged in the liquor business, specializing in fine wines of which he was knowledgeable, and then added groceries to his stock.

Many people, even then, were not aware that he also had a vineyard and winery in Fairfax.

A pictorial history of Marin County showed the Grosjean vineyard covering a Fairfax hillside. The accompanying story said that some 50 acres had been planted to grapes and yielded 2,00 gallons of wine, mostly claret, each year.

AT THAT TIME the vineyard was leased to a Mr. Arbini, but earlier Camille Grosjean himself had supervised it and the winery.

Jean Escalle, another pioneer vintner, was one of Marin's most colorful residents.

His story actually begins before Escalle's arrival in the United States when a French brickmaker. named Caillot or Callot purchased a large acreage near Larkspur from Patrick King and William Murray. There, from clay dug from the land, he began manufacturing bricks that were transported by barge to San Francisco where they went into many of that city's business and public buildings and homes.

THERE ARE several versions of how Jean Escalle was summoned to America, but the generally accepted one is that Caillot, prospering in the brick business, acquired some valuable Clydesdale horses in France, and also brought over Jean and his brother, Pierre, to care for the animals and to work in his brickyard.

Jean Escalle was then 23 years old.

When his employer and fellow countryman, Caillot, died, Escalle married the widow, Ellen, although she was 15 years his senior.

For a time Escalle continued to run the brickyard with some success. But it was not a business that was to his liking. He was, basically, a farmer. And so he disposed of the brick-making business and turned to farming on a nearby 40-acre tract he purchased at what came to be known as Escalle Station.

TWENTY ACRES were set aside for the vineyard. A winery was operated and produced 12,000 gallons a year, most of which was sold in Marin County.

A resort developed on the premises in a brick building that had been known as Limerick Inn before Escalle became its proprietor. Now it became Escalle's Inn, and the wine processed from grapes nearby was one of its chief attractions.

So was the traditional Bastille Day celebrated there by French and non-French alike.

AN ARTICLE in the Marin Journal of Jan. 19, 1893, provided this information on the Escalle vineyard and winery:

"The vineyard is 23 acres. Wine and table grapes, mostly Zinfandel and Reisling, are grown. Eight thousand to 12,000 gallons of wine are made each year. The wine cellar is 60 feet by 22 feet by 20 feet high. It is stored with casks of wine from one year to eight. There is one acre of orchard, mostly apple trees imported from France."

Ellen Escalle died in 1903, and Jean later remarried, this time to a German woman, Wilhemina Vogel, called Helma by her friends.

MRS. W. F. Wegner, foster daughter of Escalle's second wife, recalled in 1951 that Jean Escalle "was a very good-natured and stately, dignified man, quite well-liked."

She remembered "the wonderful times at Escalle's, particularly on Sunday nights, singing songs and having a social time."

And she recalled, too, the Escalle buggy drawn by a horse named Pedro that was such a familiar sight on the roads of Marin.

HELMA AND JEAN Escalle, she said, rented the inn to Nick Biegel in 1905 and he operated it for many years. Then Sam Orru had it for a time.

Bocci ball courts were added and the gardens expanded. Newspaper advertisements urged: "Spend your Sundays at Escalle's."

Nearly every Sunday German societies from San Francisco thronged to the inn for a good time in the shade of its trees.

The Escalles continued to make wine, and Jean delivered the product of his winery to customers in Sausalito, Tiburon and other communities two or three times a week, "just like a milk route," according to the late Randolph C. Doherty of Larkspur.

A COLORFUL and gay era came to an end in 1920 when Jean Escalle died. His widow, Helma, survived him for another decade, living in the big house that must have now seemed painfully empty and quiet. With her death, the property was sold.

It was really the Prohibition Era and the ravages caused by Phylloxera (a kind of plant lice) that spelled finis for the Escalle vineyards. Perhaps the vines would have weathered the assault by the lice had Jean Escalle been present to render his expert and tender care. But there was little even he could have done about the Volstead Act which had a more far-reaching effect upon the financial well-being of the formerly legal and prospering grape-growing and wine-making industry than it did upon the drinking habits of the public.

THE FINAL chapter of the Escalle story is a brief one, written upon three gravestones in the Mount Olivet Cemetery. They mark the resting places of Ellen, inscribed "1842-1903," of Jean, "1857-1920," and Helma Escalle, "1864-1930."

Over their resting places stands a small stone statue of an angel holding an open book. But its pages are blank.

WHILE Camille Grosjean was best known as a San Rafael merchant, and particularly as a grocer, he was also the owner of a vineyard and a winery.

Mount Tam — Hiker's Paradise

Trail Network Ranges From Steepest To Gentlest

By GEORGE NEVIN

"Give me men to match my mountains" was the cry of the 1840s and 50s as the pioneers pushed west, pitting their stamina against the Rockies and the Sierra Nevada.

Marin County today is lucky. Almost anyone is a match for her mountain.

Mount Tamalpais, dominating the entire Southern Marin peninsula, is Everyman's mountain. Trails, from the gentlest to the steepest, scale her flanks and circle her summit, providing a challenge for even the most experienced trekker.

BUT WHAT about those unwilling or unable to undertake a stiff hike? Tamalpais is for them, too.

Gentle, almost level paths, good for 15 minutes or an hour of communing with nature, follow a series of ridges that fan out from the mountain top. Even the most sedentary secretary or flabby executive is equal to these short jaunts.

Finally, for those disinclined to walk at all, paved roads ring the mountain like spokes of a wheel, with the summit at the center and the rim touching various starting points — Mill Valley, Stinson Beach, Fairfax and Bolinas.

IN ALL, MOUNT Tamalpais is not only the Bay Area's most dramatic mountain — rising, as it does, directly from the ocean and the bay — but also the most accessible. Literally scores of trails, from broad fire roads to steep paths originally blazed by animals and now widened for man's use, crisscross the area.

Those willing to forego the comforts of the automobile and walk across the ancient mountain will find an almost infinite variety on the way. Views of lakes, the bay, the Pacific and the entire Bay Area unfold at every turn. A wealth of animal and bird life inhabit the woods and meadows.

Waterfalls? They can be found in Cataract Gulch.

Wildflowers? Every meadow is carpeted with them in the spring.

Rocks? Amateur geologists can find many varieties of serpentine, common to California but rare in other parts of the world, and one kind found nowhere else but Mount Tamalpais.

YET WITH SO much to offer, with a variety almost beyond belief, solitude still is available in wholesale lots. It talkes a little walking, to be sure, and a willingness to strike away from the road into the wilderness. But it's there.

Like bicycling, walking is an excellent form of exercise, and hikers insist their sport is even better than cycling because it requires less investment. Feet, after all, come as standard equipment on most of us.

There is some expenditures, however. A good pair of boots, while not absolutely necessary, often means the difference between an enjoyable walk and one ruined by sore feet and blisters.

A CANTEEN or other water container is a must, as Mount Tamalpais tends to be dry during the late spring and summer.

Useful, though not essential, is a small backpack for lunch, camera and guidebook; a hat and sunglasses to keep the sun out of the eyes, and a map of the area to be traversed.

Finding one's way through Mount Tamalpais country is made easier by a new map published by the Marin Municipal Water District which shows every trail and fire road in common use on the mountain. Copies are available from the district office at 220 Nellen Avenue, Corte Madera.

MOST OF THE mountain is in the district watershed, which means the streams are used as sources of drinking water. Fortunately, the district's 16,000 acres will remain in open space, assuring Marin that the vast area will remain safe from development.

Tamalpais is relatively small geographically, but a lifetime and better could be spent getting to know it. Ask any oldtimer who has spent years on the mountain. He'll say there's still a little glen he's been meaning to explore, a lake he's never gotten around to visiting.

Three hikes, however, could serve as a fitting introduction to the peak: around the summit, through a cool, dank canyon and across a series of open meadows.

FOR THOSE hoping to see a few late-blooming wildflowers, without undue exertion, a walk down the valley from Rock Springs will serve admirably.

Park at the entrance to Cushing Memorial Amphitheater (Mountain Theater) and cross the road to Turnstile Meadows, so dubbed because of the fence and turnstile guarding the entrance, presumably to keep motorcycles out.

A patch of green grass to the left indicates Rock Springs, the modest beginning of a stream which, after flowing some miles and picking up several tributaries, empties into Alpine Lake near the dam.

BUT WHAT happens later is of no concern now. On a fine day there is nothing more glorious than strolling down the slender meadow, stopping occasionally to investigate a pool of the creek or a bed of flowers.

Many creeks join the main stream within half a mile. To the left up a valley lies Barth's Retreat and Portrero Meadows, jumping-off spots to the tree-clad north slope of the mountain.

The beauty of this particular walk is that it can be ended anywhere without the risk of missing a scenic gem. All of the meadows bordering the creek are charming, although the ones further from Rock Springs are less crowded and show the least sign of man's influence.

THE SECOND walk, a hike through a cool, moist canyon, complete with waterfalls, could be considered an extension of the first. About two miles below Rock Springs is Laurel Dell, where the trail enters the waterfall and cascade country of Cataract Gulch.

For those with access to two automobiles, the easiest way to arrange the hike is to drive to the first sharp turn beyond Alpine Dam from Fairfax and park, then take the second car up Bolinas Ridge to a parking area on Ridgecrest Boulevard above Laurel Dell.

A fire road leads down into the canyon and to the laurel grove, with its picnic tables.

BEYOND THIS point, the canyon constricts and the stream soon becomes frothy with the foam from a series of cascades. Ferns cling to the bank above the swift waters, fed by the moisture in the air.

The trail loses altitude rapidly, usually staying high above the creek. Side trails, however, dip down and afford views of ladders, rapids and out-and-out waterfalls.

Don't expect any Niagaras, but Cataract Gulch makes up in charm what it lacks in might. The trail is hewn out of solid stone at several points, and one can't help but feel a kinship with the unknown laborer who scooped out the steps.

WEEKEND traffic on the popular trail is likely to be heavy, but even on peak days the hiker who goes from the hot fields of Ridgecrest Highway to the cool reaches of the canyon will be grateful for the oasis.

Down and down the trail goes, until finally Alpine Lake, end of the journey, hoves into view, still several hundred feet below. Thick stands of Douglas Fir and occasionally a redwood

GROWING FROM an outcropping of rock, this immense oak dominates a corner of the meadow near Rock Springs. Open land such as this, common on Mount Tamalpais's flanks, is protected by the Marin Municipal Water District for watershed purposes. Combined with Mount Tamalpais State Park and Muir Woods National Monument, the watershed is open to the public for hiking and picnicking, but not for camping.

SOUTHERN Marin unfolds from the summit of Mount Tamalpais, with Mill Valley in the center and San Francisco in the haze-shrouded distance. Even more magnificent views can be had from the mountain top on a clear day, with the entire stretch of San Francisco Bay and even a corner of the distant Sierra Nevada visible.

Trails For Everyone —

Tam Has Paths For Hikers From The Expert To The Novice

are encountered. Once in a while a massive tree blocks the pathway, felled by its own bulk and a winter storm.

Sometimes a section of the trunk has been removed to allow hikers to pass; other times the hikers have made their own path around the obstruction.

ALL SORTS of intriguing fungi grow from the rich earth and from stumps. Some look temptingly edible — and quite possibly are — but only the expert knows enough to risk his life to try one, and even experts have been known to be wrong.

At one point along the trail a fallen tree lies right in the middle of a fairly deep pool below a waterfall. With an adventuresome spirit and a good pair of cleated boots it's possible to walk up the giant log and peer right into the teeth of the small but still impressive waterfall.

It would be tempting to slip out of one's clothes and into the cool water of the pool, but there's a very good reason not to do so. The stream is one of dozens feeding Alpine Lake, a source of drinking water for much of Marin.

THE TRAIL finally crosses a footbridge, goes a little further and comes out at Bolinas-Fairfax Road near Alpine Dam where the first car has been left.

This hike is tremendously rewarding because it gives a glimpse of Marin that few get. Free-flowing, unpolluted streams are rare in our increasingly urbanized county, and Cataract Gulch has the added attraction of having its status protected by the Marin Municipal Water District.

Just as rewarding in its own way and quite a bit less strenuous is the third hike, a jaunt around the mountain's summit. Most Marinites and thousands of tourists have driven to the parking lot at the top and marveled at the sweeping panoramic view.

THE 20-MINUTE paved mountain-top trail is a cinch — mothers pushing baby strollers and invalids in wheelchairs often are seen here, but there's one rough spot that may prove difficult for wheels.

The summit trail is worthwhile for its magnificent, 360-degree view. Starting at the parking lot and walking clockwise around the ancient rock formations of the summit, one can see the backside of Bolinas Ridge and, still further, the hills of the Point Reyes Peninsula.

Almost directly below lies the 16,000-acre watershed of the

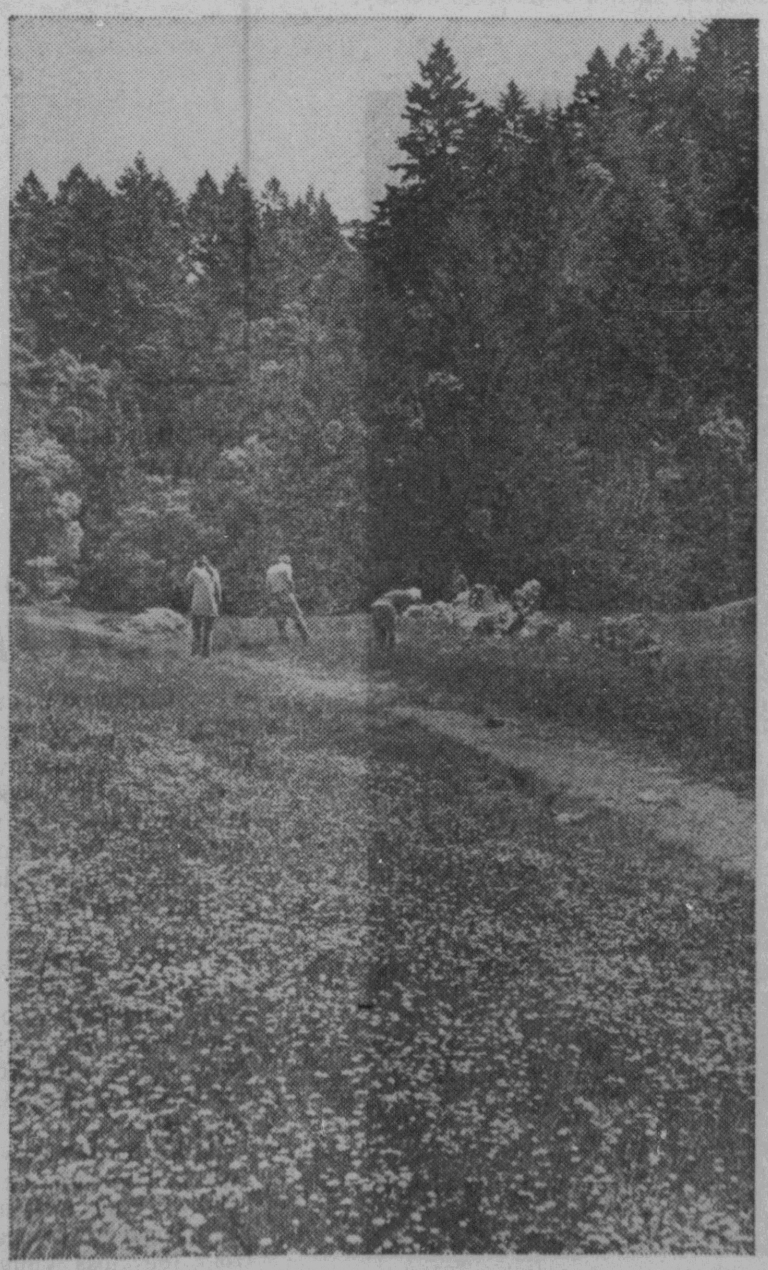
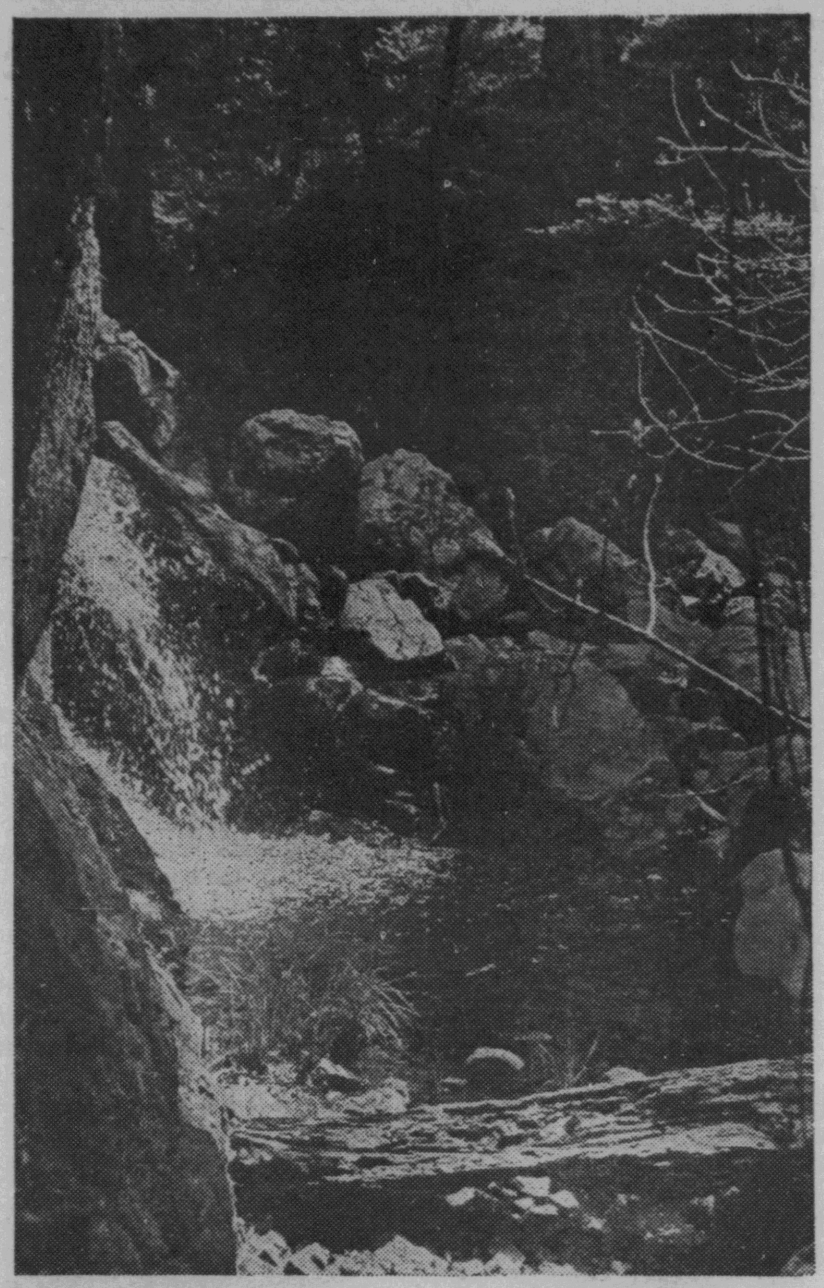
HIKERS WORK their way down Cataract Gulch along a broad, level trail hewn out of a grassy hillside. Other nearby trails vary greatly in quality, from wide fire roads to narrow, winding paths first used by animals and later widened by men.

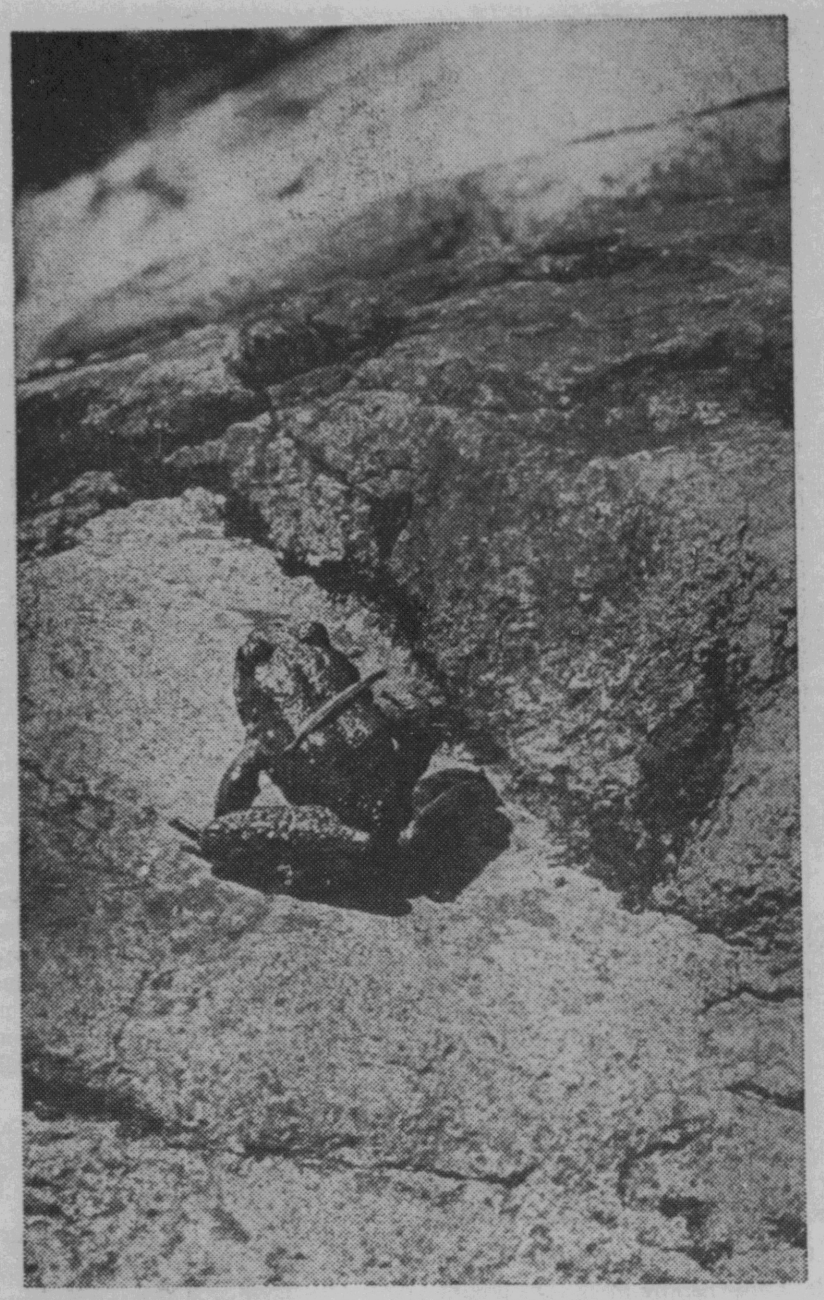


MEADOWS ARE for gamboling, as this group has discovered. Their trail alternately ducks in and out of the forest, with ever-changing views of grasslands, deep woods and the populous valleys of Marin. On weekdays it's possible to walk this trail without meeting another hiker, but on weekends the path becomes a regular thoroughfare.

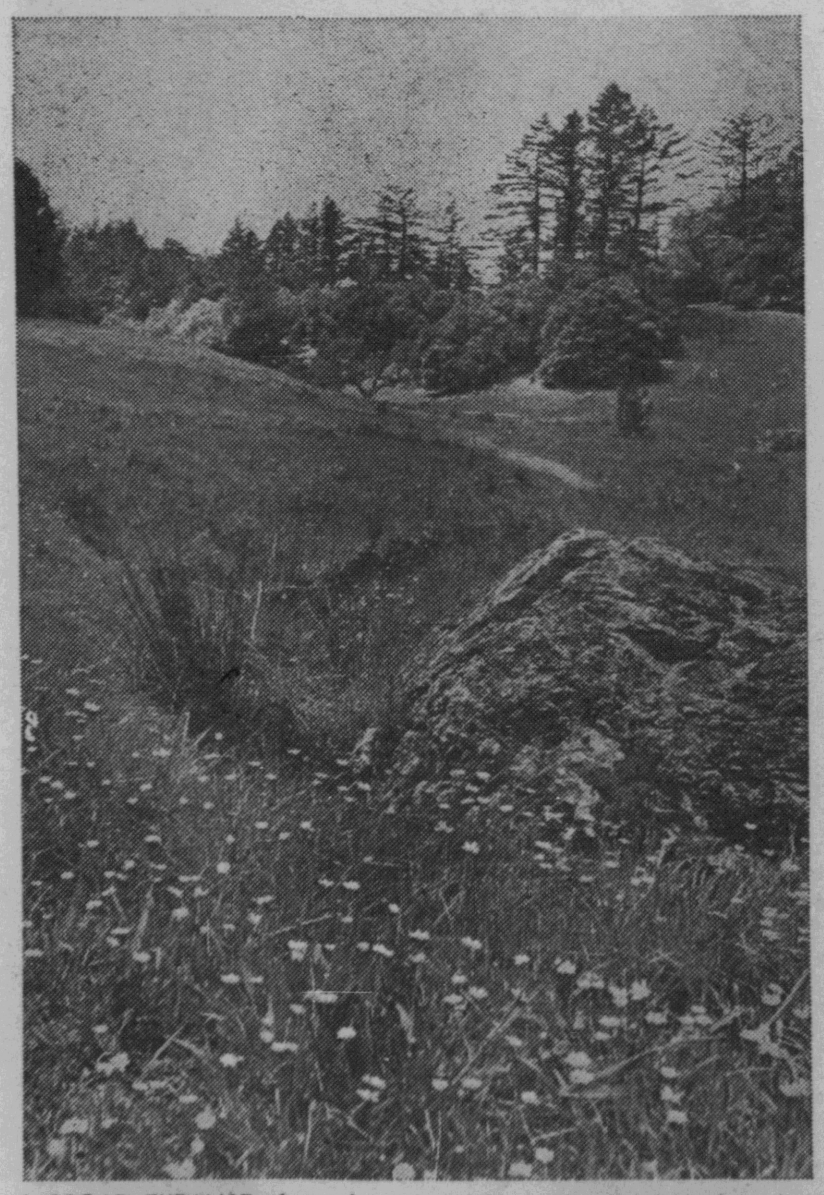
A FOOTBRIDGE leads hikers beneath a rock outcropping near the summit of Mount Tamalpais and affords a view of Belvedere and Tiburon, Angel Island and the East Bay. Visitors to the mountain are fond of carving their initials into the bridge's soft wood.



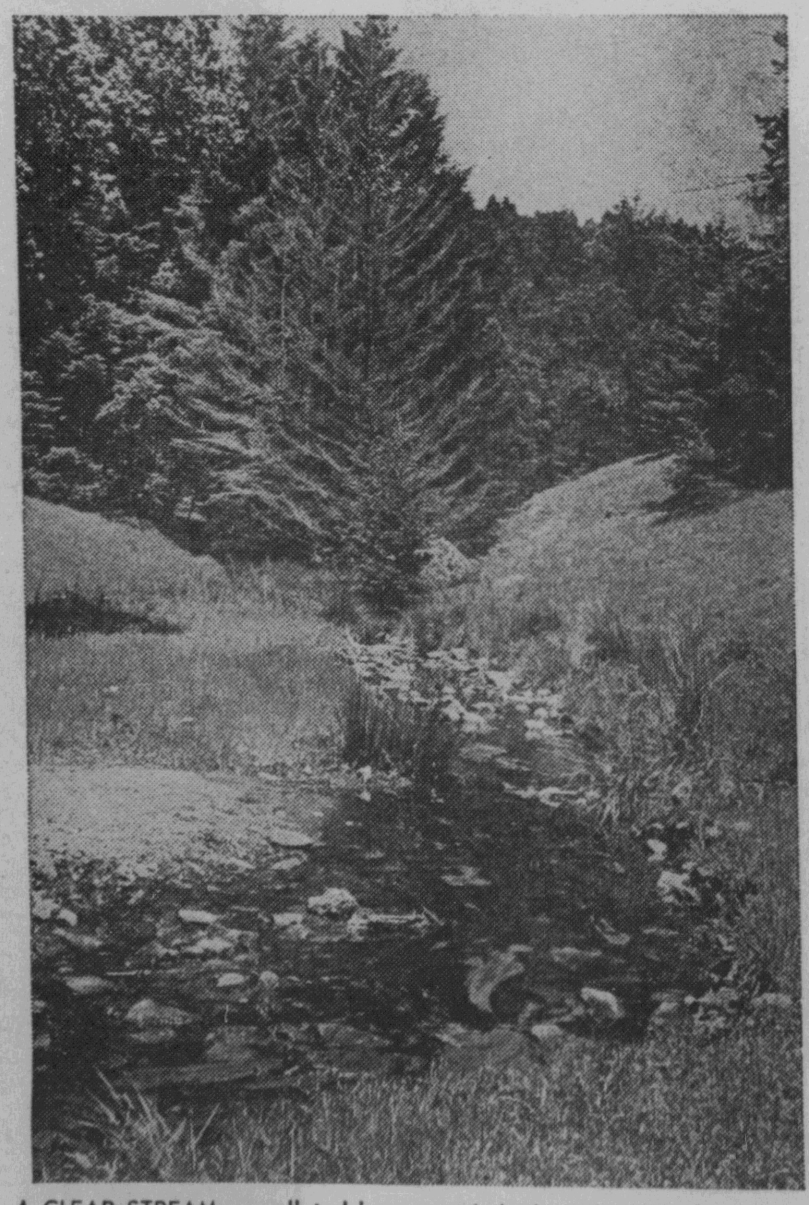
CATARACT CREEK leaps over a rock barrier and tumbles into a pool on its way to Alpine Lake. Great rock cliffs and enormous trees of the gulch seem more characteristic of much higher mountains such as the Sierra Nevada than of the 2,571-foot Mount Tamalpais.



A SMALL FROG suns himself on a rock above a rushing stream, a pine needle balanced on his wet back. The woods and meadows of Mount Tamalpais teem with wildlife, and dozens of species of birds fill the sky. It is one of the treats of hiking.



A BROAD EXPANSE of meadow, ringed by conifers and hardwoods, is seen from this vantage point near Rock Springs. From this humble beginning Cataract Creek tumbles through a canyon down to Alpine Lake and ultimately into Tomales Bay and the Pacific. The last of the spring wildflowers are in bloom now.



A CLEAR STREAM, unpolluted by man, winds down from Barth's Retreat to join Cataract Creek. This peaceful spot lies just a few hundred yards from Ridgecrest Highway and is a favorite spot for picnicking families. To the left, the hills lead to a ridge overlooking a chain of Marin Municipal Water District lakes.

Marin Municipal Water District, a roadless wilderness with fine hiking opportunities. Three of the district's lakes — Alpine, Bon Tempe and Lagunitas — are visible, as is a corner of tiny Phoenix Lake above Ross.

TO THE NORTH, Marin's rolling hills stretch for many miles, melding into Sonoma County on the horizon. Big Rock Ridge, with Novato hidden behind it, lies in the middle distance.

Marin landmarks look like toys 2,500 feet up. An ugly scar betrays San Anselmo's Red Hill. Populous Central Marin, from the Ross Valley to San Rafael, can be seen.

A little further around the mountain new vistas open up — the Richmond-San Rafael Bridge, looking weak and spindly; the East Bay, from Vallejo

Solid lines indicate trails and broken lines the fire roads also used by hikers. on the north to Oakland on the south; and the twin peaks of Mount Diablo near Walnut Creek, higher than Mount Tamalpais but not nearly as impressive.

THE CLOSE relationship between land and water in Southern Marin becomes evident as the trail bends south. Mill Valley, Belvedere, Tiburon and Sausalito, all with their waterfronts, can be seen. San Francisco, looking white on a sunny day, comes into view.

On around the south part of the summit, past a wooden footbridge shamelessly defaced with graffiti and the carved initials of past hikers, the rolling hills of southern Marin can be seen.

This wild and uninhabited land, now a prime site for a state park, once was threatened with dense development. It's difficult to imagine how it would look with a city of 20,000 there, as the developers of Marincello would have had it.

THE TRAIL winds past the aptly named Sunrise Point and returns to the starting point, with fine views of the Pacific and the Golden Gate along the way.

It's almost obligatory to make the summit loop, but purists who object to sharing what should be moments of solitude with hordes of other people may want to do a different kind of mountain-top hike a little further down and to the west.

A one-mile walk around the 2,470-foot middle peak of Mount Tamalpais is almost as breathtaking and quite a bit less crowded. Such a hike could begin either between the saddle between the middle and east peaks or the next gap over between the middle and west peaks, near the radar station.

STARTING AT the latter point, hike north down the Colier Trail to Colier Spring, then cut east, flanking the mountain and crossing numerous rivulets. The trail swings back across the paved road and then plunges down the south side of the mountain on a fire road.

Strolling along here, the sharp-eyed hiker will notice how the hills to the south toward the Golden Gate often are forested on the sides facing north and meadowed on the other sides, with a sharp dividing line on top.

Scientists know this as a common occurrence in mountain land with marginal rainfall (this description fits Marin), and even have names for the phenomena.

South-facing hills, called adret slopes, bear the full brunt of the sun and are much drier — and consequently support less plant life — than north-facing hills, which are known as ubac slopes.

A LITTLE further and the fire road intersects an upslope trail on the right which leads back to the starting point.

These three hikes — meadow, mountain and canyon — are an introduction to the wonder's of Marin's favorite mountain, but by no means present a complete picture.

Hikers whose appetites are whetted by these walks will find deeper satisfaction, perhaps, in a trek through the tree-clad north slope of Tamalpais, where the silence is broken by the sound of few feet.

THE BRONX ZOO

New York City Is The Place To See Rare Wild Creatures

Ever seen a balk uakari? A Bahaman hutia? A Laysan teal or a takin?

All are creatures of the wild whose numbers are diminishing. Not too many people ever see them in their native habitats.

But specimens of each can be observed and studied and enjoyed at the same place where one can see lions, tigers, elephants, giraffes, zebras, rhinoceros and other popular wild animals.

THAT'S AT THE Bronx Zoo in New York City, a zoological park which is known to zoo afficionados around the world as one of the largest and most progressive of its kind.

Visitors to New York City during the warm months should be aware that the Bronx Zoo remains one of the metropolitan area's best entertainment 'buys' for families.

The park's natural physical features lend themselves to a pleasant day's outing. Wide paths, shaded by a variety of trees native to the northeast, wind through 252 acres of wooded and rocky park land where more than 3,000 specimens of wildlife are on exhibit.

Especially for youngsters is the Children's Zoo featuring many smaller animals which children can feed and pet.

Zoos, as other cultural institutions, are undergoing change in two major ways.

First, they are changing physically. Bars and cages holding single animals are rapidly disappearing. Now, where possible, animals are shown in breeding groups in spacious modern exhibits that give visitors an unobstructed view of wildlife in settings resembling wild habitats.

SECOND, ZOOS are changing in concept.

Today more and more people, conscious of the threat that a degraded environment poses to themselves and other living creatures, are increasingly aware that wildlife collections in zoological parks are part of a treasure that must be preserved and protected.

The Bronx Zoo has been traditionally in the forefront as an innovator in the quality of its collection and in pioneering techniques in style of exhibiting captive animals.

More than 30 years ago, for example, the African Plains exhibit area was opened. Here, visitors look out across a grassy plain to a rocky knoll where a pride of lions lazes about. The same view catches a herd of antelope roaming near the lions, but across a moat camouflaged by bushes.

Other exhibits of this type are the Big Bears exhibit, Wolf Wood and the Aquatic Birds building.

THE ROUGH and rocky bear exhibit holds several Brown and Polar bears, each species occupying a section of the exhibit which is separated by sheer rock wall. Visitors see the bears over a moat partially obscured by hedging.

A mountain brook, splashing down a natural water course, enhances the real life setting.

In Wolf Wood, timber wolves move through a wooded area, which is also surrounded by a protective moat.

In the Aquatic Birds building, a variety of birds live their cycle in settings which duplicate natural habitats. So realistic is the environment that many species of birds, which did not breed in wire cages, now routinely build nests and raise young among the real and simulated grasses, mud, rocks, sand and streams of the exhibit areas.

Unique to the Bronx Zoo is the World of Darkness, which represents a new concept in exhibiting nocturnal animals. In the building day is turned into night, allowing visitors to observe creatures whose life cycles revolve around the hours of twilight and night.

THE WORLD of Darkness is the most sophisticated zoological building of its kind.

Recreating an environment so that creatures of the night are active inside the building during normal daylight hours required seven years planning and construction. It is the first time that a variety of nocturnal mammals, birds, reptiles, amphibians and fish can be observed during their waking cycle in habitats that simulate natural surroundings.

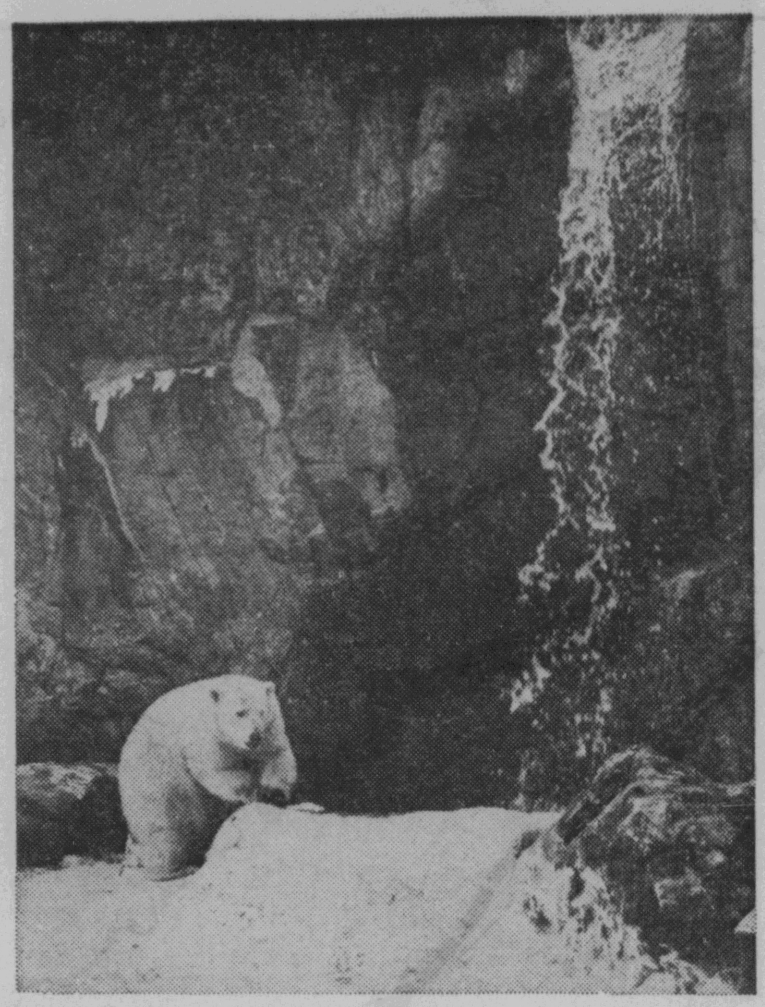
Scheduled for completion next year is the World of Birds, a stunning architectural achievement in which thousands of birds from all over the world will be seen in 24 separate exhibits. One of these is a duplicate of a tropical rain forest through which the public will be able to walk at tree-top level.

Oh yes, a balk uakari is a species of South American monkey that has a short tail, a nearly white coat, a red face and a hairless head.

A Bahaman hutia is a rodent-type animal about 20 inches long, that feeds on fruits, leaves and roots, and is considered arboreal.

A LAYSAN TEAL is a relative of the Mallard duck, but it is found only on one island in the Pacific ocean.

Takins combine the features of the goat and antelope, are a native of the Asian mountains. There are only three takins on exhibit in the Western Hemisphere, all at the Bronx Zoo.



THE POLAR BEAR is one of the very few wild animals that have been known, when hungry, to actually stalk a man. This one, though, was in a playful mood, when photographed at New York City's Bronx Zoo in the Big Bears wildlife exhibit area. The zoo is one of the "musts" for summer-time visitors to New York.

NOTES TO TRAVEL BY

Clairvoyant Deziah has arranged a two-week psychic tour of London for Pan American World Airways with departures June 4 into 1972, and featuring honorary memberships in the Spiritualist Association of London, an initiation into druidism, meetings with England's leading psychics and other attractions for those interested in the occult . . . For European-Bound Young Americans

Here's Some Advice From People Who Live And Work Overseas

THE THREE most popular European cities with youthful American travelers continue to be London, Paris and Rome. At right, uniformed Carabinieri provide a colorful touch to the street scene in Rome. At center, the Eiffel Tower in Paris continues to be the world's most famous man-made landmark. And at right, London still features pomp and tradition that have been its hallmarks for centuries.

(Editor's Note: These tips for young Americans traveling to Europe this year were gathered by United Press International reporters who live and work in the cities and countries covered.)

By LUCINDA L. FRANKS

LONDON (UPI)—A bullfight under a hot Spanish sun. Suckling pig and "boozookie" music in Athens. A journey into the publands of East London where a Cockney will acquaint you with the Pearly Kings of yesterday.

The spring-summer migration of the young to Europe has begun and most places, from Copenhagen to Tangiers, have made it easy for the wanderer to do the most for the least money.

In Amsterdam, you can get a bed for 72 cents a night. A train ride from West to Communist East Berlin costs less than a dime and if you run out of food money in Munich, just tour a brewery and get free sausage and beer.

But keep one thing in mind. If you get caught with hash, acid or any other kind of drug, your stay in Europe may last longer than you planned.

Without exception, European countries are cracking down on drug use and customs and police will be on the lookout this summer for foreigners bringing in the stuff.

In France, no differentiation is made between hard and soft drugs and the penalty for even attempting to buy drugs is from 2 to 20 years in prison, with no suspended sentences. There are currently 10 Americans serving jail sentences for drug possession in Morocco. Even in Turkey and the Spanish island of Ibiza, both one-time hash havens, drug raids, are continuous.

LONDON is the most popular starting off point for continental travelers. Bed and breakfast hotels for about one pound fifty pence ($3.60) are plentiful in Susse Gardens and Kensington, and the pubs, with sausages and steak and kidney pie are good, cheap places to eat.

There are rock concerts in Hyde Park every weekend,. where you'll meet a slice of London's young cosmopoliton population —Indian, Australians, European, North American —and where the vibes are generally good. The Roundhouse Theatre in Chalk Farm offers experimental plays, living theater, and rock and light shows.

London's discotheques are good but expensive —generally two pounds ($5.80) to get in and a few extra shillings on the crinks. The fancier ones, complete with go-go girls and dining areas, include the Pheasantrie on the King's Road, and Annabelle's. For a less formal atmosphere and costumes ranging from hot pants to painted bosoms, try Hatchett's in Piccadilly or Samantha's off Regent Street.

One of the best ways to learn about the British is to take a pub crawl around the heavily cockney areas in London's East End. "The Prospect of Whitby" on the south London docks and "Dirty Dick's" in Liverpool Street are two picturesque old pubs where you might meet a Cockney who still has pearls on his jacket and a grandfather who was once king of the street.

IN DUBLIN, the heart of society for both young and old is in the pub. At the "Old Bailey," where James Joyce used to drink and at other pubs around Grafton Street, you will meet the worker as well as the artist and writer. The city is filled with literary history, from George Bernard Shaw's birthplace in Synge Street to Joyce's Martell Tower from his classic "Ulysses." You will find the Irish eager to get to know you and ready to buy you a drink at the nod of your hat. Try Zhivago Club and the River Club for a night of dancing, storytelling and beer. Youth hostels, for a little more than a dollar a night, are scattered about the country.

IN ROME, it is still possible to live on $5 a day, but to make sure the trip is not a flop, allow for $10. Travel by bus — it is cheap and efficient — and east at the smaller family-owned trattorias.

A lot of the city is free. The Colosseum costs nothing nor do many of the other historic and archeological sights. But beware of the paperback guides of Rome. Restaurant and hotel owners usually jack up their prices in anticipation of the rush of tourists waving their economy guides.

The night clubs are good and one of Europe's best discotheques, Scarabocchio, has live acid rock, strobe lights, and a swinging crowd for only $1.50 cover charge. Some rock spots, however, are clip joints and the best rule is to follow Italian kids to where they go. The Bohemian crowd hangs out on the steps of the Piazza di Spagna and the nearby Via Margutta Cafe.

THE MOST expensive city in Europe is Paris. In order not to fall into tourist traps, make your first stop the American Center of Students and Artists on 261 Avenue Raspail on the Left Bank. It will provide you with a meal for about five francs (90 cents) and find you a reasonably priced room.

A hotel should cost no more than 30 francs ($5.50) per night but it will be hard to find. The best place to look is around the Sorbonne University and the Rue des Ecoles on the Left Bank.

One colorful restaurant which has a mixed clientele of artists, writers and students is Julien on 16 Fauborg St. Denis where the most expensive item on the menu is four francs (75 cents), and a liter of very drinkable wine is an unmatched 1.60 francs (30 cents).

SCANDINAVIA, where even the public bathrooms are done in bright colors and modern design, has many attractions. Copenhagen is to many the most colorful Nordic city. With dozens of discotheques and cafes, it is a place for the young.

Before or after dinner, try Hvid's Vinstue opposite the Royal Theatre. It's over 200 years old and a meeting place for Danes of all trades —civil servants, students, shopgirls, and poets. Have the new and spicy "akkeleje" snaps, a liqueur which is very strong and very popular.

For traditional smorgasbord at relatively reasonable prices, try the spread of quaint inns outside the city (in town it can be expensive). But if you are a real gourmet, don't miss the Oesterport Hotel which features a multi-course meal for less than $10.

There are plenty of stag night spots —Adam and Eva, Palmehaven and Club 10 are fun for both sexes and Fingerbollet offers dancing, a good dinner and lots of local atmosphere.

The most beautiful places in Denmark are outside Copenhagen. Visit Hamlet's castle in Elsinore and Hans Christian Andersen's home in Odense.

STOCKHOLM has an abundance of nightlife; it's a city for the young and yet so safe that even Premier Olaf Palme rides the subway. There are discotheques — and pornography shops —at every street corner and good though expensive restaurants. The YMCA has four hostels in the city where you can get a bed for about $1.80.

The Swedish island of Gotland in the Baltic Sea is a choice scenic spot with youth hostels for less than a dollar a night, and several camping sites.

IN NORWAY, don't miss the mountain chalets and fiords of the western 4coast. Kristiansand, Kragero and Risor are quaint towns on the southern coast and Hankoe has become an "in" place for youth to congregate. In Oslo, go to the Dovrehallen or Valentes Clubs and visit the Holmenkollen ski jumping hill and the Akershus castle. One tip: Hotel accommodations in Oslo are impossible to find during the summer months; make reservations ahead of time.

IN AMSTERDAM, the Release Foundation for Youth Aid has published a pamphlet for young tourists, a detailed description of where the city is really at. It aims to do away with such myths as "hash is legal in Amsterdam . . . police wear flowers in their hair . . . sex in the street is prohibited during rush hours only."

The cost of living is almost as high in Amsterdam as in New York but the Youth Tourism Foundation recently completed special hostels that charge only 70 cents a night. Sleeping in the Dam Square and neighboring streets has been banned.

MUNICH AND Berlin are the most interesting cities in Germany. In West Berlin, you can take a nine-cent ride on the Communist-run elevated railway into East Berlin. The west side of the city is gaining attention with several combination spots like "Belle de Jour" which has works of art for sale alongside hotpants and minis and turns into a discotheque at night.

Some Advice For The Younger Travelers Headed For Europe

In Munich, visit ancient Bavarian castles outside the city, and at night hit the German youth scene at the discotheques Blow Up and The Big Apple in the Schwabing District.

AUSTRIANS describe Vienna as the ideal place for the "silent majority of young people." It is usually bypassed by the summer hippie migrants and such is the sparsity of the latter that a woman called the police last summer when a young man appeared bare-chested in front of the downtown Theseus Temple.

Young people who go to Vienna usually are high on sports or culture. Favorite places are the alpine regions for mountaineering and the Salzburg Festival for art and music lovers. There are four student hostels for about $1.40 a night, and an idyllic baroque palace for students in the Vienna Woods.

Vienna is the ideal starting point for tours of Eastern Europe, with hydrofoil boats going up the Danube River to Bratislava, Czechoslovakia and Budapest.

IN ZURICH, the young flock the Odeon Cafe opposite Bellevue Square or the Select Cafe 100 yards away. Rooms are expensive in Switzerland so avoid the hotels and stay at one of the many youth hostels scattered around the country. Zurich offers a good hostel at Mutschellenstrasse 114 at about $1.20 a night, and an excellent, inexpensive restaurant, the "Karl der Grosse," where a cohplete meal costs 50 cents to $1.

FOR SUN AND exotic surroundings, go south. In Athens, take boat trips to the numerous Greek Isles and set up camp in the old city, the Plaka. Situated around the base of the Acropolis, it has narrow roads and "boozookie" music played on lyres, sometimes in the streets.

The Plaka offers a fascinating market, the Monasteraiki, with trinket shops and local craftsmen. You can eat suckling pig, moussaka and grilled meat all at $1 or less a dish at Xino's Restaurant. For a different culinary experience, visit a restaurant in Turkolimino, the old Turkish area of Piraeus, and choose your own prawns, red mullet and other fish of the Mediterranean.

VALUE FOR your money makes Madrid one of Europe's favorite capitals for the budget traveler. Providing the lowest prices in the continent for accommodation, food and drink, the city is an open invitation tc splurge.

The streets leading off the Santa Ana Square are a beehive of activity with wine shops, taverns, and cafes selling a cup of coffee for 10 cents and a glass of wine for five.

Stop at the Restaurant Botin in Puerta Cerrada, an old haunt os Ernest Hemingway's, for suckling pig or roast baby lamb. On the Calle Echegaray in the Bar Sevillano a guitarist and singer pass their hats after a flamenco performance. A tip on bullfights: The good seats are in the shade at an average 400 pesatas ($5.80). Take a seat in the sun at half that price and get a free suntan.

PORTUGAL, with its excelshoreline, constant sun, and primitive adobe villages, is one of the best European countries for the traveler who wants to get away from the hub of the city. There are camping sites throughout the country as well as clean, pleasant pensaos (lodging houses) where you can get bed and breakfast for under $20.

Two of the best camping sites are Monsanto Park and Costa da Caparica, the latter next to a 20-mile stretch of white, empty beach. The water is generally cold except on the Algarve coast in the south which is most popular with tourists.

Don't hitchhike or wear hotpants in Portugal. Hitchhiking is rare and for that reason often unsafe. Hotpants are not worn by Portuguese women and therefore the young men, when they see them, think the worst.

MOROCCO with its deserts and Arab culture fascinates many travelers. The most scenic way to get there is by ferry to Tangiers from Gibraltar. Meals, mainly mutton and rice, start at about 50 cents and hotels charge $1-$2 a night throughout the country.

Nightclubs are reasonable. Two dollars will buy you a drink and a floor show as well. Good roads and frequent bus and train shuttles make it easy to get from town to town. Marrakech, Casablanca, Rabat, and Fez are the most popular towns with long markets full of inexpensive wares.

MOST YOUNG TRAVELERS who include Vienna in their itineraries are enticed there by its cultural and sports attractions. But Vienna can also be fun, as symbolized here by the carousel in its popular Prater amusement park.

Three Rare Fish

Three long-nosed hawkfish, one of the world's rarest creatures, are now on exhibit at New York City's Aquarium in Coney Island. Marine scientists say only nine hawkfish have been caught in the last 113 years. Those now at the New York Aquarium were found off Hawaii.

AMERICA'S GREAT national parks remain a popular tourist destination with millions of Americans. And Yellowstone National Park is rivaled only by California's own Yosemite National Park in popularity. At Yellowstone, natural wonders are the attraction, be they geysers erupting into the air, or the wild animal life such as these moose that flourish in the huge park.

America's Herbicide Policy: Spray Now And Pay Later

THE WITHERING RAIN by Thomas Whiteside; Dutton, 224 pages, $6.95.

By DON KEOWN

It is entirely possible that in retrospect the historians will look back upon our times and honor as the greatest Americans, not our politicians, our generals or even our scientists, but instead that handful of crusaders who have sought to set some brakes upon a runaway technology — the Rachel Carsons and the Ralph Naders.

Thomas Whiteside is a name that belongs upon that list, although he is not yet of the same stature as its pioneering leaders.

So far Whiteside is something less than a household word with Americans, although readers of The New Yorker will recognize his name as that of a determined and persistent campaigner against the use of hazardous herbicides in Vietnam in the ill-conceived and reckless defoliation operations, and in our own land. Now Whiteside continues his attack upon those policies in his book "The Withering Rain: America's Herbicidal Folly."

Whiteside's targets remain the 2,4,5-T and 2,4-D compounds, particularly the former.

Both are members of the complex and largely untested polychlorinated phenolic family of chemicals, and alone or in combination the two were dumped upon Vietnamese soil to the extent of 40,000 tons covering approximately one-tenth the total land area of our supposed ally, South Vietnam, and including a half million acres of croplands, before one of the rashest and cruelest programs in modern warfare's brutal history was called to a tardy halt.

And to prove the full scope of its stupidity, American society then continued to permit some use of these exceedingly toxic substances upon our own environment and in household products.

"What was manifestly involved in the subject I was looking into was an astonishing — really, a shocking — laxity in proper standards for the manufacture and use of a broad range of highly complex chemicals put out by big chemical companies and showered into the environment and brought into close contact with human beings without adequate prior testing in the laboratory for potential adverse effects on man, on animals, and on aquatic and plant life," summarizes Whiteside.

And: "I was dismayed to discover what seemed to me to be a thoroughgoing failure on the part of government regulatory agencies to set or enforce proper standards of safety for a huge number of what are officially classified as 'economic poisons.'"

When belated tests did finally make known the frightening teratological perils of 2,4,5-T, its manufacturers came up with a reply that underscores the irresponsibility that too often has attended the herbicide and pesticide trade.

The 2,4,5-T used in this testing, it was asserted, was contaminated, by a substance known as dioxin. And it was this dioxin, not the 2,4,5-T itself, that posed a teratological hazard.

What Whiteside discloses is that dioxin is present in at least minute amounts in all 2,4,5-T. That unlike 2,4,5-T itself, dioxin does not break down rapidly, but is stubbornly stable in the soil and quite possibly accumulative in animal tissue. And "the substance is of such potency that its release even in small concentrations must prompt deep concern." When it became apparent that our awakened national conscience could no longer tolerate the use in Vietnam of 2,4,5-T in combination with 2,4-D (its own alleged nontoxicity to humans unproven and suspect, according to Whiteside), then manufacturers hit upon another agent to mix with 2,4-D to form a defoliant.

The choice was picloram, and Whiteside describes it as "one of the most persistent and long-lived of all herbicides."

Four Department of Agriculture scientists had warned that "minute amounts of this potent herbicide irrigated on sensitive crops could have disastrous results," and even in spray-happy America its use on food crops had been banned. Thus, notes Whiteside, we had the uneasy spectacle of one iniompletely tested chemical being replaced by another incompletely tested chemical for the dousing of the land of the hapless Vietnamese.

Whiteside records how a program that began with the ironical purposes of "to improve the country's economy by permitting freer communications as well as to facilitate the Vietnamese Army's task of keeping these avenues free of Viet Cong harassments" shifted into an uglier phase of calculated crop devastation in an effort to induce local famine, certain to hit civilian women and children first since during any wartime food shortage the fighting men's needs receive priority.

He tells, too, how with the reluctant cessation of the poisoning of Vietnam's jungles, countryside and fields, greater supplies of these herbicides were released for use upon our own land. And of how our government again responded slowly and ineffectively with restrictions that hardly restricted at all.

Whiteside's book is a strange one in that his text occupies far less than half the 224 pages, and much of that has been printed before in The New Yorker, some of it as letters to the editors. The remainder of the book consists of appendices — statements and documents dealing with the subject, reprinted verbatim. But the inclusions are truly relevant and not mere padding — such as the December, 1969, rpoert of a U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare Commission that "prior to 1963, the Food and Drug Administration did not require evaluation of teratogenicity (fetus-deforming propensities). As a result of the thalidomide disaster, the need for data on teratogenicity became evident."

Yet even while Bionetics Research Laboratories of Litton Industries was conducting under a 1965-68 contract for the National Cancer Institute tests that eventually showed "2,4,5-T was clearly teratogenic as evidenced by production of statistically increased proportions of litters affected and increased proportions of abnormal fetuses within litters" in both mice and rats, the use os the suspected vkrbicide had zoomed in Southeast Asia and in the U.S., and continued thereaft-the use of the suspected herbicide had zoomed in Southeast Asia and in the U.S., and continued thereafter.

And Dr. Lee A. DuBridge, science adviser to the President, even as he was announcing in late 1969 a belated decision to restrict the use of 2,4,5-T as a weedkiller in this country still attempted to minimize the danger and damage by claiming that "it seems improbable that any person could receive harmful amounts of this chemical from any of the existing uses of 2,4,5-T."

That same year a resolution from the Council of the American Association for the Advancement of Science concluded "that 2,4,5-T is probably dangerous to man, and that 2,4-D is potentially dangerous to man... (and) there is a possibility that the use of herbicides in Vietnam is causing birth malformations among infants of exposed mothers."

And Dr. Arthur W. Galston, the Yale biologist and botanist, testified before a congressional committee that "2,4,5-T is one of the most teratogenic chemicals known. I suggest that its teratogenicity is such that even its use in such apparently innocuous domestic matters as clearing brush from powerlines is undesirable."

Whiteside has some specific recommendations for preventing reoccurences of the foolhardy 2,4,5-T gambit. One would be a re-definition of the weapons of chemical warfare banned by the Geneva Convention to make it clear defoliating agents are covered. Another would be a shifting of priorities for testing such substances, so that the burden of proof of their safety would rest upon the manufacturers before they could be put into general use. Now a dangerous toxicity must be established to the government's satisfaction if products already in use are to be removed — after injury has already been done.

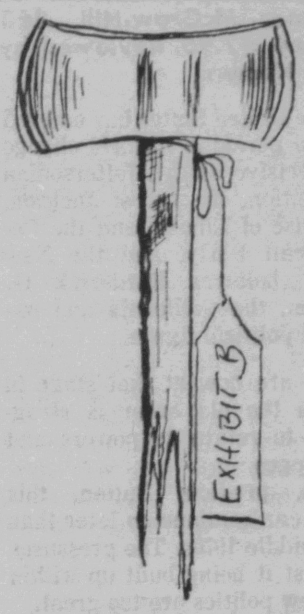
And finally, Whiteside suggests that governmental agencies charged with protecting the public welfare in these circumstances have performed poorly. They are undermanned, ill-equipped, limited in authority, and lacking in will to use the powers and the tools they do possess. The author urges a complete revamping of the system so that the public safety is truly safeguarded.

Despite some misgivings over the method Whiteside has used in compiling his book, its subject matter is of such overriding improtance that we feel everyone — including those who have already seen the New Yorker articles — should read and ponder "The Withering Rain."

Working with an antagonistic industry and an often uncooperative government, Whiteside nonetheless has succeeded in compiling a damning case. And in making it clear that brakes are as essential as an engine for the steamroller that is technology, if society is not to be run over and mangled by its uncontrolled momentum.

Sleuths & Suspense

THE LATE BILL SMITH by Andrew Garve; Harper & Row, $5.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.



The jacket for Andrew Garve's newest novel quotes from our review of one of his earlier books:

"Andrew Garve is one of those elite among the authors of suspense novels who have built up sizable and faithful followings of readers. Versatility and consistency are his hallmarks. No two of his novels are alike in setting, in tone, in plot. But they are invariably well written and entertaining."

All of which can be said again, after reading "The Late Bill Smith."

Bill Smith is a salesman for an international steel firm, and for reasons unknown to him he has become the target of assassins. In his efforts to escape the would-be killers and ultimately to uncover their motive and end the threat, he has the help of Sue Hammond, a young escort for a London travel agency.

The story begins and ends in England, but involves a cruise into the Aegean, a pretended suicide and some international Cold War shenanigans.

The whole thing reads smoothly as Garve performs with his customary competence, although in a bit lighter vein than usual.

STEPHEN GREENE Press of Brattleboro, Vt., has published two softcover collections of cartoons by British humorists, Terence Parkes' "Man in Motion" continuing the uncaptioned antics and frustrations of the central figure of his "Man in Apron" and other books, and Alex Graham's "Daughter in the House" picturing the plight of today's parents of teen-age girls. The witty books sell for $1.25 each.

POCKET BOOKS (Simon & Schuster) has issued a 95-cent paperback reprint of Liz Carpenter's "Ruffles and Flourishes" account of life in the White House.

Snug Deck Enhances Any House

It's Practical Whether Lot Is Level Or Slopes Sharply

Tucked into a cozy but neglected corner of a house, a small deck can offer a secluded sitting room just off a master bedroom. It's only one of many ways decks add to home livability.

A private deck for a guest room, with built-in wood benches, will add to visitors comfort and make their stay more memorable.

And for a family's outdoor summer living or informal entertaining, a 10-by-20-foot deck of two-by-four-inch Douglas fir or western cedar adds many pleasant hours.

RAILINGS COMBINED with benches help avoid the clutter of too many chairs, and a louvered wind baffle or screen is welcome where gusts are bothersome.

Often overlooked is the charm and usefulness of a firepit in a deck. This is simply a square or round hole lined with brick, and with a gravel bottom.

The simple post construction of decks allows them to be added anywhere, whether the lot is level, or slopes down or up from the house. It's a simple matter of making the posts longer or stepping the deck up two or three levels as needed.

ONE FAMILY added a small deck in an ell of the house off their master bedroom, gaining enjoyment of space unused before because of the lot's slope at that corner.

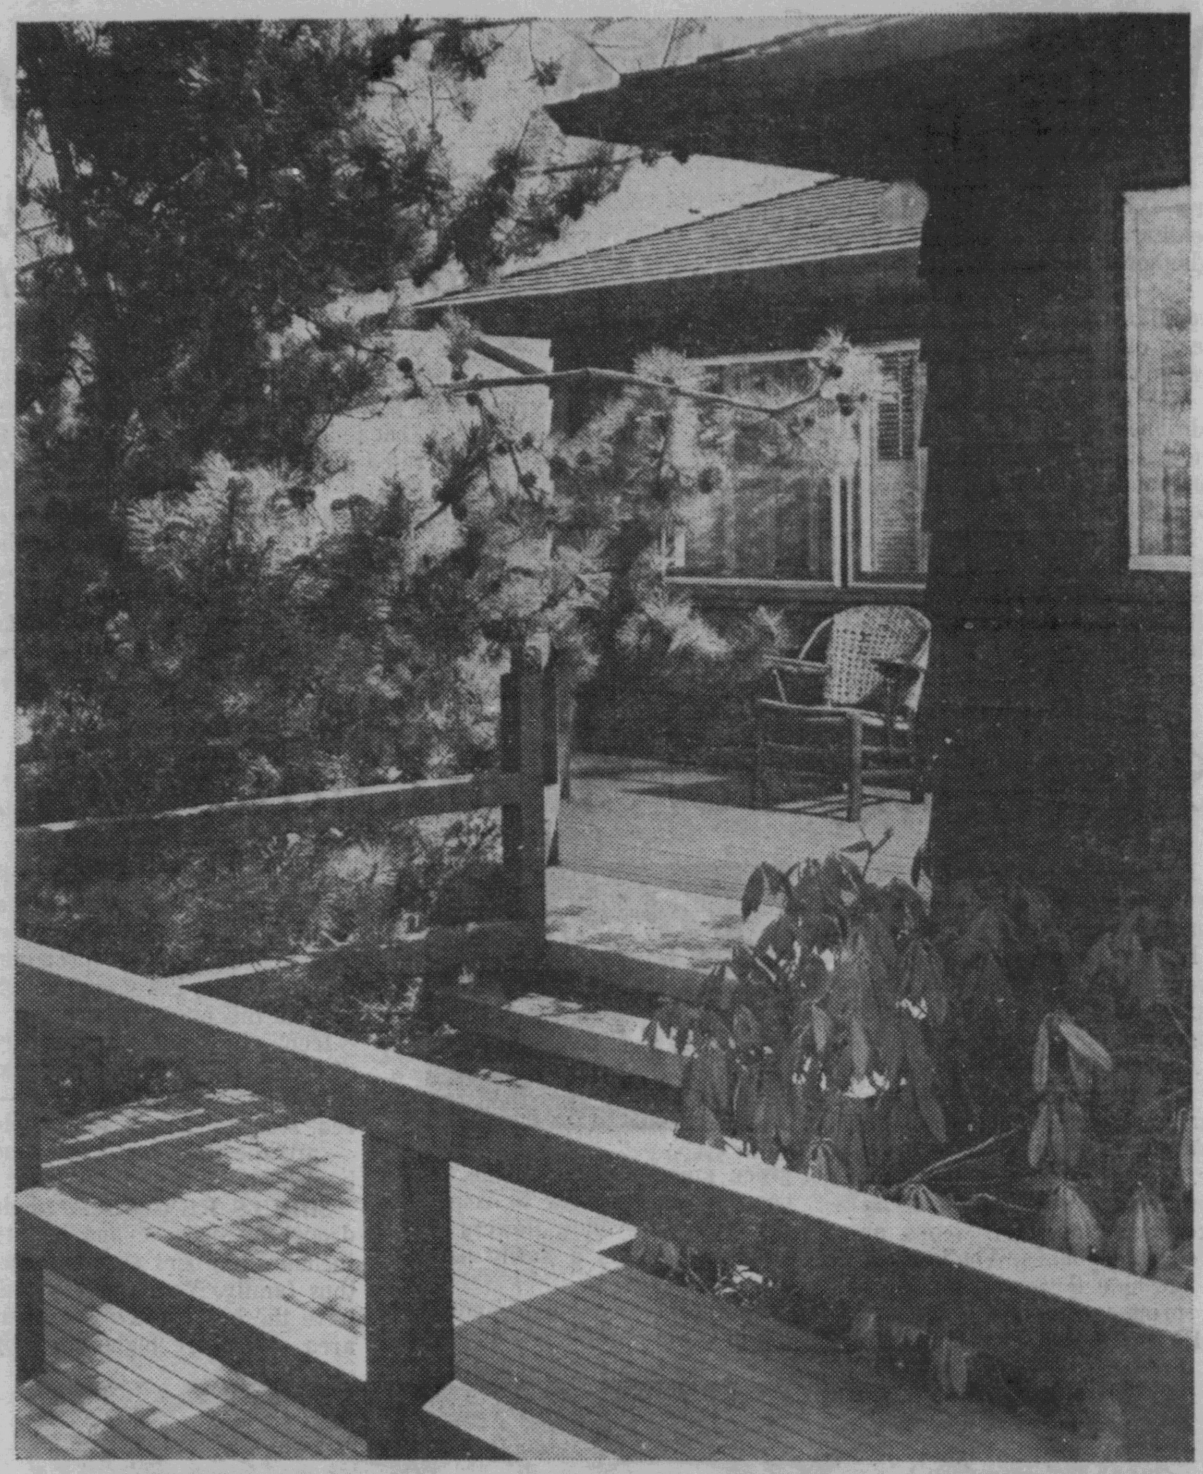
Access to the pool from this deck was gained by extending a walkway of two-by-four-inch fir, with four-by-four-inch post railing, along the back of the house.

Another outdoor living area is a pavilion attached to the house or garage, or built freestanding in the yard. Not elaborate, the pavilion is like a roofed deck, with screens for use when bugs are bothersome.

Cabinets may be built into one end of t pavilion and the roof makes it a perfect winter storage area for yard furniture, mowers and gardening euipment.

THIS CAN release carport or garage space badly needed for the automobile, or for other purposes.

And it is more convenient, too, to have the rake, the lawn chairs or the extra hose close on hand, when you need them.



A SECLUDED DECK for the master bedroom of this home has been tucked into the ell of the house, where contorta pine blocks the breezes and adds privacy. The deck overhangs a sharp drop at the end of the yard, and is connected to the swimming pool by a walkway. Two-by-four-inch Douglas tir deck, steps and walk are all stained a caramel shade.

What U.L. Label Means To You

Wise consumers have learned to look for the Underwriters' Laboratories label on electrical appliances, but few people are aware of its full scope.

U.L. labels can also be found on marine equipment, burglar-resistant safes, roofing, and thousands of other products examined and tested by Underwiriters' Laboratories each year.

The 77-year-old, not-for-profit organization has six testing departments: burglary protection and signaling; casualty and chemical hazards; electrical; fire protection; heating, air conditioning and refrigeration; and marine, covering more than 1,200 categories of products, methods and systems.

THE PURPOSE of Underwriters' Laboratories — an independent organization — is to prevent accidents, loss of life and property by investigating and testing, and setting standards for safety.

Products that pass the Underwriters' Laboratories tests are awarded the UL lable, which is not a guarantee or a warranty, but an indication that a sample, or prototype, of the product has met specific requirements.

A follow-up program provides for periodic inspection of U.L.-labeled products in the factory or on the sales floor, since their continued inclusion in the Laboratories' Listing Service depends on compliance with the requirements.

TO ESTABLISH requirements, Underwriters' Laboratories created five engineering councils whose members include authorities on public safety and experts in each of the councils' special fields. There is also a 60-member consumer advisory council that serves as an information pipeline to and from the public.

Advisory council mmembers represent trade unions, consumer magazines, retail merchants, consumer organizations and other groups that speak for the public.

Since there are several U.L. testing categories, a product may bear more than one label. A safe, for example, may have a U.L. Fire Classification C label and also a relocking device label.

Another example of multiple listing is roofing.

ASPHALT SHINGLES bearing the UL Class C label for fire resistance may also have the U.L. wind-resistant label. These classifications are combined on one label. The Class C label indicates the roofing will not ignite easily, will not spread fire quickly, and will not add to fire hazard by emitting burning brands that can create other fires. Asphalt shingles with the U.L. Class B or A label afford even greater protection.

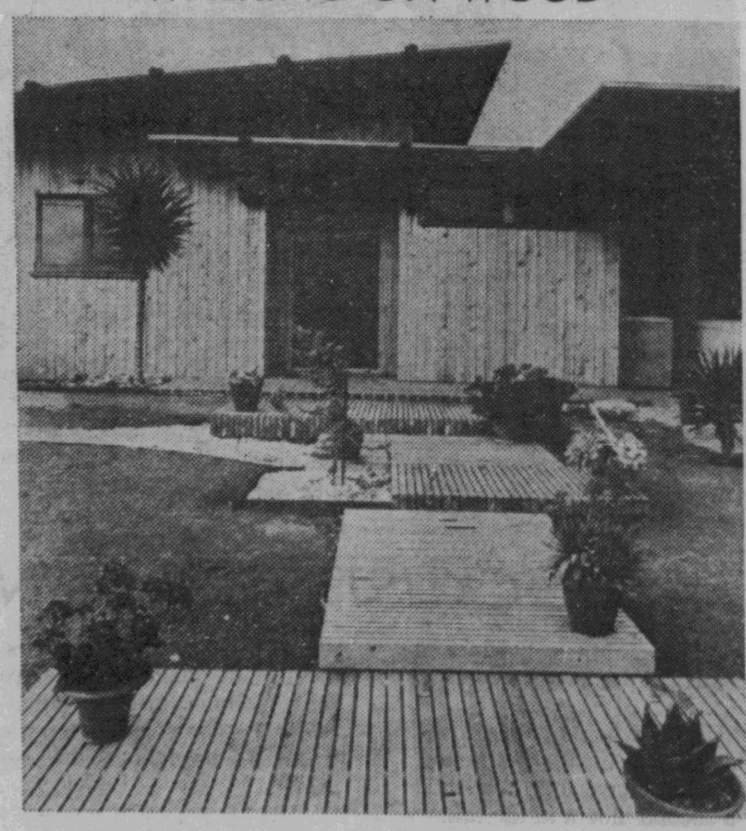
To merit the U.L. wind resistant label, singles must withstand 60 mile-per-hour winds for two hours without lifting a single tab.

Responsible consumers guided in their purchases by the U.L. label must also take reasonable care of the products — read the appliance instructions and follow them; lock the safe door and keep the combination a secret; and refrain from walking around on the asphalt shingle roof — it's designed to resist fire, wind and rain for as long as 25 years,

Blonde Finish

For a blonde mahogany finish on raw wood, apply a commercial bleach according to directions. Rinse and, when dry, sand. Dust carefully. Use a synthetic sealer or thinned white shellac. Fill with neutral wood filler. Apply another coat of sealer, then varnish.

WALKING ON WOOD



INEXPENSIVE WALKS can be constructed of wood to add distinction to the entrance to a home, be it in the city or at the beach, where the house shown above is located. Other ideas for walkways and decks built of western woods can be obtained in a full-color, eight-page booklet available free from the Wood Products Industry Fund, 1240 Bayshore Highway, Burlingame, Calif., 94010.

The Handyman's Pages

THE BOAT that you build yourself may not be a yacht, but it is certain to be a craft in which you will take special pleasure. There is something about boatbuilding as a do-it-yourself enterprise that captures the enthusiasm of the entire family, both while the project is underway, and while it is being enjoyed, after completion. For the full-size Little Ramber Boat Pattern 147 that will enable you to construct the craft seen on the left, send $1.50 (another 25 cents if you desire air mail service) to Steve Ellingson, San Rafael Independent-Journal Pattern Department, Post Office Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif., 91409. The principal material is plywood. It is 11 and a half feet long, and more than 50 inches wide at the middle. With three seats, it can accommodate three or four people. And it is so light that two people can carry it. Either an outboard motor or oars may be used to move the boat.

Adding A Touch Of The Colonial

Colonial is an almost commonplace architectural style in northeastern United States.

But out here on the West Coast, it is seen infrequently.

Thus, when it does appear, it attracts far more attention than it would in New England, and lends a special distinction to the home.

Your house may not now be "colonial." But you can give a colonial look to the front entry of almost any traditional-styled house with a few linear feet of western wood moldings and three pieces of lumber.

To "colonialize" a plain flush door, frames made of molding and applied to the door with glue and brads do the job quickly.

But for a more complete Colonial entry, addition of two one-by-12-inch boards faced with spaced vertical strips of half-round molding and skirted with a crown molding creates the look of classic columns.

Finishing the entry is a simple matter of adding a horizontal one-by-12-inch board capped with a crown treatment across the top of the door and "columns". This board may be left plain or face-trimmed with moldings.

Identical crown treatments may be repeated above exterior windows. For further continuity, combinations of western lumber and moldings make attractive fixed-in-place shutters.

SOPHIA LOREN and John Gavin star in "A Breath of Scandal," the tale of a beautiful Viennese princess who meets a handsome, romantic American under comprising conditions. The movie will be re-shown Sunday at 9 p.m. on Channels 7 and 11.

Hitchcock Honor

Alfred Hitchock was awarded the rank of "Chevalier" in the French National Order of the Legion of Honor.

TV NOTES

By JACK GAVER

Film star Rock Hudson will participate in his first tlelvision series during the coming season. He recently completed filming a two-hour movie-for-video, "McMillan and Wife," for airing on NBC's "World Premiere" program in the fall. That will spin off three or four 90-minute shows using the same title and principal characters, with Hudson continuing to play a San Francisco police commissioner with a perky wife.

The synthetic "laugh track" has been abandoned for the new season for ABC's "The Odd Couple" as result of a poll of viewers, who were overwhelmingly against it. Henceforth, the comedy series will be filmed before studio audiences, whose reactions will be used for the weekly broadcasts.

David Frost is putting in a busy spring and summer. The host of the syndicated Westinghouse five-a-week talk program continues with that while taking on a stout schedule of nightclub appearances from May through August in such places as Toronto, Wallingford, Conn., Columbia, Md., Kiamesh Lake, N.Y., Lake Tahoe and Las Vegas, Nev.

John Banner, the German sergeant in "Hogan's Heroes" for its many seasons, has a new job now that that series has ended. He will have the role of Uncle Lazlo in "The Chicago Teddy Bears," a new half-hour comedy dealing with the turbulent 1920s in the Second City. CBS will slot it in the 8-8:30 p.m. Friday space in the fall.

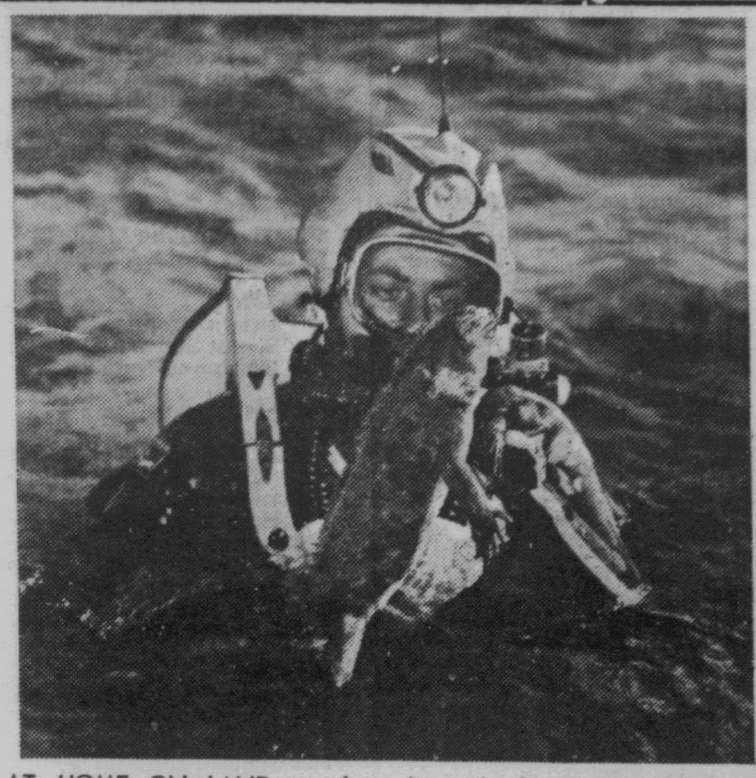
No Rush To Color

Color television is making slow progress in Denmark. Less than 30,000 color television licenses had been issued by the end of 1970. Citizens holding black and white licenses numbered 1,300,000.



AT HOME ON LAND or deep beneath the waves, this unique creature, the Marine Iguana, is the subject of "The Dragons of Galapagos," an episode in the award-winning "The Undersea World of Jacques Cousteau," series. The special will be repeated Monday at 7:30 p.m. on Channels 7 and 11.

New On The Stereo Scene

By WILLIAM D. LAFFLER

Buffy Sainte-Marie is a great singer when she is serious and she adds something extra when she shows her sense of humor.

Her latest album, "She Used to Wanna Be a Ballerina" (Vanguard VSD-7931), is good listening from beginning to end.

Buffy wrote five of the songs, including the album title number. Among the seven others are compositions by Neil Young, Leonard Cohen and Gerry Coffin.

"Moratorium," one of Buffy's contributions, describes the frustration of a GI who finds on his return from the battlefield that he cannot get a date with a girl back home because his hair is too short.

Buffy moves to the sentimental side with "Sweet September Morning" and reflects pride in her American Indian heritage with the title song from the movie, "Soldier Blue."

Neil Young's song, "Helpless," is something of a throwback in this rock age to the old pop music and has a good chance of hitting the charts, if Buffy's handling of the lyrics is an indicator.

SUSAN RAYE hasn't been around as long as Miss Sainte-Marie but she has established herself in the country music field even though she is a city girl from Oregon.

Young Susan currently has a hit song in "L.A. International Airport" and should produce another with "Willy Jones," her new album (Capitol ST-736).

Susan doesn't have the twang that ordinarily is a trademark of the country and western singer but her voice contains a fresh innocence that suggest wide open spaces.

Although "Willy Jones" and "L.A. International Airport" are the standouts in this album, there are other good numbers including Susan's own song, "Baby Sittin' With Baby."

BUCK OWNES, who gave Susan the big helping hand on her way to recognition, is well represented.

He wrote "Willy Jones," "Heartbreak Mountain," "In the Arms of Love," "Happy Times Are Here Again," "Merry Go-Round of Love" and "Hello Happiness, Goodbye Loneliness."

The Robert Youngs Like Country Living

By VERNON SCOTT

Robert Young lives in three separate worlds: as Dr. Marcus Welby in his television series, a country squire near San Diego and a suburbanite in Beverly Hills.

Viewers of his ABC series see Young as a widower living comfortably enough when he isn't involved with the dramatic traumas of his patients.

This life style is contrary to Young's true day-to-day living.

WHEN THE SHOW is in production he and his wife Betty, married almost 40 years, live in a two-story Pennsylvania Dutch-style stucco house with fieldstone walls and a shake roof.

They moved there "temporarily" 28 years ago, and have added rooms from time to time. It is an immense home of 6,000 square feet, including five bedrooms and an apartment over the garage.

The furnishings and appointments are faultless.

THE ACTOR AND his wife are the parents of four daughters in their 20s and 30s who all live within baby-sitting distance of the Youngs, who have five grandchildren.

Television's unflappable doctor finds they rattle around the big house now that their daughters are out on their own. But they still employ a housekeeper, who has been with them for a quarter century.

"We've kept the big house because it's more comfortable than renting an apartment when the show is shooting," Young explains.

HIS REAL LOVE, however, is a small home in Rancho Santa Fe, a resort community built around a golf course some 25 miles north of San Diego.

It is a small, two-bedroom cottage which the Youngs occupy whenever he isn't working.

Both he and Betty do the cleaning and housekeeping themselves without help. Young says it is a sanctuary, a hideaway where they can withdraw from the social and business activities of Hollywood.

THE COTTAGE, unlike the Beverly Hills home, does not have a swimming pool. Nor does Young play golf almost every day as he once did.

ROBERT YOUNG
An Enchanted Cottage

Instead, he chooses to walk along the links at off hours with a few balls and a single club just for exercise and to breathe the fresh air.

A quaint guest house has been added to the property in the event one of his daughters chooses to spend some time with them.

"BETTY AND I do the cooking, bedmaking, dusting, window cleaning and lamp repairs," Young said. "We don't consider the work drudgery. I guess you might even call it therapy."

They call their hideaway the Enchanted Cottage after the picture in which Young starred with Dorothy McGuire in 1944.

There is an enchantment about the Rancho Santa Fe home. It is an explosion of color both inside and out. The garden is a profusion of bright flowers.

BETTY HAS decorated the living room with bright yellows, greens and reds. Large windows looking out on the golf course and gardens give the visitor the feeling of being indoors and outdoors simultaneously.

On long evenings together, the Youngs watch television, read, go for long walks and just talk to one another.

Young needs his retreat and long quiet days. When he's on the Hollywood treadmill he reports to work at 7 a.m. and seldom leaves before 6 p.m.

An Explosive Blaze Hits Marin Firm

$145,000 Damage To Factory In San Rafael

By JEFF GREER

An explosive, $145,000 fire destroyed the Duracite Manufacturing Co. plant at 121-123 Jordan Street yesterday and briefly threatened to spread to neighboring buildings in the San Rafael industrial district.

The fierce blaze was fed by exploding drums of acetone solvent and quantities of resin that Duracite used in manufacturing imitation marble sinks. The flames were so hot they burned off the building's roof before it could collapse into the plant.

Dense black smoke from the blaze hampered homeward-bound commuter traffic on Highway 101 and drifted as far as Richmond. Thousands of sightseers clustered in a nearby schoolyard or drove to hillside viewpoints to watch firemen battle the flames.

The San Rafael Fire Department sent 25 men, four engines and a truck to control the blaze, according to Fire Chief Vance Trivett. Kentfield sent back-up units to stand by in San Rafael fire stations.

Cause of the fire has not been found, Trivett said.

Duracite spokesmen said no curing ovens nor other heat was used in the manufacturing process, and extreme care was used in handling the highly flammable acetone.

The firm's 11 employees had closed up shop at 4:30 p.m. Fifteen minutes later, the lights began flickering in the adjoining building housing the Nor-Cal Pet Supply Co., and Nor-Cal employees heard noises that "sounded like someone was walking on our roof" — the acetone drum explosions.

They ran outside, saw smoke pouring from the vents of the Duracite factory, and sounded the alarm. The blaze was under control within 30 minutes.

President of Duracite is F. John Dreyfous of 332 Golden Gate Avenue, Belvedere. He told firemen that he estimated damage to his plant and stock at $60,000. Homer C. Rickards of San Rafael, owner of the 10-year-old building estimated structural damage at $85,000.

The concrete, tilt-up walls of the 110-by-100 foot building were badly buckled and one section collapsed.

Two trucks parked inside the Duracite plant were destroyed, as was a third truck parked nearby, belonging to the Pallavacine Roofing Co. A shed and plumbing supplies at the Varlin-Marlow Appliance and plumbing supply firm downwind of the blaze also were damaged. Grass burned in an adjoining lot.

One eyewitness told Independent-Journal photographer Jim Kean that while the acetone and resin-fed fire was at its height, the wind was whipping flames clear across Irwin

25TH BODY

Final Search For Gravesites

YUBA CITY, Calif. (UPI)— Armed with aerial maps showing nine more "possible graves," sheriff's deputies made their last search today in the Feather River orchards where 25 farm workers' bodies have been unearthed.

The latest body of a hacked and stabbed victim to be discovered was dug up from a gravesite spotted by a farm worker yesterday about 500 yards from where the 24th body was uncovered the previous day.

Sheriff Roy Whiteaker said all potential gravesites in the peach orchards and along the river, including those previously underwater, had been checked out.

"We have completed the regular search," he said.

But aerial photographs taken Wednesday with an infrared camera "located nine possible graves," according to sources in the sheriff's office.

Whiteaker said his men's last search in the crude graveyard five miles north of here would be based on the pictures.

Two Navy jets zoomed low over the peach orchards yesterday afternoon, but the sheriff refused to say if the A4D Skyhawks from Miramar Naval Air Station, San Diego, were called in at his request or if they contained aerial photography equipment.

The 25th victim, like all the rest, was a middleaged, white farm worker. Whiteaker said the body had "the same type of stab wounds in the back of the head and about the chest."

Authorities revealed yesterday that a green "ledger book" containing 34 names, including four of the known victims, was taken from the home of mass murder suspect Juan V. Corona. But they refused to discuss its significance in their case against him.

Corona, 37, a former mental patient who has pleaded innocent to 10 of the slayings, was held across the river in Marysville. He will return to court June 16 for a preliminary hearing.

Official sources said the book, one of two taken from a cabinet at his home when he was arrested May 26, contained a list of 34 "names, dates and places." Four of the names matched confirmed victims in the mass murders, but others appeared to be names of places rather than persons.

Tiburon Woman Is Kidnapped From Her Home

BULLETIN

A woman identified as Jan Gregg, 26, was kidnapped from the Cove Apartments area, Tiburon, at 11:20 a.m. today, according to sheriff's deputies.

Her abductor, reported to be armed, drove off with her in her white 1970 Maverick, deputies said. He was described as about 20, with short blond hair, wearing an orange shirt and striped bell-bottom trousers.

The woman, blonde-haired and blue-eyed, was wearing a maroon sweater and blue jeans.

Wichita Police Pelted By Youths

WICHITA, Kan. (UPI) — About 200 young persons pelted police witp bricks, rocks and bottles early today in the northeastern part of Wichita, injuring three officers and causing some property damage.

The officers were treated and released from area hospitals. There were no arrests.

Capt. Kenneth Coffey said the trouble started shortly after midnight where a "block party" was in progress. Quiet was restored less than three hours later.

Anniversary

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI)— Israel observed the fourth anniversary of its lightning victory over the Arabs today by renewing its standing bid for closer ties with the United States.

Five Die In Blockbuster Explosion

WACO, Ga. (UPI)—A small foreign car collided with a trailer truck hauling 20,000 pounds of dynamite and lowgrade explosives last night, causing a "blockbuster bomb" blast that swept away spectators, cars and nearby houses. Five persons were killed and at least 35 others injured.

Highway patrolmen threw a protective ring around a crater 100-feet wide by 20-feet deep in U.S. 78 until army demolition teams could clear the area in daylight.

The explosion cut the two-lane, blacktop road, the main thoroughfare from Atlanta to Birmingham, Ala., and touched off woods fires in a quartermile area. The shock wave collapsed the roof of a school gymnasium where 200 persons were attending a gospel song fest.

The truck driver, A.W. Fielding, 50, of Birmingham, foresaw a possible disaster when flames erupted after the collision of the Volkswagen with his truck shortly after 8 p.m. EDT. "Get back, there are explosives on the truck, they may go off," he screamed at persons who began to crowd around the wreck. Some onlookers heeded the warning and survived the explosion that came several minutes later.

The truck, owned by the

Red Rockets Hit Da Nang Airbase

SAIGON (UPI) —Communist gunners fired about a dozen 122mm rockets into Da Nang and its U.S. air base on the northern coast of South Vietnam today, the U.S. Command said.

South Vietnamese sources said at least five of the rockets hit residential areas near the base, killing five civilians and wounding 10 others. A command spokesman said there were some casualties and slight damage at the base, the largest U.S. Air Force installation in the northern part of the country.

It was the second attack within six days on the base and the city. Last Sunday, a total of 13 rockets hit the base and nearby residential areas and killed 12 civilians and wounded 11 others.

The rocketing of Da Nang followed a second day of heavy shelling against a string of allied outposts along the demilitarized zone (DMZ) and Highway 9 just below it. The road is used by the Communists as an infiltration route. Those barrages caused light casualties, according to the spokesman.

In the A Shau area along the Laotian border, about 60 miles south of the DMZ, South Vietnamese troops crosssed over to the western ridge line of the narrow, north-south valley for the first time in their two-month-old attempt to seal off the flow of Communist supplies. The troops reported they killed 17 guerrillas in their sweep.

Around Firebase 5 in the Central Highlands, government troops fought a minor skirmish three miles to the north but failed to break a two-week-old Communist seige.

They also called in more strikes by B52 bombers to help shake loose an estimated 1,500 Communist troops surrounding theinstallation, five miles south of Dak To. The base was hit by

Dymally's Advice To Graduates

Sonoma State College graduates were told yesterday to work toward a reconciliation among the many conflicting forces in the United States.

Sen. Mervyn Dymally, D-Los Angeles, the first Negro to serve in the state Senate, told a commencement audience to work toward bridging the gap between races, young and old, students and teachers and between children and parents.

He said he hoped the students would turn to politics to achieve the reconciliation and wage war on injustice and poverty.

"We are in a time of crisis where neither Democracy, nor we, can afford to fail. There is not time to talk about cutting back in our commitments, no time to prosecute wars, no time to lash back at the angry poor, no time to move back the hands of the clock," he said.

Nearly 600 of the 950 graduates attended the ceremony held at college lake. Also speaking were college Presi-

Rice Is Reelected As Tiburon Mayor

In a surprise compromise move, Tiburon city councilmen last night reelected Denis T. Rice as mayor and chose M. Carlisle Becker as vice mayor.

The election, which followed three previous abortive attempts to break a 2-2 deadlock between mayoral hopefuls Anne L. Ellinwood and Albert H. Sennett, came when both Miss Ellinwood and Sennett withdrew their names from nomination without comment.

The surprise action presumably was necessary because neither Sennett nor Miss Ellinwood would withdraw in favor of the other.

The five-minute special session followed an impromptu closed session outside of the council's chambers which lasted about 15 minutes.

At two other meetings, Rice had supported Sennett and Becker had supported Miss Ellinwood for the mayor's post. Councilmen Branwell D. Fanning, absent from the last several meetings, has been in South America on business.

DENIS T. RICE
Compromise choice

Had Miss Ellinwood been elected, she would have been the first woman mayor in Marin County in 17 years. Miriam P. Cummings held the mayor's gavel in Mill Valley in 1952-54.

Rice, 38, is an attorney in San Francisco. He was elected to the city council in 1968 and served as mayor pro tem in 1969. He lives at 117 Hacienda Drive.

MEET PROFESSOR DOOM

He listens to the news five times each day
Besides what all the commentators say,
So, feels that he's equipped to prophesy
That soon we all are surely going to die!
Sometimes an earthquake is the awesome threat,
Sometimes it is high-jacking of a jet.
Because we are involved in Vietnam
He fears the touch-off of a nuclear bomb
Will blow our lovely world to shattered bits,
Or else, we all will lose our scattered wits.
He says "Because of over-population
Which causes higher taxes and inflation,
Since stock reports show market fluctuating
Our whole economy is inundating."
He thinks the Communists are gaining ground
And proving other governments unsound.
He lectures us on earth's ecology,
Indoctrinates with fear-psychology,
And yet he offers us no real solution
Because he KNOWS we're dying of pollution!

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Voting At 18

SALEM, Ore. (UPI)—The U.S. Constitutional amendment granting 18-year-olds the right to vote in all elections is just six states from ratification after Oregon's legislature approved it Friday.

The state Senate voted 16 to 14 for ratification, completing action on the amendment. The House previously approved it on a 31-29 vote.

To General

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Senate has confirmed the promotion of the first black general in the U.S. military reserves. reserves.

Brig. Gen. Benjamin L. Hunton, 51, of Hyattsville, Md., will work in his new rank at the Defense Department on active duty two weeks a year as a minority affairs officer. In civilian life, Hunton is assistant director of the U.S. Bureau of Mines in charge of education and training.

Goodyear Fined

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Goodyear Tire Company has been fined $18,000 for producing tires that failed to meet the government's safety standards.

The case involved 34,000 tires size 7.00 x 13, and 11,000 size 9.15 x 15, all of which were recalled earlier when the tires failed to meet the government's speed and strength tests, the Transportation Department said Friday.

Strike Continues

WASHINGTON (UPI) —A strike by 20,000 workers against Western Union company entered its fifth day today and a federal mediator said he had failed in an effort to get negotiations resumed.

Nicholas A. Fidandis, a federal Mediation and Conciliation Service mediator, said there was "no progress" at a meeting of company and union representatives Friday.

No Complaint

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—A criminal complaint won't be filed against Groucho Marx because of his alleged statement "the only hope this country has is Nixon's assassination," U.S. Attorney James L. Browning Jr. said Friday.

The comedian's statement was quoted recently in a lighthearted interview with the Berkeley Barb, an underground newspaper.

Big Settlement

SANTA ANA, Calif. (UPI)—The survivors of four California men killed in a 1968 plane crash in nearby Fullerton have been awarded $21.75 million in damages from the Beechcraft Aircraft Corp. Inc. of Wichita, Kan.

The award was given Friday by an eight woman, four man Superior Court jury which had deliberated for one week.

Ninety per cent of Californians now live in cities and towns.

Joe E. Lewis, Comedian, Dies

NEW YORK (UPI)—Comedian Joe E. Lewis, whose quips about "booze," and "the ponies" brought laughs from thousands of night club patrons, died here Friday. He was 69.

The end for Lewis, who rose from New York's lower East Side to command $10,000 a week at such night spots as the Copacabana and Chicago's Chez Paree, came a week after he was admitted to Roosevelt Hospital in a diabetic coma.

Born Joseph Klewan, the son of Russian Jewish immigrants, Lewis began his career in show business performing on amatuer nights while still a teenager. But his talent failed to be recognized, and, after several months as a clothing salesman, he left New York for Chicago where his career took off —but his life almost ended.

In Chicago during the gangwar years of the 20s, Lewis performed at the haunts of gangsters and when he walked out on "Machinegun" Jack McGurn in 1927 to work for another club, the hoods took their revenge.

Three hoodlums entered his hotel room, beat and slashed him and left him for dead. He couldn't speak a word for weeks and spent more than a month in the hospital.

Since Lewis' strong point at the time was singing, the attack appeared to end his career.

Then, in 1942 at New York's Copacabana, a gravel-voiced comedian named Joe E. —he added the "E" to distinguish himself from heavyweight boxing champion Joe Louis — appeared in what was to become a yearly booking at the fashionable spot. He was an instant hit with jokes about his weaknesses, alcohol and horse racing.

His third foible, women, was taken out of the act for two years during a brief marriage to actress Martha Stewart. In the divorce proceedings in 1948, Miss Stewart complained Lewis would rather associate with "racetrack characters" than stay home with his wife.

"A man doesn't know true hapiness until he's married," Lewis told audiences, "and then it's too late."

In fact, Lewis, who made his weaknessess a way of life, once complained he was the victim

Laughs for thousands of slanderous gossip concerning his drinking habits.

"There are some character assassins running around trying to ruin my reputation," Lewis said, "and I want to set the record straight.

"I drink as much as I ever did, and anybody who says I'm on the wagon is an outright liar."

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — California's unemployment rate held steady at 7.4 per cent last month—the same as for April—but 7,000 additional workers joined the jobless ranks, the Reagan administration reported Friday.

Laird Hits Saigon On Drug Flow

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird, in rare public criticism of the South Vietnamese government, has expressed dissatisfaction with Saigon's efforts to slow the flow of drugs to U.S. troops.

Laird's complaint came Friday through Pentagon spokesman Jerry W. Friedheim.

"He's not yet satisfied that all the steps that can be taken have been taken," Friedheim said of Laird's views on the heroin traffic in Vietnam.

Friedheim made the comment when he was asked if Laird was pleased that relatives of Prime Minister Tran Thien Khiem had been fired after complaints they were involved in the drug traffic.

Friedheim said the South Vietnamese government has taken "a number of steps" to stop the traffic. But, he said, Laird "would expect a continuing effort.

President Nixon discussed the drug problem with Laird at a meeting Thursday.

Senate Kills Draft Plan By Close Vote

WASHINGTON (UPI) —In an atmosphere heavy with presidential politics, the Senate has spared President Nixon —and itself —from having to take a stand on the draft next year before the election.

A close 49 to 43 vote Friday killed an amendment by Sen. Richard Schweiker, R-Pa., to extend the draft only for one year. If it had passed, the President would probably have been forced to request, and Congress to grant, another extension only months before they face 10 million newly enfranchised 18, 19, and 20year-olds in the 1972 elections.

It was another victory for President Nixon in his fight for a two-year extension of draft authority. Opponents of the draft, seeking to deny Nixon manpower to conduct the Vietnam war, have lost every test so far and have turned to a filibuster to force an automatic end to the draft when the current Selective Service law expires June 30.

An amendment by Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., to end the draft on that date was buried 67 to 23.

the Schweiker amendment was as close as draft opponents have come to changing Nixon's double-barreled proposal to continue conscription and raise military pay and allowances in an effort to attract enough volunteers to make the draft unnecessary by mid-1973.

Schweiker said four hours before the vote he thought he might have a chance to win but the administration —with heavy lobbying —convinced about a half-dozen Senators that another draft debate next year might embarrass the administration politically.

Schweiker, however, said administration officials flatly promised wavering Senators that Nixon would not ask for a draft extension again in 1973—when the new draft law will expire. The election will be over by then.

CAP To Join In Hunt For General, Wife

CHINO (UPI) — The Civil Air Patrol hopes to put about 30 volunteer planes into the air during the weekedn in the search for the wreckage of a missing plane piloted by retired Maj. Gen. Richard O. Hunziker, a spokesman said today.

CAP planes, sheriff's aircraft and military planes have found no trace of the Cessna 182 since Hunziker and his wife, Margaret, took off from Calexico last Monday.

Hunziker retired from the Air Force in 1969 after serving in the Strategic Air Command and later as deputy inspector general at Norton Air Force Base.

The Western Air Rescue command at Hamilton Air Force Base is coordinating the search.

Amount of Real Juice To Be Given

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The citrus industry, bombarded by complaints from consumer advocates, has agreed to print on the labels of diluted orange beverages the percentage of orange juice content.

The industry made the agreement Friday with the Food and Drug Administration (FDA).

But minimum juice levels to be proposed by the FDA in addition to the voluntary action are lower for at least one category than those proposed by the agency seven years ago and then abandoned because of industry complaints.

The issue was revived in a speech to the National Juice Products Association May 7 by Virginia H. Knauer, White House consumer affairs aide.

"The broad range of proposed standards for diluted juice beverages has been essentially dormant since 1964 and consumers have been forced to shop for these products blindly, to confront the myriad juice drinks available, without any objective criteria for quality and value judgment," Mrs. Knauer said.

Time For Transition

CHANGING SOURCES OF POWER by Frederick G. Dutton; McGraw-Hill, 263 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

The United States has entered into a period of historic change as decisive as the Jeffersonian revolution, the age of Jackson, the rise of Lincoln and the Republican Party, and the New Deal, believes Frederick G. Dutton, the California and national political figure.

We are now at that stage in which the old order is struggling to retain its powers and privileges.

But, predicts Dutton, this state can continue no later than the middle 1970s. The pressures against it being built up within the new politics are too great.

If no accommodation is effected between these two opposing forces then the outcome will be one of two unhappy extremes — repression or revolution, with the first perhaps the more likely. In either event, the country will be the loser.

But if the old order recognizes the realities of a new situation and loosens its hold to permit the entrance into the American political mainstream of new faces and new ideas, then the transition into a new age can be accomplished without excesses or needless strife.

That is the thesis set forth in Dutton's book "Changing Sources of Power."

The former adviser to the Kennedys and Democratic Party official sees as the key attributes of the new age a shifting of emphasis from the old largely economical definition of politics to a broader meaning focussing upon cultural and social considerations, and a continuing decline in importance for the two major political parties as citizens become more and more independent-minded.

"The greatest shift in power taking place in American politics is not across the geography or the economy or social arrangements of the country, but simply within most individual voters," Dutton writes. "It is the current tipping of the balance of political power from the economic to the psychological to a certain extent — from the stomach and pocketbook to the psyche, and perhaps sooner or later even to the soul."

Groups that have customarily been relegated to the sidelines — the blacks, the young, etc. — are no longer satisfied with being mere spectators in the political arena, Dutton warns. They are determined to become active participants. And if refused admission to the arena, then the explosion, massive repression or violent revolution, could come..

Furthermore, much larger groups are no longer content with a part in the governmental processes that consists of a ritualistic, periodic trip to the polls to cast their ballots, often upon issues or for candidates they had no part in shaping or in choosing. Something more meaningful is being demanded as their share of the political machinery.

"What we have been going through is largely the loosening," Dutton says. "What still lies ahead is the hard and hesitant redefining of relationships, attitudes and directions."

And: Sooner or later there should come a fairly major opening for the newer forces in American life as the huge wave of young people moving into their middle or latter 20s floods into the electorate in record numbers. Such should not be characterized as an opening to the left anymore than to the right, but an Opening to the Future."

One completes the Dutton book with the realization that the author has really turned up no new, sensational truths, despite such predictions as a fourth party, a succession of one-term Presidents and a yet greater role and influence for television. Instead he has simply summarized what should be obvious to any thinking person. Certainly the ferment is there, and the resistance. So are the crucial alternatives that will decide our future.

The question, as Dutton makes it clear, is whether the Old Order will recognize its responsibilities and adapt itself to a new program of sharing its powers and whether the new forces will respond responsibly. To either, to fail to do so will invite revolution, led unquestionably by the most bizarre and irresponsible elements among the "outsiders," which, in turn, will most certainly be met by the harshest and most sterile repression from the "insiders."

Frederick Dutton's restatement of this critical crossroads in our national path, obvious though it might be, serves to remind us that time is growing short, and that 1972 would not be too early for an accommodation to begin in earnest.

THE SECRET BOSS OF CALIFORNIA by Arthur H. Samish and Bob Thomas; Crown, 189 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

The title of this volume leaps like a ghost risen from the grave at those who have been around California for the last 22 years, since Lester Velie exposed the No. 1 lobbyist in Sacramento in a series of articles in Collier's magazine, entitled "The Secret Boss of California."

Velie based his "secret boss" appellation on a statement he drew from Gov. Earl Warren: "On matters that affect his clients, Artie unquestionably has more power than the governor."

Arthur H. Samish doesn't deny it. Obviously, he is rather proud of it, else he wouldn't have titled this sort-of biography, "The Secret Boss of California."

The actual writing is by Bob Thomas, Associated Press Hollywood reporter. But "The Secret Boss" is written in first person, and reads exactly like Samish sounds.

Why has Artie Samish, who called a lot of shots in Sacramento and then wound up spending 26 months in McNeil Island Federal Prison for income tax evasion, chosen to tell his story so many years later?

Anticipating that a lot of people will ask that, he (or Thomas) answers it in the book's first chapter: "It's because my life has been quiet for too long. I feel like raising hell and having fun one more time."

The "one more time" is likely to shake up quite a few politicians, present and past — and make a few others spin in their graves.

Samish explains how he got his power: through his simple formula, "select and elect," with the distillers' and brewers' political war chests at his disposal to make it possible.

"I simply selected those men I thought would be friendly to my clients' interests. Then I saw to it that those men got elected to the legislature."

And, of course, he didn't allow them to forget how they got there.

Samish describes with relish how California's old crossfiling system worked to his benefit. Cross-filing made the party organizations weak and inept. Samish put together a real organization to fill the void.

He recites specific cases, in which he does not hesitate to call people by name (as well as by epithet, i.e., "Frank Merriam was a real faker, the bald-headed son of a bitch.") His accounts probably are true — though somewhat embellished.

Of course, he includes reminiscences in which Artie Samish definitely was the "good guy." These, too, probably are true — though somewhat embellished.

Throughout its 189 pages, "The Secret Boss of California" is an uninhibited as was Artie Samish when he was the Man-To-See in Sacramento. As he says at the close of chapter 18:

"Chicanery was our middle name."

Written From Behind The Walls

INSIDE PRISON AMERICAN STYLE edited by Robert J. Minton Jr.; Random House, 325 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

Robert J. Minton resides in Sausalito and teaches speech at College of Marin. He has taught in the junior college program at San Quentin Prison and has participated in some experimental classes at Soledad Prison. In his work behind the walls, he has encouraged inmates to write.

And from what they wrote — for his classes, for prison publications, for each other, and sometimes just for themselves — he has put together "Inside Prison American Style."

The writers are all prisoners. What prisoners write ranges over a very wide field. Some of it is powerful propaganda; some of it is extremely inept and disgusting propaganda. Some of it is poignant introspection; some of it is exhibitionism.

Minton has tried to select a representative cross-section to show what it's like inside prison. He identifies with the prisoners (at least with those who write). This provides his book with its greatest strength and greatest weakness: strength because it is uninhibited, because it bares things that usually are concealed, glossed over, or ignored; weakness, because the views are necessarily all those of "losers" to whom society has become an enemy.

By his selections, and even more by the notes with which he introduces them, Minton shows both his empathy and sympathy for the incarcerated men and his lack of sympathy for the system that put them there. He is perceptive of people, rather than of systems (or of geography — he describes Soledad as "nestled in California's lush Central Valley".)

Physical Fitness Achieved Nicholas Kounovsky's Way

THE JOY OF FEELING FIT by Nicholas Kounovsky; Dutton, $6.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

"The best exercise book ever," said McCall's magazine of "The Joy of Feeling Fit." And that may not be an overstatement.

Nicholas Kounovsky, the Russian-born physical fitness expert, expounds upon his system of "engineered exercise" that he calls Sixometry. There is, first, some general discussion of fitness, and some assistance in determining your own status. Kounovsky then proceeds with the meat of his book — the exercises he has designed variously for endurance, suppleness, balance, strength, speed and coordination. The movements are demonstrated by silhouetted figures. And there are prescribed "dosages" for each of the three grades of fitness — beginner, intermediate and advanced.

The exercises include both the old-standbys and some Kounovsky originals.

And finally, the author caps his book with some advice on good living including: "Loving is a marvelous exercise."

Kounovsky can — and does — drop names like those of Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis and Mary Martin when he talks about his pupils. But more important, his theories appear sound and sensible and his system practical.

When A 'Day Seemed Like Weeks Before'

By KATE WEBB
U.P. International

Editor's Note: Following is the 12th and last in a series of personal impressions written by UPI's 28-year-old Phnom Penh bureau chief about her capture and release 23 days later by North Vietnamese troops in Cambodia.

"A day seemed like weeks before, now it seems like years," Sarath said. He was right.

But although we were to walk two more days, our official release came the next morning.

The guards woke us before 5 o'clock, earlier than usual. Mr. Lib arrived and said, "Put on your new clothes. The officer of the High Command is up here."

I emerged from the bath house in a new green uniform they had given me and Sarath said, "Pack, miss, everything."

Each of us was given a small green cloth bag and I packed "everything" — the torn shirt and jeans I had been captured in, the necklace Moonface had made for me, my black pajamas, toothbrush and toothpaste. "Hammock and mosquito net, too," Mr. Lib ordered.

We stared at each other. Was it release or just another long march?

At 9 o'clock we were photographed, individually and in a group, by a man Mr. Lib confided was a "very high ranking officer." Mr. Lib was flustered and nervous, although it is not Communist habit to salute or show deference to officers. We discussed the value of a camera lens with the officer as he squatted beside us. Mr. Lib was mistranslating in his nervousness.

We then were taken to the tree-hidden shelter where we had been interrogated. Wooden benches were arranged in a semi-circle before a table covered with the traditional green and white checkered cloth.

The squat old military man who had been in the background during our interrogation presided. Before him lay a sheaf of documents — "The official orders from the southwest command for the release of four journalists and two driver-interpreters, according to the humane principles of the Liberation Armed Forces."

We felt awkward in our new clothes. The high command representative cleared his throat, put on his spectacles and looked up. He seemed weary and read the order slowly.

Translations were read to us and when the sections about the "humane" policies were read we were signalled to applaud. We did.

More group photographs followed before we returned for our personal possessions. I was handed back my purse, watch, a Chinese charm I wear around my neck, my ring, aspirin, wallet and I.D. cards. Nothing was missing. I signed for them, and for the 300 reils they gave each of us for transportation.

"You now have the opportunity to say thank you," Mr. Liberation informed us, producing his tape recorder.

Suzuki took the microphone and thanked them in English. Moonface followed, in Cambodian, then me and Charoon. We shook hands all around, the officers included, and plates of bananas and candy and tea were placed on the table. We also were given a full package of cigarettes each.

The officer motioned me off the bench onto a chair. "You are very weak," he said. "When you return to your home, you must check your health very carefully." He pushed a glass of tea toward me and lit my cigarette, as he had done during the interrogation.

"Your cameras are tools of the imperialists and their lackeys," he told us. "They will be used for the good purposes of the Liberation Front.

"When you leave you will not tell people where this place is. It could mean difficulty." He looked at me and Suzuki.

"When you go back to your homes," he said, "Tell the truth about us. Tell the truth. You may have to be very brave, but tell the truth."

I remembered that during the interrogation he had said he did not believe UPI would publish anything I wrote about them.

We asked about other journalists (there are 17 missing in Cambodia). The command representative looked almost embarrassed, I thought.

The Liberation forces could not be held responsible for journalists who followed the Lon Nol troops, he said. It sounded like a warning. Suzuki and I pressed the question. He repeated that it was the policy of the Liberation Front never to kill prisoners, but said that in the southwest region he had no knowledge of other captive journalists.

I felt a sense of failure.

It was at 5:40 p.m. that evening under a sickle moon that we moved out on the first leg of the last lap to freedom. The entire camp turned out to shake hands and say goodbye. We were photographed together with the officers, then moved off into the dusk, turning to wave. From 20 yards away, the camp looked like just another clump of trees.

We were not tied. The men carried rice in scarves slung around their necks, and also their "release bags." There were, as usual, six guards — Dad, Dave, Gap Tooth, Mr. Lib, the Teacher and one of the members of the new party that had arrived in camp. The Cambodians were told that if we walked fast it would take one night instead of two to reach Highway 4.

Our column of bobbing grey shadows moved on, through villages, over paddy fields, along paddy dikes and winding trails. On a dirt road we twice stopped for jeeps to roll by. Four men sat in each vehicle, the headlights shaded and each jeep decked out like a carnival float with tree branches for camouflage. Villagers appeared to take no notice.

Twice we seemed to lose our way and three times we backtracked, the guards shining their flashlights on trail forks looking for a familiar sign. Once a village woman carrying a flashlight called to the guards, shouting something in Cambodian, and we retraced our steps.

I was told I was walking "very well" and that I must keep doing my best. My head was swimming, my hair and new suit drenched with sweat. At the next rest stop we simply leaned against one another's backs, too tired to sit.

We stopped at a place lit by the moon and flares, where straw had been stacked under a spreading tree. We were told to sleep but I didn't. The guards went off in groups and seemed to be arguing over their plans.

Gap Tooth appeared out of nowhere, bringing news, and by the light of the flares over the battle on the road I could see him drawing maps in the dust for the others.

"It is time to move," Mr. Lib said. We scrambled up and in minutes were moving off again. I lit my next to last cigarette. It was sometime after 3 a.m. We did not use flashlights.

We stopped suddenly on what I thought was a new trail. The Teacher was whispering in Cambodian, we were shaking hands, wishing good luck to each other.

Then the six of us were alone in the dark.

"Where are we?" I asked Sarath.

"Highway 4, but not at Trapeang Krailang. Quick, we must move from this place. The soldiers say we must move."

Still we stood. The Teacher appeared from somewhere behind us. "Move," he whispered, then disappeared.

We moved about 500 yards, our shower shoes making a loud flapping sound on the road. I walked in front "because you have a white face," as agreed beforehand.

We argued about moving to a nearby abandoned house with old foxholes around it. The guards had said to wait until after the government armored road-clearing patrol had passed. We had said we would take civilian transportation back to Phnom Penh. But we knew we were not in a town, but territory controlled by the Khmer Rouge.

Moonface won out. He took a piece of white parachute silk I had and tied it to a stick. We stripped off our gift clothing and dressed in the dark in what we had left our civilian clothes. The pink grey dawn came slowly, illuminating an empty stretch of highway littered with spent shell casings.

Shakily, I picked up my little bag. Moonface, clad only in his torn trousers — now too large for him — raised the white parachute silk flag. The two of us stepped out onto the highway, the others shuffling behind. There was the familiar flap of shower shoes in the unfamiliar naked light of day.

Troops appeared on the crest of a hill ahead of us. We stopped and Moonface's face fell, as did the flag he was carrying. We quickly shoved it up again, snapping at him nervously.

I could see their uniforms now and for the first time in 24 days my nerves relaxed. I had to blink to hold back the tears. A first lieutenant was standing in the middle of the road.

"Journalists," we said lamely, still waving our flag high.

"Miss Webb," he said.

"You're supposed to be dead."

Cycle Training Book Offered

The California Highway Patrol is offering the training book used by its own motorcycle officers to Marin County groups wanting to learn safe techniques on the two-wheelers.

Capt. Daniel W. Lyons, commander of the Marin-Golden Gate Bridge area, said a CHP officer would attend any such group's first class session to explain the course.

The training is aimed at curbing the growing number of motorcycle acidents.

Nixon Dedicates Oklahoma Waterway

TULSA, Okla. (UPIL — President Nixon today dedicated a $1.2 billion waterway forming an "Oklahoma sea coast" and predicted it would entice people away from congested cities and back to the countryside.

In prepared remarks the formal opening of the 450-mile McClellan-Kerr navigation system, Nixon said there was "virtually unlimited promise" in the growth of the great central section of America.

"This region can become a new magnet for people seeking the good life so that we begin to see a reversal of the decades-long migration trend from rural America to urban America, a trend that too often has acted to deplete the countryside and overburden the cities," Nixon said.

"This great region, so ready for development can provide part of the answer to the increasingly acute problem of congestion and unctntrolled growth."

Nixon predicted that the waterway, which opens the Arkansas and Verdigris rivers to shipping, would bring a whole new era of growth and development. Private investment planned along the waterway already has passed the $800 million mark and soon could exceed the $1.2 billion cost of the project which has been under construction for a decade.

Nixon said the project was an example to the nation in environmental planning and balanced growth and termed it "an exceptional monument" to the resourcefulness and vitality of the region.

"By undertaking a vast project that some called impossible and other called worthless and making it a success, you have demonstrated once again the vitality of the American tradition of daring great things and achieving what we dare," Nixon said.

At a time when many in the nation were urging a "turn from the pursuit of greatness to the cultivation of comfort it is valuable for our youth, our future leaders, to have before them this dramatic example of the young spirit still at work in building our nation," he said.

Nixon flew to the dedication aboard Air Force One along with Attorney General John N. Mitchell, Commerce Secretary Maurice H. Stans and Agriculture Secretary Clifford M. Hardin.

The waterway, the nation's newest canal, was carved along a stream which cattle had little trouble wading in years past on their way to the railheads of Kansas.

Four Are Arrested In Drug Raid

Marin drug abuse agents entered a San Rafael home last night and arrested four persons for investigation of a variety of drug offenses.

It was not immediately known how much narcotics was seized.

Booked into Marin County Jail, and held under $6,250 bail each, were Clayton Stephen Anderson, 22; Kenneth Wilkes Wright, 22; Gregory Moore Shields, 22, and Michael Moore Shields, 23, all of 642 Gallerita Way, site of the raid.

All were arrested on suspicion of possession of marijuana, possession of marijuana for sale, possession of dangerous drugs and possession of heroin. Anderson and Wright also were booked on warrants alleging sale and transportation of dangerous drugs and heroin and possession of narcotis paraphernalia.

Dr. Lamers To Conclude Series With Drug Talk

Dr. William Lamers, psychiatrist, addresses a public forum at San Anselmo's First Presbyterian Church following the 10 a.m. service tomorrow. His talk will deal with the drug abuse problem in Marin.

Dr. Lamers has been recognized as an authority in this area, through his counseling, writing and service on various boards.

He is currently medical director for Marin Open House and staff psychiatrist in several local hospitals as well as being engaged in private practice.

The 11 a.m. forum in the church's Fireside Room concludes a series of spring seminars. The summer schedule begins next Sunday with an outdoor service on the church grounds at Ross and Kensington Avenues in San Anselmo.

Innocent Plea To Burglary

John Michael Van Liew, 20, of 25 Marion Avenue, Mill Valley, has pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court to a charge of burglarizing Quinn's Tavern at 2 Corte Madera Avenue, Mill Valley, Wednesday.

A preliminary hearing was set for June 15.

Van Liew was arrested after a police officer on a routine patrol saw someone move inside the closed bar at 12:57 a.m. When Van Liew came out, he was arrested.

Police said that a rear window had been pried open, but nothing seemed to be missing.

Sky Map For Month Of June

By SHERMAN WALKER

On June 7 the first-quarter moon passes 6 degrees south of Jupiter and about three hours later passes 7 degrees south of Neptune, all of which requires a fairly large telescope for observation.

On June 8 the almost full moon passes very close to Antares, in Leo, as it does every month this year. The May and June conjunctions are the closest of all — only one-tenth of a degree separating moon and bright star.

The moon will be full on June 8. On June 11, in the morning sky before sunup, Venus and Saturn will be less than a degree apart. This will be a close conjunction for two plants but its interest will be decreased for the casual observer because Venus will be so much brighter than Saturn. They will not be visible from the United States at the closest passage but will still be very close later when they can be seen.

On June 13 the moon passes 4 degrees north of Mars and starts its last-quarter phase on June 15.

On June 17 the moon is at the closest part of its orbit to the earth and on June 20 it passes 7 degrees north of Saturn in the early morning hours.

On June 21 Mercury is on the opposite side of the sun from us and, of course, can't be seen. This is called superior conjunction. New moon occurs on June 22 and the first-quarter phase begins on June 30. On July 4 the first-quarter moon will pass 6 degrees south of Jupiter.

Man Booked In Threat To Wife

A South San Francisco man spent part of his 27th birthday in Marin County Jail today on suspicion of threatening to shoot his estranged wife and her companion in San Anselmo.

Booked into jail for investigation of assault with a deadly weapon and released on his own recognizance to appear in Marin Municipal Court Monday was Jerry Lynn Scheffler.

According to San Anselmo police, Scheffler was waiting on the front steps of his wife's house at 19 Buena Vista Avenue when the woman, Carol E. Scheffler, 23, returned home at 1:28 a.m. with a companion, Joseph E. Dulin III, 26, of 1 Fairway Drive, Novato.

Police said Scheffler brandished a .22-caliber Ruger magnum and told the pair, "Get in the house, it's all over, I'm going to kill you."

Mrs. Scheffler began struggling with her husband, police said, and Dulin ran inside and attempted to call for help. Scheffler broke away from his wife, however, and forced Dulin to sit in a chair, where he threatened to kill him.

After another struggle between Scheffler and his wife, Dulin hit Scheffler with a chair and the gunmen fled out the front door.

Police said Scheffler called them from a service station on Red Hill Avenue at 1:53 a.m. and told them he wanted to surrender.

Driver Out Of Hospital

A 22-year-old San Rafael man was released from Ross General Hospital yesterday after being held for observation of a possible concussion following a single-car accident on southbound Highway 101.

David Musso of 1825 Lincoln Avenue was injured at 1:10 p.m. Thursday when a small foreign car driven by Sharyn G. Wong, 19, of 579 Cedarberry Lane, San Rafael, rolled over.

Miss Wong was treated at Marin General Hospital for a bruised thigh.

The California Highway Patrol could give no details of the accident.

Youth Booked In Break-In

A 15-year-old Santa Rosa youth was booked into Sonoma County Juvenile Hall today on suspicion of breaking into Bernard Eldredge School on Maria Drive in Petaluma.

Police said a regular officer and a reserve patrolman acting on a anonymous tip, went to the school at 2:20 a.m. and found Larry Steven Ball outside the office.

Police said they found an undetermined amount of change and a quantity of dangerous drugs in Ball's possession when they searched him. He was held on suspicion of burglary and possessing dangerous drugs.

Ball apparently broke an office window to gain entry, police said.

Stolen Vehicle Is Recovered

A 1970 Volkswagen sedan stolen in December from Budget Rent-A-Car, Third Street and Tamalpais Avenue, San Rafael, was recovered yesterday in San Anselmo.

Police said the vehicle was discovered in front of 22 Bell Avenue by an officer on routine patrol.

BLAST

Baggett Trucking Co. of Birmingham, was carrying 10,000 pounds of dynamite and 10,000 pounds of a low-grade explosive called "slurry" from Birmingham to a granite quarry in North Carolina.

Fire set off dynamite caps which ignited the explosives.

"It just blew down the onlookers," said Deputy Sheriff Gene Kirk. "And the biggest part of the truck I could find was a wheel."

The Volkswagen disintegrated and its driver, Talmadge L. Adams of Waco, was killed.

Also killed were a wrecker driver, Cleve Heath, of Bremen, and a Bremen fireman, David L. Smith. Other victims were Troy F. Allen and Doyal T. Bell, 31, both of Waco.

Cars were blown off the road like crumpled toys. Several nearby housed were demolished. Trees were snapped like broken toothpicks.

Fortunately, the shock at first only weakened the roof of the gymnasium, where a gospel sing was being held to raise funds for a needy family, and the 200 persons inside got out safely before it collapsed.

There was no accurate figure on the number of persons injured in the explosion. At least 32 persons were treated at Bremen General Hospital, largely for cuts and bruises. Some injured were taken to hospitals in the nearby towns of Villa Rica, Carrollton and Cedartown.

FIRE

Street, half a block behind the blazing factory.

The firemen took to the air with their snorkle unit, pouring a flood of water into the building by reaching over high-voltage power lines in front of the blazing structure.

The adjoining Nor-Cal Pet Supply firm escaped with smoke and water damage.

Rickards, owner of the burned-out building, mourned today that he was "having the luck of the Irish — in reverse." He also was landlord for the Schwerin San Rafael Tire and Brake Co., at 666 Irwin Street, which was destroyed July 8 in a $150,000 fire that also destroyed a San Rafael fire engine.

Yesterday's fire was San Rafael's most costly one since the tire plant fire, except for the May 25 blaze that hit the unoccupied, 98-year-old courthouse. Cost of that blaze was still being calculated.

Sea Scouts In Mariner Regatta

San Rafael's Sea Scout Ship No. 20 placed in four events in the 19th Annual Ancient Mariner Regatta held Memorial Day weekend at the Coast Guard base in Alameda.

The crew placed first in heaving line, second in sailing, third in mariner's quiz and fourth in problems of naviagation, piloting, scouting and sailing.

Two members of the crew, Steven Hill of San Anselmo and Kenneth Smith of Tiburon recently won four out of five races in the Northern California Sea Scout sailing eliminations at Lake Merritt in Oakland.

Two Proposals Get Novato Nod

The Novato Plan Review Committee has approved plans for North Marin Investors to construct a warehouse and retail sales building on the east side of Reichert Avenue between Sweetser Avenue and Scown Lane.

Committee members, meeting Wednesday, also approved plans by E. D. McGillicuddy for landscaping at a building to be occupied by United Rent-All adjacent to 6981 Redwood Highway.

An application for a 16-foot high freestanding sign for the Pizza Hut at De Long and Machin avenues was denied.

70 Strep Cases Are Reported In County

Seventy cases of streptococus infection were reported last week in Marin County, according to Dr. Carolyn B. Albrecht, county health officer.

Other diseases reported were 28 cases of gonorrhea, seven of infectious hepatitis, three each of rubella and syphillis and one of mumps.

Reagan Hits Demos On Welfare Program

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Gov. Ronald Reagan said Friday he had paid every tax obligation in his lifetime but acknowledged that there were two years in which he did not pay a state income tax.

Reagan held his usual Sacramento news conference instead in Los Angeles and began by lambasting the Democratic legislative leadership for failing to come up with alternatives to his welfare reform program to reduce the budget.

Shortly after reading a prepared statement on that subject, the governor was asked about a newscast by a woman reporter for the Sacramento State College radio station that he did not pay a state income tax for two years since his first election in 1966.

Reagan had said previously he paid no state income tax for 1970 because of investment losses that year.

"I have paid every tax obligation I have ever had," he said. "I have issued a written statement previously and everything you need to know about my tax status is in that statement."

The newsman persisted, asking Reagan to give a "direct answer" to whether there was a second year in which he did not pay a second tax. Reagan looked irritated.

"I have given you a direct answer," the governor said. "There were two years in which I did not have a tax. I think you will find that in the statement. There is nothing more to say."

Reagan did not specify the second year in which he did not owe a state ncome tax.

The reports regarding Reagan's taxes had originated with Rosemary King, 29, who is also a part-time employe of the Democratic caucus in the state legislature. Miss King had declined to reveal the source of her information.

Most of the conference was devoted to questions about the state financial crisis and the governor's views of how it was to be met.

Reagan said it was "no secret" that further budgetary deficits in his administration's estimates would be made public next week. He said they were the result of failure to act on the welfare reform program and a decrease in revenue from state income taxes.

Reagan said Democratic leaders in the Legislature had not put forth an alternative program on welfare reform although one Democratic senator, Anthony Beilenson, had submitted individual proposals.

The governor said that Beilenson's program actually would cost $200 million more than the administration's plan, that it had no provision to put welfare recipients to work and provided no control over the growth of welfare rolls."

Reagan said property taxes in the state had reached the point where it is becoming uneconomic to own private property in California and said home owners had to have relief.

The governor indicated that it was almost inevitable that a state income tax withholding program be put into effect but he said it would not be the "gimmick of a one year windfall" but that revenues would increase through more efficient collections.

Reagan declined to say whether he would veto a proposal for a straight increase in income taxes.

The governor charged that Democrats were pushing for a tax increase to conceal "gigantic increases" in spending.

Church Announces Summer Schedule

Redwood Presbyterian Church in Larkspur will begin its summer schedule Sunday, June 13, with one service at 9:30 a.m. with church school at the same time.

Also the church will begin Thursday evening services (8 p.m.) on June 17.

Jury Awards $71,000 For Crash Injuries

A jury in Marin Superior Court Judge Samuel W. Gardiner's court has awarded $71,000 damages to Mrs. Merle Osborne McDill, 58, of Greenbrae, who was injured in a traffic accident Oct. 3, 1967.

Mrs. McDill — then a Marin County social worker — suffered facial injuries and a broken thigh that hospitalized her for five months, according to her attorney, Ronald Rouda.

She was making a left turn from Sir Francis Drake Boulevard to the northbound Highway 101 onramp when her car was struck by an auto driven by Frederick Lau, 24, of El Cerrito, employed by the Consumers' Co-op. Lau was westbound on Drake.

The jury reached its verdict Thursday after a seven-day trial.

Richardson Bay District Board Asks $46,000

Directors of the Richardson Bay District board have asked for $46,000 in compensation from the City of Mill Valley for sewer equipment the district will lose in an annexation proceeding.

The Marin Local Agency Formation Commission has given the city permission to absorb about 60 acres near Sabella's Restaurant which had been under Richardson Bay jurisdiction.

In a letter to the LAFC that was approved Thursday night, according to district director George B. Szabo, the board also asked that the city not be allowed to take over sewer service in the area until it is ready to begin operation.

Cost Sharing Asked For Summer School

If Mill Valley children wish to attend summer school classes in Sausalito, the Mill Valley School District must pay $2,000 toward the cost of the program, the Sausalito District board has decided.

The board voted on Wednesday to ask Mill Valley for approximately half the district's costs for the four-week session, which will total about $4,000, Supt. Lawrence A. Lindberg reported.

Mill Valley Supt. James A. Collins said he would present the Sausalito district's proposal to the Mill Valley board at its Monday meeting.

The two-part summer school program, which includes Title One remedial math and reading classes and regular classes, will begin June 14 at Manzanita and Bayside schools, the superintendent said. Classes will be held weekdays from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

The Sausalito board also hired six teachers for the Title One portion of the program, which is financed by the federal government. The teachers, who will each receive a $750 salary, include: Virginia Edwards, Frances Evergettis, Eleanor Spells, Armando Flores, Deborah Brill and Charlotte James. Six education aides — Jackie Harris, Evelyn Magee, Georgia Payton, Ruby Myles, Rachel Hinton and Marjorie Elakemore — were also employed.

Trustees authorized the superintendent to spend $1,000 to hire a principal for the summer program and asked him to employ seven teachers for the regular classes, each at $750.

Courses offered in the program include math laboratory, mathematics enrichment, reading laboratory, literature enrichment, creative writing, nature study, physical education, study skills, arts and crafts, dramatics, public speaking, ethnic studies, ecology, typing, instrumental music, carpentry, home economics, aquatic life and music and rhythm.

After meeting in closed session for about one hour, the board voted to dismiss educational aide Donald Morgan because of excessive unexcused absences.

Ladybug Pre-School To Start June 21

The Ladybug Pre-School of Kentfield has announced a summer program for children 2½ to 8, starting June 21.

The program will include outdoor activities, physical fitness, arts and crafts and field trips.

Poll Shows Trust Wanes In Reagan

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)--The public official least trusted by the California public to tell the truth and the whole truth is Gov. Ronald Reagan, the Field Poll said yesterday. President Nixon was a close runner-up for the dubious honor.

The poll, which posed four questions to interviewees, found 59 per cent believe either Reagan "sometimes doesn't tell everything" or is "often untruthful."

Thirty-eight per cent answered either that he was "completely open and truthful" or "truthful considering his responsibilities."

For Nixon the percentage of doubters was 58 per cent and of trusters 41 per cent. This wasn't much different than the figures for former President Johnson, 58 and 39 per cent, but a reverse of those for former President Eisenhower, 32 and 57 per cent.

Both Sens. Alan Cranston and John Tunney inspired more trust than doubt. Cranston polled 40 and 31 per cent, and Tunney 44 and 30.

Local newspaper editors enjoyed substantially less credibility than network television commentators. The editors were trusted by 37 per cent and were under suspicion by 47 per cent.

For the commentators trusters were 52 per cent and doubters 40 per cent, with the rest undecided.

In the same order, figures for local mayors were 33 and 35 per cent, and for local police chiefs 44 and 23 per cent.

THE SUBURBAN SCENE

British Couple Feted In Marin

By MOLLY MARIN

A reception was hosted Thursday afternoon for British exchange teacher Roger C. Hartley and his wife, Eireen, by Dr. Amity Buxton at her home in Mill Valley.

Guests included staff members from the Active Learning Center in San Francisco, where Dr. Buxton serves as director and Mr. Hartley has been a consultant during his one-year stay in the United States.

The Hartleys have been living at the Victor Dobyns' residence in San Rafael while the Dobyns family is staying in the Hartleys' home in England. Mr. Dobyns has taken Mr. Hartley's teaching position at Whaley Bridge School. Until last month the English teacher was an instructor at Tamalpais Valley School in Mill Valley, but an eye injury has curtailed his teaching activities.

The Hartleys will return to England in July.

THE 63RD wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Walter A. Sheffauer of San Francisco will be celebrated at a cocktail and dinner party tomorrow, hosted at their home by their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Manion of Greenbrae.

The guests, mostly immediate family members, will include Messrs. and Mmes. Robert S. Manion of Lafayette, Bruce Angell of Corte Madera, L. B. Groezinger of San Francisco, W. P. Watrous of Ross, B. Am Hansec of Menlo Park, E. W. Hansen of Redwood City, Capt. and Mrs. Raymond Zanzot of Greenbrae, Messrs. George Hansen of San Francisco, Rory Koster and L. B. Groezinger Jr. of Sacramanto. Also attending will be the couple's great granddaughter, Kelly Angell of Corte Madera.

The couple are active on the board of directors of the University Mound Home in San Francisco and Mr. Sheffauer is also active in the Islam Shrine Luncheon Club, Occidental Lodge of Masons and the Sons in Retirement.

MRS. ANTHONY Gullota of Novato was honored last Saturday at a surprise birthday party given by her sons in San Francisco. Joseph Gullota and his wife flew in from Boston to attend the party. The other sons, Richard and Daniel Gullota, live in Novato. Also at the party were the honored guest's husband and their daughter, Barbara, and other family members.

MAKING THEIR home in San Rafael are newlyweds Mr. and Mrs. John Martin Pulliam, who were married May 23 at West Portal Lutharan Church in San Francisco. The bride is the former Deborah Carole Jones of San Rafael, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack H. Jones, also of San Rafael. The couple are home from their wedding trip to Yosemite and Southern California. The bridegroom's relatives came from London, England, to attend the wedding.

John is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Pulliam of Mill Valley.

Mrs. R. H. Jackson will discuss gathering weeds and seed pods to arrange in unusual containers. Mrs. Neil Kluge will discuss using pressed flowers for stationery or pictures. Judging of the annual seedling contest will also be held.

Mrs. Allen Dahl and Mrs. Kuhn are reservations chairmen.

A "FUN Day" is planned by the Novato Garden Club members to begin at noon Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Fielder A. Nordstrom in Novato.

A potluck luncheon will be followed by a tour of the garden and swimming.

Society To Mark 50th Anniversary

The Dorcas Society of the Fairfax Community Church will celebrate its 50th anniversary with events tomorrow and Tuesday.

Members of the society will be honored at a coffee hour at noon tomorrow at the church, immediately after the regular church service.

On Tuesday a luncheon will be given at the church for all society members, their family and friends. The two remaining charter members of the Dorcas Society, Mmes. Jennie Benson and Nettie Adams, will be honored at both events.

THE DORCAS Society of the church was formed May 11, 1920, with 14 charter members, after Mrs. P. M. Paulson had recognized a need for a Protestant church in Fairfax. It waited until this year, when the church had a regular minister, to celebrate its 50th anniversary.

The club through the years, aside from founding the Community Church, has continued not only to support the church but also to organize community projects. The members began the first library in Fairfax, the first mothers' club in the schools, the first Fairfax Boy Scout troop and the first movies shown there, co-sponsored by the Dorcas Society and St. Rita's Church parish.

THE GROUP through the years has sent boxes of clothes to migrant farm workers and Christmas gifts to the elderly at the Lucas Valley Farm. It has also supported the education of a girl in India.

Mrs. Thomas Humphrey is the society's present chairman, assisted by Mrs. Louis Dallara, secretary; and Mrs. Charles Campbell, who has been its treasurer since 1935.

Changing Of Women On TV Shows

The changing place of women in the American social order as expressed in song will be the subject of "Sing Me a Woman" on "Camera Three" Sunday at 10 a.m. on the CBS television network, Channel 5.

Appearing on the broadcast will be well-known folk singers Oscar Brand and Jean Ritchie, as well as a young newcomer, Cecilia Kirtland. They will examine American womanhood, with musical tributes to pioneering women, laments on finding a husband, women who have taken men's jobs, women in the vanguard of prohibition and songs about women's liberation.

The music will be supplemented by photographs illustrating the changes from a "proper place" for women to today's struggle for liberation.

"Camera Three" is produced by WCBS-TV, New York, in cooperation with the New York State Board of Education.

Asian-Bound Student Will Be Honored

The Marin City Homeowners Improvement Association will sponsor a benefit tea Sunday, June 27, to help defray expenses for a 17-year-old Marin City girl who will study in Asia two months this summer.

Association secretary Flossie Berry said the tea will be held from 3 to 5 p.m. in St. Andrew Presbyterian Church, Marin City.

Maya Howell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Perry Howell, 34 Buckelew Avenue, and a senior at Sir Francis Drake High School, will travel to Hong Kong and Japan as part of a study program sponsored by the Presbyterian church.

Airline In Bid To Attract Women

A major international airline having financial troubles has decided to try an appeal to women passengers, according to Women's Wear Daily.

Designating June as "Ladies Month" the airline will have in-flight fashion shows, a sweepstakes quiz about women in American history and a "ladies first" cocktail on selected 747 trips between Chicago and Los Angeles.

Stewardesses will model.

If your rug has no pad, or if the foam rubber backing has started to crumble, buy a new cushion and you will get more wear from the carpet and a new spring underfoot.

L. W. Cunha, Vicki Graff Wed At Peacock Gap Club

Laraine Vicki Graff of Greenbrae and Lawrence William Cunha were married Sunday at Peacock Gap Country Club. A reception followed at the club and the couple left on a wedding trip to Carmel and Disneyland. They will live in Larkspur.

The bride, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ruben Graff of Greenbrae, chose Sharon Fillpelli as her maid of honor and Mrs. Robert Sciaroni of Kentfield and Mrs. Jeffrey Graff of Daly City as her bridesmaids.

Richard Adams of San Mateo was best man for the bridegroom. The bride's brother, Jeffrey Graff of Daly City, and Gary Goldberg, also of Daly City, seated the guests.

The bride is a Redwood High School and College of Marin graduate.

Her husband is a graduate of Tamalpais High School and Golden Gate College of San Francisco and is employed by Sleezer and Eckhoff in San Rafael.

Nixon To Take To Dance Floor During Reception

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Unlike his predecessor, Lyndon B. Johnson, President Nixon never has danced at White House social functions.

But that will change with his daughter's wedding next week.

The President will dance with the bride at Tricia's wedding reception on Saturday afternoon, June 12, in the East Room, after the newlyweds dance the first dance. Tricia and her fiance Edward Finch Cox spent Memorial Day weekend at the White House making marriage plans. Cox, 24, a Harvard law student, went back to Cambridge, Mass., Monday night for a big final exam

Play It Cool With Portable Coolers

NEW YORK (UPI)—Play it cool with portable picnic coolers, the National Bureau of Standards (NBS), U.S. Department of Commerce, suggests.

In a recent voluntary product standard which was distributed to industry, the NBS recommended including safety feature in portable coolers that will allow the lock to be opened from the inside. If followed, these requirements would help insure that children, who accidently became trapped in the coolers, could release themselves.

First Class Badges To Scout Trio

Three Cadettes of Troop 1925 of Larkspur-Corte Madera have been awarded the first class badge, the highest rank in Girl Scouts.

Winners of the badge are Cari Ann Urban, Janet Smith and Victoria Vance.

Cari, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Urban, is an eight year member of Girl Scouts and she is a freshman at Marin Catholic High School. Her interests include cycling, swimming, training her dog and playing on the high school volleyball team.

Janet has also been a Girl Scout for eight years. The daughter of Mrs. Jacqueline Smith, Janet attends Redwood High School. She enjoys swimming, sewing and camping.

Victoria is the daughter of

Mr. and Mrs. Manuel Vance and won her first class badge in two years of Girl Scouting. She enjoys cycling, hiking, swimming and sewing.

The girls' special project was assisting a new troop at Cedars Development Foundation in Ross, which they will continue as members of Senior Troop 1566.

A Test Shows The Criminal Side Of Women

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Two students at the University of Baltimore say a test they conducted recently indicated women tended to be more criminal than men.

Ben Frazier and Walter Fliecher prepared 615 small gift packages, then asked Baltimore-area taxi drivers to deposit them in the back seats of their cabs.

Records kept by the drivers showed 211 women lifted packages, while only 124 men did so. Packages were returned to the drivers by 155 women and 125 men, the study showed.

The students said the 335 thieves found inside the nicely wrapped packages the message "crime does not pay."

Arenz Takes Bride In Sierra City

A fireside ceremony Saturday afternoon at Sardine Lake Lodge in Sierra City united in marriage Juhli Paterson of Fairfax and Alfred M. Arenz Jr. of Greenbrae. A reception at the lodge followed.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. George B. McClellan of San Francisco. Mr. and Mrs. Alfred M. Arenz of Greenbrae are the bridegroom's parents.

Mrs. Thomas Pischel of Ross was matron of honor, and George Browning of Sierra City was best man.

Juhli is a graduate of Redwood High School and is employed by Lombard Pet Hospital.

A graduate of Tamalpais High School, Alfred attended College of Marin and is the owner of Horseman's Service in Fairfax. He is in the National Guard Reserve and also a member of the Marin County Mounted Sheriff's Posse.

Following a wedding trip in the Sierra the couple will live in Fairfax.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

Driving Rights A Poor Club To Assist. Teen's Studies

DEAR HELEN:

I am 16, and recently got my driver's license. I'm a good driver, and understand that if I was ever caught fooling around, my parents would get my license suspended. This I don't mind.

But I'm gettng a failure in French. I try, but I just can't understand the stuff, though I pull good grades usually.

My father says for this I can't drive all summer, and if I flunk French next year, my license will be revoked until I'm 18.

I have a part-time job and pay for my own insurance. It will be tough getting to work, and I'll never get out evenings.

Don't suggest we have a talk with my teacher, as this has been tried. I just can't hack a foreign language.

I talked with Dad and he says unless I can come up with a better punishment, the no-license thing stands. Please help.

DEPRESSED GUY

DEAR DEPRESSED:

No amount of punishment could made me understand French in college but special tutoring got me through by the skin of my teeth.

I hope your father stops swinging that driver's license like a club, and aims you toward summer school, private lessons, or best of all, a switch to Spanish (which even I could "hack"). H.

DEAR HELEN:

At 18, I can't understand what adults are trying to do to this society. Now, in our state, they want to legalize prostitution and gambling.

They say it will help bring us out of the red, and will lower taxes. As soon as people hear they'll save money, their moral values change. They make all kinds of noises about how gambling and prostitution are here anyway so we might as well make it legal so we can control it, but all they really mean is, "Oh boy, maybe our taxes will drop!"

Isn't it sad that when it comes to a choice between morals and money, money wins?— W.T.

DEAR W.:

Living next door to Nevada, I don't quite agree with you about the evils of legalized gambling. It keeps that state solvent, and crime isn't as rampant there as it is in some of our cities where underground rackets flourish. Nor is poverty a big problem in Nevada (which also has legalized prostitution, by the way.) — H.

P. S. At any rate, I'd settle for a State lottery.

DEAR HELEN:

I got kind of involved with an older woman. I didn't know she was 30, me being 17. Now I've found a girl my own age that I like better, but this woman is making threats.

She says she will go to my parents and tell them about me, which includes a few drug scenes too. I've stopped all that and am going straight. How can I make her let go? — LEARNED BECAUSE I WAS BURNED:

DEAR LBIWB:

The woman is bluffing: She won't chance a "contributing to the delinquency of a minor" charge. Tell her if she doesn't ring off, your parents might make it tough for her. — H.

Labor Count Finds Women Like Working

If you are a married woman over 45 and thinking of taking a plunge into the job market, bear in mind that you won't be an odd duck in the employment pool.

The last time the Department of Labor took a count, almost half of all married women aged 45 to 54 were working or actively looking; at the ages of 55 to 64, over a third were employed.

Every year, mature people re-enter the labor force or join it for the first time, reports the Institute of Life Insurance. Many are wives who make the decision after their family responsibilities lessen, their children are grown up, or a need for an extra income arises.

Some women seek to continue a career interrupted by marriage and family, or, perhaps want to start one. Or they may want a job that will make them feel more committed and useful. To many, the satisfaction of a job coupled with their own earnings, as well as such on-the-job pluses as group life insurance and health insurance benefits for her family are a heady experience.

Are Husbands At Fault On Plumpness

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI)— The husband who needles his wife for being fat may be the main reason she became, and stayed that way, reports Prof. Richard B. Stuart of the University of Michigan School of Social Work.

The co-author of a forthcoming book on "Behavioral Control of Overeating," has found that some men want to maintain their wives' extra poundage as a "personal one-upmanship." Others believe it keeps the women from being promiscuous, and some think plumpness is attractive.

'FATHER OF YEAR' — The National Father's Day Committee in Spokane, Wash., has named a woman as its "Father of the Year" — Mrs. John Bruce Dodd, 89. Mrs. Dodd was the founder of Father's Day 61 years ago, and she is being honored as the "mother of Father's Day."

Sketches Can Aid Imagination

By EUNICE FARMER

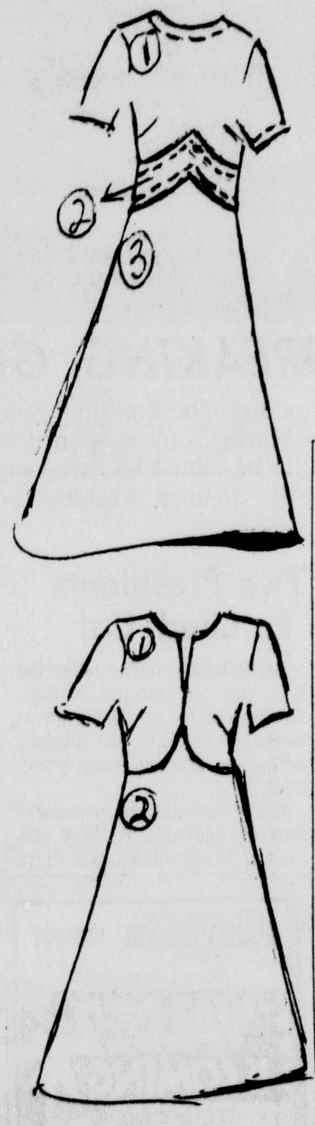
DEAR EUNICE,

I guess my problem is no imagination. I wish you would give us some ideas for using small scraps of fabric that always seem to be left over or else taking advantage of remnants. My budget is very limited, and I love pretty clothes but must get the most possible from my money.

NANCY T.

DEAR NANCY,

I hope from the sketches I have shown that you will have a better idea of what to look for when you are making a garment from small pieces of fabric. You can combine three colors in most of these sketches. You could also combine patterned fabric with solids. Very often you will have a more attractive garment when playing around with the small bits and pieces than if you started out with unlimited yardage. You may also outline some of your joined seams with braids, rick rack or woven ribbons. If you come up with something unusual, please share it with all of us. I would love to hear about your individual ideas.



MRS. B. F. Nicholls of Coronado is this week's Tailor Trix winner for her sewing suggestion.

"I overheard an alterations expert confide her system for lengthening knits, and I found it works like a charm.

"Take a straight strip of double knit, as close to the color and weave of your dress as possible, hems are usually 2½ to 3 inches wide. Lay the strip along the cut edge of the dress, right sides together. Both fabrics should butt together, not overlap, be sure the fabric edges are nice and smooth. Machine overcast the two edges together. When completed, turn hem to inside just above the joining.

"You'll find there is no extra thickness at the joined edge that usually appears when pressed and the hem will have the same stretchiness as if it were in one piece. The overcasting stitches are almost invisible, even with a curved hem, the straight strip just shrinks in with no difficulty. No one is the wiser.

DEAR EUNICE,

Some of the peasant dresses for my daughter have elastic thread placed in rows to shirr the waistline and sleeves in to fit the body. I have never had any luck with this kind of elastic — hope you can help.

MRS. N. M.

DEAR MRS. N. M.,

Most instructions tell you to place the elastic thread in the bobbin, I have never found this too successful. Finally, we experimented by using the elastic thread as an extra. By this I mean, hold it carefully on the wrong side of your fabric, just in front of the presser foot and carefully zig-zag over the elastic; be sure not to catch the elastic in the stitching.

Depending on the amount of shirring desired for fitting, you would have to measure the elastic thread first, making it at least 4 to 5 inches shorter than the actual fabric. Stretch it to lay smooth on your fabric, as you overcast it, your fabric will gather evenly. Both ends must be secured to avoid pulling out. Don't depend on the seamline to take care of this completely.

You may use as many rows of elastic as you wish, proceed the same. Try it my way and let me know how it works.

MOVING TO TEXAS

Cancer Battle Uproots Family

By JEFF GREER

A San Rafael family is preparing to uproot itself to go to Texas in a two-pronged war against cancer.

Dr. Richard W. Wolk of 108 Coleman Drive has accepted a trainee opening at the M.D. Anderson Hospital in Houston, Tex. The hospital is regarded as one of the nation's leading anticancer centers, Wolk explained.

And there, the Wolks hope, 10-year-old son Brian will receive the latest treatments for the leukemia he has battled since February 1969.

Brian and his little sisters, Abby and Amy, have braced themselves to leave the only hometown they've ever known, and all their friends.

The Wolks have leased their comfortable hillside home, planning to leave before the end of the month. The doctor has given up the three-year trainee post in cancer treatment that he took at Mount Zion Medical Center in San Francisco only a year ago.

He earlier had given up a thriving general practice built up during 10 years in San Rafael to go into cancer medicine after Brian was found to have the deadly illness.

The Texas trek almost was a case of the family burning its bridges behind itself. The Houston hospital's offer originally was based on the availability of federal cancer training funds expected to be released almost any day. But after Wolk gave up his post at Mount Zion — it was quickly filled — and leased out the home, the Texas institution reported it still had not received federal funding for his position.

This, despite Nixon's declaration of a "war against cancer" in two speeches earlier this year and Congressional approval of $100 million for the war.

But Wolk reported the Texas sun came out on the gloomy scene Thursday. The hospital told him it had found private resources to finance the training staff position.

Wolk's wife, Pat, and their youngsters, who had been unable during the doubtful days to regard the move to Texas as "much of an adventure," are much happier about the journey now, Wolk reported yesterday.

Wolk had been determined to go to Texas, even if he had to wrestle with red tape to obtain a license for private practice there until federal funds eventually came through.

Young Brian has been told he has the deadly illness, but doesn't let it interfere any more than necessary with his attention to boyhood pursuits in and around the rambling, ranch-style home.

His illness had hampered his schooling earlier, but tests in February showed he could undergo intensive new treatments for the leukemia.

After the treatments, his parents were guardedly elated over his memory improvement and restored physical vigor.

All the youngsters played about the fringes of the home's patio the other day, while their parents discussed the impending move. Five-year-old Amy, tall and unusually well coordinated for her age, broke in on the talk periodically to remind the parents they had promised to take the girls shopping for sandals, and to point out the antics of a tiny, truculent spider.

Brian concentrated on play with a neighborhood friend. The slender, dark-haired youngster seemed uninterested in hearing about the journey ahead.

Wolk shouldered the bulk of conversation about the uprooting. His wife, Pat, a redheaded daughter of a large Irish family, only chimed in to help supply some of the details about the bureaucratic difficulties that had complicated their lives.

Wolk, lean and dark, tried to keep a pipe alight as he talked about his hopes of being able to work in the Texas hospital that is pioneering treatments against the child-killer leukemia.

Wolk and his wife have spread their anticancer efforts far outside the family. They helped found the Candlelighters, a group of parents whose children are suffering from leukemia. Wolk, as their spokesman has lobbied in Washington and elsewhere to offset earlier threats to cut cancer research funds.

A similar group of 150 families has formed in Washington, D.C., and the Bay Area Candlelighters now have a parallel group in Southern California, Wolk said.

Wolk had some reservations about the happy solution of problems that he said last week "sounded like a soap opera."

He warned that continued pressure on Washington is needed to "gear up the cancer war" that has invaded the lives of thousands of families in the United States.

Holding back on the anticancer funds, for whatever reason, "doesn't seem right," the doctor declared. "It's no way to gear up for battle — to block the training programs."

GROUNDBREAKING, GIANT ECONOMY SIZE

Heavy equipment gouges a two-acre excavation at Northgate Mall in preparation for a 200,000-square-foot, two-story building planned for a major Sears Roebuck and Co. department store. The building, Sears' first retail outlet in Marin, is to be opened for business in 1972. It is to be joined by three smaller Sears buildings in the 15-acre westerly portion of the shopping center, previously undeveloped. In celebration of the groundbreaking, Sears sponsored "a Ball on the Mall" last night, featuring the Terra Linda High School band and a dance orchestra.

Old Adobe School Employees Get Hikes

The Old Adobe School District board, Petaluma, has approved a 7 per cent cost-of-living increase for all employees.

Schools Supt. Dean D. Magowan said the increase, granted Thursday, would go into effect at the start of the 1971-72 school year for both certificated and classified employees, although the teachers had not requested an increase.

Magowan said the raises were based on a 5 per cent cost of living increase the past year and an additional 2 per cent was added so that purchasing power would be increased to meet the rise in living costs expected to come next year.

He said no estimate has been made on costs of the salary increases to the district. Magowan said the base pay for teachers will be increased from $6,400 to $7,168 while top pay will rise from $12,800 to $14,336.

The Old Adobe School District board also:

SCHEDULES — Approved class assignments and schedules for next fall that will put grades one through four on double sessions at La Tercera School until the opening of the new Miwok Valley School. Magowan said it is not expected that double sessions will be greatly necessary at other schools unless enrollment increases significantly.

SCIENCE — Agreed to permit Sonoma State College to use La Tercera School for a workshop for science teachers next year.

SUMMER — Heard Magowan report that 500 students have registered for summer classes, an increase of 200 over last year.

FILM — Saw a motion picture produced by fifth grade students in a creative writing class.

LUNCHES — Agreed to continue the hot lunch program in all four district schools next year.

Flood Control Budget Is Cut

Advisory board members for San Rafael Meadows Flood Control Zone No. 6 have drastically pared the zone's budget in a special meeting.

Although they had earlier approved three projects for a total of $25,000 that would have meant a tax rate of $1 per $100 assessed valuation, the board members on Thursday eliminated two projects to hold the tax rate to the present 29.5 cents, according to Charles E. Murphy, flood control engineer.

The only one still planned for fiscal 1971-72 is a 30-inch drainage pipe to be installed from Del Prado Avenue to the main drainage ditch at an estimated cost of $4,200, Murphy said.

Pleads Innocent To Stolen Property Count

Dennis J. Hachmyer, 23, of Novato, has pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court to a charge of receiving stolen property. A preliminary hearing was set for June 15.

Hachmyer was arrested by Novato police last week, but officers have withheld details of the case pending further investigation which they said probably would result in more arrests.

Two Presidents 'To Lead' Cal

BERKELEY (UPI) —For the first time in campus history, the University of California at Berkeley will have two students acting as student body president.

Larry Seidman, an economics student, and Alan T. Fong, student of Asian studies, will share the presidency of the Associated Students next year.

They are both graduate students elected on an activist, nonviolent platform.

In the past, students have shared the vice presidency, but this will be the first time the top student post has been shared.

Pleads Innocent To Prison Escape

San Quentin Prison inmate Charles E. Lennon, 28, has pleaded innocent to a charge of escape from the prison Feb. 28.

Superior Court Judge E. Warren McGuire set trial for the week of July 19.

Lennon was indicted by the Marin County Grand Jury on May 11 for fleeing over a prison roof, using a homemade grappling hook and rope. He was captured near the Sears service center on Highway 17 shortly after making his escape.

Lennon is a convicted rapist-kidnapper from Los Angeles County, prison officials said.

Inverness Ridge retreat, one acre plus, among the pines with a full panoramic view over Limantour Spit, Drakes Bay, Point Reyes headlands, Farallon Isalnds and the whole Pacific, and that's just one view from the southwest side of the house. Looking the other way, you're looking right down on the National Seashore headquarters, Bear Valley Road and the old town of Olema with a glimpse on clear days of San Francisco. You can enjoy all this while living in a well-built, 2 bedroom, 1 bath home, all rooms generous in size with living room, dining room extra large. Large, attached double garage. Lots of fruit trees and pine trees with most of the acre almost level. There are very few locations along the Inverness Ridge that command the vista of this home. Well-priced for only $42,500.

Inverness mesa 3-story chalet set high among the Bishop pines with beautiful wood paneling throughout, open-beam ceilings, generous decks. This older home nearly completely remodeled recently, taking full advantage of all the charm of the unique older Inverness cabins. First floor, 1 bedroom; second floor, large living room plus 2 bedrooms, bath and kitchen with beautiful sundecks; third floor, private outside entrance, quite lovely attic loft sleeping room. Gets lots of sun all day. $31,500. Shown by appointment only.

Spectacular, large, 3 bedroom, 2 bath home with fully equipped kitchen, dishwasher, garbage disposal, etc. Located on one acre which runs from Portola Road, Inverness, through to Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, overlooking thousands of acres of pasture on the valley floor and to Black Mountain. The house has a unique setting among a large grove of beautiful mature trees. The basement could be developed into many more rooms very easily. An outstanding buy for only $36,500.

WE ARE NOT KIDDING!

Besides your best place to buy your used parts, we are your best place to buy your used car

BECAUSE..

1-We have the spare parts to back up our mutually agreed upon warranty.
2-We know the weak parts of most makes & models of cars-after all that's our business!
3-We have an educated guess as to the degree of success you will have with any car you purchase from us.
4-We offer terms if your credit is good.
5-We are anxious to increase our numbers of satisfied customers.

Arraignment In Drug Case

Irene Louise Bradley, 19, of 865 Las Gallinas Avenue, San Rafael, was arraigned yesterday in Marin Municipal Court on charges of selling and possessing heroin.

She was arrested at her apartment Thursday by a drug agent who said that she had sold him a balloon containing a small quantity of heroin on May 28. He also said that she had agreed to sell him an ounce of the narcotic later.

She was held in jail in lieu of $3,500 bail and her case was continued to Monday for entry of plea.

Prophylactics Bill Advances

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — A bill permitting pharmacists to advertise and display prophylactics has been approved by the Senate Business and Professions Committee and sent to the upper house floor.

The bill, SB 650 by Sen. Peter H. Behr, R-San Rafael, cleared the committee on a 8-1 vote. The only "no" vote was by Sen. George Deukmejian, R-Long Beach.

Present laws restrict the display and advertising of prophylactics, a restriction Behr said made "little sense when the incidence of venereal disease in California has reached epidemic proportions."

Skyjacker Talked Out Of Flight

WASHINGTON (UPI) —A retired West Virginia coal miner, suffering from black lung disease, was arraigned early today on charges of air piracy for the hijacking of a United Air Lines 737 that he wanted flown to Israel.

The short-haul, two-jet plane was bound from Charleston, W. Va., to Newark last night when a man, identified as Glenn Elmo Riggs, 59, forced it to land at Dulles International Airport in suburban Virginia and then demanded a bigger plane to take him to Tel Aviv.

After his arrest, Riggs was asked why he wanted to go to Israel, and replied, "You know about as much as I do."

Riggs admitted he had been drinking heavily yesterday and didn't "even know how I got on the plane."

The 66 passengers and crew aboard the plane that was commandeered for three hours were apparently as confused as Riggs. The hijacker was described, at one point, as being "foreign looking."

U.S. Magistrate A. Stanley King, in a rare post-midnight session, ordered Riggs held without bond in the Alexandria, Va., city jail until his preliminary hearing June 11. Riggs was handcuffed and led away with a chain around his waist.

Air piracy is a capital offiense.

The hijacking came exactly one year after a former bakery truck driver from Phoenix, Ariz., angered over the Supreme Court's refusal to bear his complaint that the Internal Revenue Service overcharged him $471 on his taxes, hijacked a TWA plane.

That hijack ended when FBI agents shot out the tires of the plane after it landed at Dulles. The agents and the crew overcame the suspect, Arthur G. Barkley, whose case is now before a U.S. district court.

In yesterday's hijacking, the suspect allegedly placed a .32-caliber revolver at the head of the plane's second officer, Gregory D. Colliton, 30, Spokane, Wash.

Colliton said Riggs "cocked that gun 50 or 60 times." He described Riggs as "almost out of contact with reality, it appeared. His eyes seemed to glaze."

Riggs said he had to leave the United States because "a bomb was going to come to America."

Rejects Role

HEIDELBERG, Germany (UPI)—Adolf Hitler's minister of armaments and war productions, Albert Speer, has turned down a panelist's role in a television discussion of alleged U.S. war crimes in Vietnam.

AT SONOMA STATE — Sen. Mervyn Dymally, D-Los Angeles, calling for peaceful coexistence in America, addresses Sonoma State graduates, while a senior attired in a football shirt stands to acknowledge a calling of the graduates. Unlike last year's graduation, however, bizarre garb was at a minimum at yesterday's commencement.

Sanctuary Fund Drive Scheduled

A fund drive to replace the aged, stone-block sanctuary of the First Presbyterian Church of San Rafael is expected to begin officially tomorrow.

Church officials announced 130 stewards will be commissioned at worship services to seek pledges from members and friends of the congregation.

The three-year goal is $200,000, or about half the cost of constructing a new sanctuary and a chapel-lounge. Total cost is expected to run about $410,000.

The decision to raze the present sanctuary was a controversial one. A dissident group of congregation members challenged the move, saying there was evidence the sanctuary could be saved through means of building a new interior wall, but the church's ruling body was unswayed.

The sanctuary, closed since last year, has been deemed unsafe under earthquake standards.

Angela Davis Offered Job At Nairobi College

EAST PALO ALTO (UPI)— Angela Davis, held on charges stemming from the Marin County courthouse shoot-out last year, has been offered a teaching job at Nairobi College.

Nairobi President Don Smothers said Friday that his offer to Miss Davis, held in the Marin County Jail at San Rafael, was made last week but he has not received an answer.

Miss Davis, an admitted Communist and former UCLA philosphhy instructor who studied under controversial Marxist teacher Herbert Marcuse at the University of California in San Diego, is accused of being involved in the plot which ended with the shoot-out in which a judge was killed.

Smothers said Miss Davis could have the job once released on bail. The bail issue is expected to be decided next week in Marin County Superior Court.

Joint Workshop Is Set Monday Night

The Marin County Housing Authority will hold a joint workshop meeting with the Marin Redevelopment Agency at 8 a.m. Monday in the senior citizens project at 5 Golden Hinde Boulevard, San Rafael, according to Executive Director Wallace K. Shepherd.

The special session was set to prepare for the two agencies' scheduled meeting with the county board of supervisors Tuesday morning to discuss redevelopment in Marin City and general county housing needs.

Toliver's Counsel Levels Charges

Sausalito School District officials want to abolish the post held by special assistant James T. Toliver Jr. because he is a controversial person and because he is black, Toliver's attorney declared yesterday.

Attorney A. Leonard Bjorklund charged that the decision to drop Toliver's $14,773-per-year post is illegal because it was made by a three-man personel committee behind closed doors and not by the district board of trustees. Bjorklund argued the case before George R. Coan, hearing officer from the California Department of Administrative Procedure, at the Marin Civic Center.

Dist. Supt. Lawrence A. Lindberg testified that a big drop in attendance and a "very serious financial situation" are the sole reasons for eliminating Toliver's position. He said race had nothing to do with dropping the post, and the main criteria in determining who would be dropped is seniority.

The school district this year is cutting back more than 20 positions as part of a sweeping budget reduction.

Under questioning by Asst. County Counsel Richard V. Godino, representing the school district, Lindberg testified that the school district's attendance has dropped sharply. In 1966, average daily attendance was 885, but this is down to 540 this year and is expected to drop to 503 next year, Lindberg said.

He said that without the cutback, the school district would exhaust its reserves and go broke.

Trustees voted to eliminate Toliver's job on a 3-2 vote last year, then reversed itself and retained him.

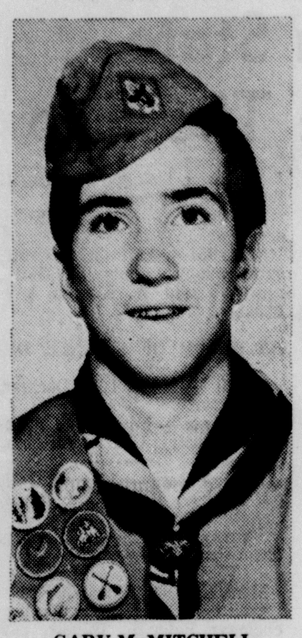
This year, Lindberg said the personnel committee met in January and in February and decided to eliminate his job as part of the budget cutback. The personnel committee is composed of Lindberg and trustees Robert Thompson and Mrs. Delta Christ.

Martha Freebairn-Smith of Mill Valley, who was on the school board from 1965 to 1970, testified for Toliver yesterday. She said the post of special assistant was created three years ago because there was a need for a strong black administrator, and Toliver filled that need.

Another action against Toliver is pending in Marin Superior Court. The school trustees on May 13 voted to fire Toliver for "incompetence," "disruptive behavior" and not following directions. Toliver is fighting these personal charges in court.

This court action is not related to yesterday's hearing, which dealt only with the elimination of his post for budget reasons, and not with the personal charges against him.

Hearing officer Coan took the case under submission and announced he would send his conclusions to the school district trustees, who then would decide whether to retain Toliver's job. Coan said his job is to present the facts and determine whether the school district complied with the state education code on staff reductions.



GARY M. MITCHELL
Eagle scout

Eagle Pin Tomorrow For Scout

Gary M. Mitchell, 15-year-old assistant scoutmaster of Troop 82, Novato, will receive an Eagle award at a court of honor at 6 p.m. tomorrow at Good Shepherd Lutheran Church, Novato.

Mitchell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Mitchell of 20 Nassau Court, is a senior at San Jose Junior High School.

Mitchell began his scouting career in 1965 in Cub Pack 48 in Tiburon and joined Troop 82, sponsored by the Loma Verde Home Owners Association, in 1968.

He advanced to first class, star scout and life scout and served in various positions in the troop, now headed by his father.

In May 1970, Mitchell was elected to the Order of the Arrow. He holds 22 merit badges.

Expressway Is Out; Subway To Be Built

TORONTO (UPI) — Saying Toronto "does not belong to the automobile," Ontario Premier William Davis has announced that a controversial $237 million expressway will be halted and a subway will be built instead.

The 6.5 mile expressway was intended to link northwest Toronto with the city's downtown core. Davis said a subway will be built along the same route.

Davis' announcement, ending a 10-year battle between backers and opponents of the expressway, was made to the provincial legislature.

"If we are building a transportation system to serve the automobile, the Spadina Expressway would be a good place to start," Davis said.

"But if we are building a transportation system to serve people, the Spadina Expressway is a good place to stop."

Antisuicide Benefit Slated

An, art show and wine and cheese-tasting show will be held at the American Legion Log Cabin in San Anselmo next Saturday to benefit the Marin Suicide Prevention Center.

The North Bay Chapter of the British American Club will put on the event, featuring paintings by marin artists, and a performance by the Prince Charles Bagpipe Band. The event will be from 6 to 8 p.m. Dancing will follow from 8:30 p.m. to 1 a.m.

Nancy Peppitt of Santa Venetia, committee chairman, said persons interested in attending may call the Suicide Prevention Center of Marin between 9 a.m. and noon for tickets and information.

Probation For One In Drug Case

Judge Joseph G. Wilson of Marin Superior Court has given straight probation to one of four men involved in a big drug raid in Inverness in 1969.

Place on probation for two years was James Willard Clapp, 23, who now lives in Oregon.

Earlier this week Judge Wilson sent a codefendant, John Brad McCall, 23, of Mill Valley, to jail for six months.

In Clapp's case, the probation department recommended six months in jail but the judge did not give him jail time, reportedly because Clapp has found steady employment in Oregon.

Still awaiting sentencing is Craig R. Westlin, 23, of Inverness.

A fourth man, John Lipinsky, 23, formerly of Inverness, is a fugitive.

The four were arrested in May 1969 when agents raided a house where they said they found large quantities of hashish. McCall and Clapp had admitted selling the drug to an agent.

Dixie School To Graduate 313

A class of 313 eighth grade students will graduate at 6:30 p.m. Thursday from Vallecito School in the Dixie School District.

Doreen Cook will be student speaker and Sue Benedict, mistress of ceremonies. Debbie Walker will lead the Pledge of Allegiance.

District Trustee Earl H. Koehler will give the graduation address.

Clifford Campbell, district superintendent, will present the class.

Principal Walter W. Vater, assisted by Trustees Dorothy Brown and Koehler, will award diplomas.

Family Trio Hurt In Auto Accident

Three members of the same family have been treated at Marin General Hospital for minor facial cuts suffered when their car hit a tree in San Rafael.

Boon Linton, 35, of 1358 Lincoln Avenue, San Rafael, and her children, John, 9 and Jinn, 7, were injured when their car struck a tree at Cijos and Third streets at 6:30 p.m. Thursday.

TAKE THAT! — Billy Backus (right) lands a right to the head of Jose Napoles in second round of their world welterweight championship bout in Inglewood last night. However, Napoles went on to regain the championship on a knockout in the eighth round. (UPI telephoto)

WORLD WELTERWEIGHT BOUT

Napoles Regains Crown

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI)— After a lapse of six months, Jose Napoles again reigned as welterweight champion of the world today, regaining his crown from Billy Backus, who beat him last December.

Napoles may have taken Backus lightly in their Dec. 3 fight at Syracuse, N.Y., when the nephew of Carmen Basilio was awarded the title as the fight was stopped in the fourth round.

But Friday night at the Forum, Napoles fought a perfect fight and it ended with the bout being halted in the eighth after Backus was down twice in the round.

The two knockdowns, however, were not what terminated the bout. Just as Napoles had the title lifted the first time because of eye cuts, Backus lost it back for the same reason.

Referee Dick Young, on the advice of ring physician Dr. Jack Useem, halted the fight at 1:53 of the eighth. Backus' right eye was entirely closed and his left eye gushed blood from a cut he suffered in the fifth round.

On most cards, Backus had not taken a round before the sudden termination of the bout in the eighth. Napoles admitted he took a few stiff punches in the first few rounds that made him respect Backus.

"Backus is a fine fighter," Napoles said. "He was one of the best prepared fighters I ever met."

But the champion, who came in at 145 3-4, couldn't solve Napoles' strategy of throwing his left and circling away. Napoles, 146, went contrary to the usual ring adage of not leading with the left against a southpaw.

"After the last fight we decided to use our left more—to hook and jab," Napoles said. "I felt the left had to win it for me and it did."

Napoles never let Backus get set, throwing his left and then moving away like a matador working a bull. The role fit the Cuban winner.

But Backus, while taking nothing away from Napoles, said for some reason he couldn't get started and didn't loosen up until the sixth round. By then his right eye was swelling and his left bleeding.

"Napoles wasn't better this time; I just wasn't as good," Backus said. "I certainly want another shot at him. But he's a very smooth fighter.

"I don't know if he's the hardest hitter I ever met but I went down. I couldn't see out of my right eye so I guess they had to stop it."

Napoles in the eighth dropped Backus with a short left and right to the head. Backus bounced up at three but took the mandatory eight count. A left and right to the body sent Backus down the second time and he did not get up until six.

At that point the referee motioned to Napoles' corner and the crowd thought he was halting the bout but it was to summon the doctor. After Dr. Useem looked at Backus, he advised Young to halt the bout.

Under California ring rules, it goes into the book as a knockout, the first suffered by Backus in his career. But the Syracuse battler was well rewarded for his first title defense. He received $90,000 guaranteed and the closed circuit television rights for the Syracuse area. Napoles got a challenger's $30,000.

Although Napoles is a strong favorite in Southern California and his adopted homeland of Mexico, the turnout of 14,645 and the gate of $185,755 were below expectations. Despite being the challenger, Napoles was a 2-1 favorite.

The new champion says he's ready to meet any worthy challenger but would leave it to his manager and the promoters to arrange that.

Joe Orengo Doesn't Preach To The Kids

Joe Orengo missed the Memorial weekend four-game sweep of the Expos by the Giants but he popped up in the Candlestick press box for the series with the Mets.

None of the press box veterans asked Orengo why he happened to miss the sweep of the Expos. They knew he was doing double duty for the Giants, fulfilling his own speaking engagements and those which Russ Hodges had scheduled before he died.

"I was down in the mountain country this time around Santa Cruz," said Orengo, "and it was beautiful."

What does Orengo talk about other than the Giants?

"For one thing I don't preach to the youngsters but I do try to point out a few facts about life, at least try to bring them into proper focus," said Orengo.

And just how does he do that without preaching?

"Anecdotes," said Orengo, "that contain the message. All kids love to hear baseball stories. I don't know how many times I've told the one about myself and Branch Rickey.

"I thought I had a pretty good year in 1940 with the Cardinals. It was my first full year in the majors. I hit .287 and played second, short and third in 129 games.

"Now, baseball salaries in 1940 weren't much more than what today's players consider walking around money. I knew club owners were having a tough time of it. They weren't the only ones. Competition for jobs was still fierce because the country hadn't yet fully recovered from the depression of the '30s.

"Nevertheless, I thought I deserved a raise. I was shocked when I received my 1941 contract. It actually cut my salary. I sent it back to Mr. Rickey with a note 'I can make more picking oranges.'

"Two days later I received a telegram from Mr. Rickey and it contained two words: 'Pick 'em.' "

So Orengo became a Giant in 1941, the first year he met Horace Stoneham in the old Polo Grounds. When the Giants moved west in 1958, Orengo already was well established in the automobile business in his native San Francisco.

Naturally, Stoneham recognized Orengo as a natural for the club's speakers bureau. As usual, Orengo was in spring training camp this year for a week, getting background data for his talks. At that time he picked the Giants to be a winner this season. Why?

"Because of the rookie crop — Chris Speier, Steve Stone, George Foster, Jimmy Rosario, Bernie Williams, Chris Arnold, Ed Goodson, Jim Barr and others who didn't make the big club.

"But Speier, Stone, Foster and Rosario did, not just because of their talent but the fierce competition they gave veterans and other rookies trying to beat them out.

"There's nothing like competition to bring out the best in a player."

Does Orengo say that in his talks to youngsters?

"Not that way. I quote Satchel Paige's advice: 'Don't look back because someone may be gaining on you.' "

Nicklaus Gains Tie In Atlanta

ATLANTA (UPI)—Jack Nicklaus sometimes surprises himself.

Here he is, tied for the lead with young John Miller going into today's third round of the $125,000 Atlanta Golf Classic. And, really, this tournament was intended as limbering up exercises for the U. S. Open a couple of weeks from now.

"I only played a few holes after winning the Byron Nelson Classic four weeks ago," Nicklaus explained. "I felt I needed the rest and I didn't want my game to go stale approaching the Open.

"My plan was to come here and then go on to Philadelphia (scene of the '71 Open) next

What A Marathon! A's Win It In 21 Innings

Jackson's Walk Ends Struggle

WASHINGTON (UPI) —It was beginning to look as if an act of Congress would have to stop the Oakland A's and Washington Senators.

But in the top of the 21st inning early this morning, the Senators' Jim Shellenback walked Reggie Jackson with the bases loaded and then threw a wild pitch to break a 3-3 deadlock.

The Senators, who had scored three runs Friday night in the bottom of the ninth to tie the score, couldn't come back in their half of the 21st and the A's struggled to the dressing room with a 5-3 victory.

The five-hour, 19-minute marathon was the sixth longest game in American League history. There have been two 24 inning games, two 22-inning contests and one other 21 inning game in the American league.

If the A's hadn't scored in the 21st and the game had remained tied, the game would have been halted and completed before tonight's contest. A league rule prohibits any inning from starting after 1 a.m. The game ended at 1:06 EDT.

Oakland used 20 players and Washington 21 with the Senators using eight pitchers and the A's seven. Diego Segui (42), who pitched the last innings, got the win.

Dick Green opened the 21st for A's with a double and Curt Blefary singled to right, but Green was thrown out at the plate. Blefary went to second on the throw and Bert Campaneris was intentionally walked. Both runners advanced on Shellenback's wild pitch and Larry Brown walked to load the bases.

Jackson, who was 1-for-9 in the game, then worked the count to 3-2, fouled a pitch and drew ball four.

In the bottom of the 20th Blefary saved the game for the A's when he leaped above the left field bullpen fence to rob Don Wert of a homer.

Campaneris drove in two of Oakland's first three runs.

Washington tied the game in the ninth on a two-run single by Toby Harrah.

Jim Hunter (3-3) will be on the mound tonight for the A's against Dick Bosman (3-7).

Arnie Dons Specs; Tests Open Site

PHILADELPHIA (UPI)—Arnold Palmer, wearing eyeglasses, went through a practice round Friday at the Merion Golf Club in preparation for the 1971 U.S. Open June 17-20.

Palmer said he was "just trying out" the glasses.

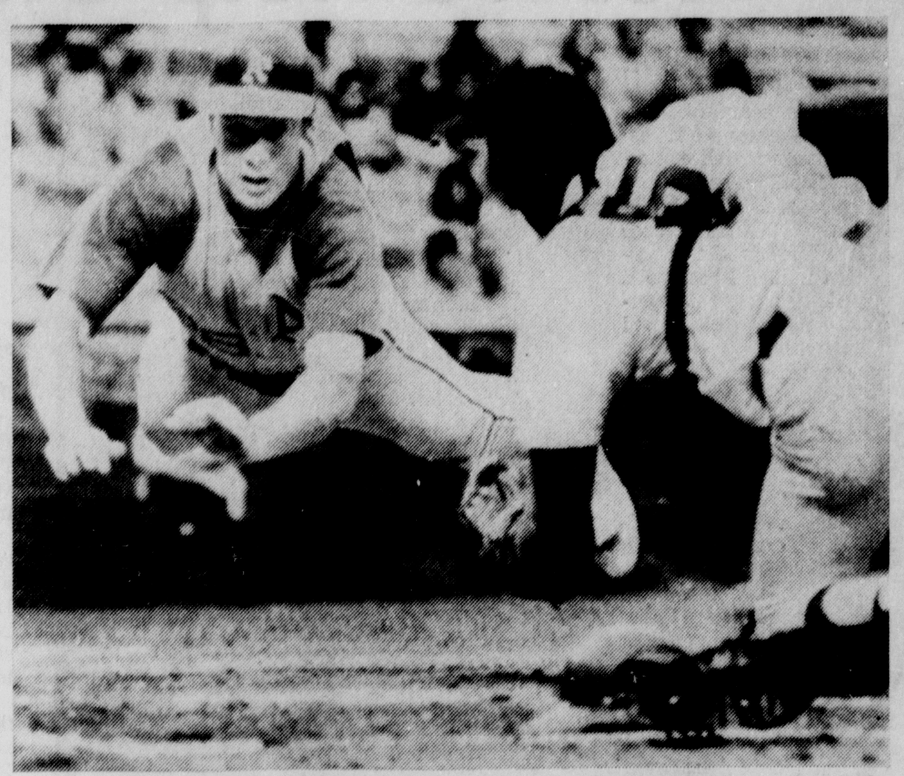
He said an optometrist recommended he use them occasionally.

He wore the glasses for a couple holes as he played best-ball on the par-70, 6,554-yard East Course.

The 41-year-old Palmer said the glasses were mainly for distance.

Palmer said the course was in "excellent" shape and basically the same as in 1964 when he played a charity match with the late President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Palmer, who last won the U.S. Open in 1960, said if the course "is as good two weeks from now, then it will be excellent."



HE'S OUT — Washington catcher Paul Casanova waits to tag out Oakland's diving Gene Tenace in second inning of their marathon last night in Washington. Tenace attempted to score from first after a hit by Dick Green. Oakland went on to win it, 5-3, in the 21st innings. (UPI telephoto)

Giants Still In A Slump But Lose Little Of Lead

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— Jim Bunning says he doesn't mind one bit helping out in the bullpen as long as the Philadelphia Phillies need him there.

The 39-year-old one-time star righthander relieved for the second time in nine games Friday night and he retired five consecutive batters to save a 5-3 victory for Chris Short over the San Francisco Giants.

"I don't mind at all going back to the bullpen," said Bunning. "The club needs me there and after all that's what I'm here for—to help out in any way that I can."

Bunning broke into the majors way back in 1956 as a reliever with the Detroit Tigers and he has worked out of the bullpen on a couple of occasions since then.

"There is a world of difference between starting and relieving," Bunning said. "I have no trouble getting loose in a hurry and I think I can pitch three days running if I have to, but then I would need a couple of days off."

Bunning struck out two batters in his 1 2-3 inning stint Friday night to push his career total to 2,825, second highest in the history of baseball.

Phils manager Frank Lucchesi said Bunning's tour in the bullpen should be a short one.

"He's there because we are short," Lucchesi said. "Dick Selma is on the injured list and we need a dependable righthander down there until he gets back. When Selma returns Bunning will go back to starting."

"Naturally, I would rather start," Bunning said, "But it's no great tragedy for me to relieve if that's where the club needs me."

Short, who won his fourth game in 11 decisions, took a 4-1 lead into the eighth inning of Friday night's game and then was sent to the showers after a single by Bobby Bonds, his third hit of the game, a triple by Chris Speier and a single by Tito Fuentes netted the Giants a pair of runs to get them close. Short hit Willie Mays with a pitch and that's when Bunning came on to close out the Giants, who suffered their third consecutive loss.

It marked the first time this season the Giants have lost as many as three games in a row but it made no difference in the standings. The second place Los Angeles Dodgers lost, too, so the Giants remained a comfortable 9 1-2 games in front in the so-called National League West Race.

San Francisco played with another patchwork lineup Friday as Willie McCovey and Ken Henderson remained on the shelf. Still, the Giants managed 11 hits off Short in the 7 1-3 innings he worked.

The Phils touched Gaylord Perry for eight hits and three runs in 4 1-3 innings and sent the San Francisco righthander down to his third loss in nine decisions.

The Phils and Giants resume their four-game weekend series today with Ron Bryant (5-2) pitching against rookie Ken Reynolds.

Giants manager Charlie Fox said there is a possibility Henderson may start today's game. Kenny has been on the shelf for two weeks with a pulled groin muscle. He pinch-hit unsuccessfully Friday night. McCovey, though, looks like he might be sidelined for at least another week with a gimpy knee.

"It sure feels good to see the other teams losing while we are having our problems," said Fox. "We lose three games in a row and it cost us only a half game in the standings."

Pittsburgh Sub Kills Houston

By JOE CARNICELLI
UPI Sports Writer

Sitting on the bench hasn't spoiled Gene Clines.

Clines, playing in place of fluweakened Robert Clemente, smashed a pair of run-scoring singles Friday night to help the Pittsburgh Pirates post a 3-2 victory over the Houston Astros.

Clines, one of the Pirates' "Supersubs," singled in a run with two out in the third and knocked across the winning run in the fifth after Dave Cash singled, stole second and went to third on a throwing error.

"There's a lot of pride among the guys sitting on the bench," said Clines. "Guys like Jose Pagan, Bill Mazeroski, Charlie Sands and me, we pull for one another. When one of us gets into a game, it means something to the rest of us if you come through and you don't always have to get a base hit to contribute. A little thing like moving a runner over with a bunt means as much to me as a hit, because this might be the particular job I'm supposed to do."

Elsewhere in the Natiocal League, New York beat Los angeles 3-1, Philadelphia downed San Francisco 5-3, Chicago ripped Atlanta 11-0, Cincinnati trounced St. Louis 12-0 and Montreal defeated San Diego 3-1.

In American league action, Oakland outlasted Washington 5-3 in a 21-inning marathon, Boston routed California 10-1, Baltimore shut out Milwaukee 2-0, Chicago edged Detroit 3-2, Kansas City downed New York 4-2 and Ceveland beat Minnesota 4-2 in a game called during the sixth inning because of rain.

New York moved into first place in the N.L. East by taking advantage of five Dodger errors, three by third baseman Bobby Valentine. Don Hahn singled to open the fifth, took second on a sacrifice and scored on Bud Harrelson's double to give the Mets a 1-0 lead.

An inning later, Cleon Jones singled, stole second, moved to third on a throwing error and scored on Valentine's error. Bob Aspromonte was safe on Maury Wills' error in the eighth and pinch-runner Al Weis scored on another Valentine error.

Tom Seaver pitched a sixhitter for his seventh victory against two losses and 10th in 11 decisions against the Dodgers. Richie Allen's homer provided the lone Dodger run and Seaver stopped Willie Davis' hitting streak at 25 games.

Ferguson Jenkins followed teammate Kenny Holtzman's no-hitter with a three-hit shutout and Joe Pepitone lashed four hits, including a homer, as the Cubs mauled Atlanta.

Pepitone drove in three runs as he highlighted a 19-hit Cub assault.

Cincinnati, held hitless by Holtzman the night before, broke out with a 17-hit attack to wallop St. Louis. Tony Perez and George Foster pounded out four hits each and Buddy Bradford had three, including a homer, to back rookie Ross Grimsley's three-hitter.

Johnny Bateman slashed a two-run double with two out in the top of the ninth inning to boost the Expos past San Diego. With the score tied at 11, Ron Fairly and Boots Day singled and Bateman delivered them with an opposite field double.

Bill Stoneman pitched a four-hitter and struck out nine to boost his record to 7-3.

BLOND BLASTER — Big Jack Nicklaus blasts from trap on 15th hole during yesterday's second round of the Atlanta Golf Classic. Nicklaus and John Miller are tied for the lead at the halfway mark.

week," Nicklaus continued. "I really didn't expect to start out so well here although I hoped my game would be up by the end of the week."

The 31-year-old "Golden Bear," only golfer to win all of the world's top four professional golf tournaments at least twice each, had a 67 Thursday, good enough for a four-way tie for second behind the 24-year-old Miller who opened with a 65. Then he outscored Miller 68-70 Friday as both stood at 9-under-par 135 and a stroke ahead of 43-year-old Gardner Dickinson who also surprised himself with his second straight 68.

Nicklaus, who has already won three tournaments and nearly $132,000 so far this year, needed a birdie on the final hole Friday to keep his share of the lead since Miller, who tied Nicklaus for second in the Masters, sank a 22-footer on the next to last hole.

But Miller doesn't let the fact that the man he is tied with is the omnipoent Nicklaus worry him. "I don't just look at Nicklaus," he said. "There are 20 other guys out there who can catch us."

Four, including Gary Player, Ray Floyd, Dave Eichelberger and Tom Weiskopf, were just two strokes back at 137 and the always dangerous Lee Trevino and Bobby Nichols were at 138.

Floyd, who had eight birdies in each of the first two rounds, went to 11 under par through his first 10 holes Friday, but then took a pair of triple bogeys in a three-hole span.

"Obviously I'm not very smart," the former PGA champion said wryly. "You have to fall asleep to make worse than a bogey on a hole."

Friday's best round, a 7under-par 65 that matched Miller's opening round, was turned in by Bobby Mitchell who shot an Atlanta Country Club course record 64 here two years ago.

Mitchell was in a five-man group of 139 shooters that also included Rod Curl, Dale Douglass, Bob Lunn and John Schroeder.

Winds Ruin World Record In Hurdles

BILLINGS, Mont. (UPI) — Rod Milburn, the young man from Southern University who is burning up the track in the outdoor season, ran a 13.0 in the 120 high hurdles Friday at the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics championships, but he had too much help from the wind to eclipse the world record.

Milburn's time was probably the fastest ever, but he was aided by a wind speed of 2.2 meters per second. The allowable wind speed for a world record is two meters per second.

The world record for the 120 high hurdles is 13.2 and Milburn's time easily beat the NAIA record of 13.5 set in 1967 by Willie Davenport.

Behind Milburn were Ron Draper, North Carolina Central, 13.4, and Efren Gipson, Sam Houston (Tex.) University, 13.5.

Willie McGee of Alcorn (Miss.) A&M had the only claim on the record books as the meet goes into the final events today.

McGee tied the previous NAIA 100-yard dash record Friday night when he ran the course in 9.3. The record was established in 1961 by Bob Hayes of Florida A&M and again in 1969 by Earnest Haynes, Texas A&I.

Trailing close behind McGee —All with 9.4 clockings—were Robert Taylor, Texas Southern; William Miller, Southern (LA.) University; and James Batie, Troy State (Ala.).

The three-mile run finals turned out a surprise winner—Gordon Minty of Eastern Michigan, with a time of 13:46.3.

The pre-meet favorite in the event, Rex Maddaford of Eastern New Mexico, came in second with 13:53.3. Third was Mike McDonald, Adams State (Colo.), with 14:05.2.

First place winner in the javelin finals was Bob Winn, Otawa (Kan.) University with 240-5.

Erich Hardaway, Sul Ross State (Tex.) won the shot put finals with a heave of 58-8 3-4.

In the long jump, it was Joshua Owusu, Angelo State (Tex.) with 25-6.

The decathlon champion is Bruce Jenner of Graceland (IOWA) College. With only three events left, Jenner was in fifth place with only 5,193 points Friday, but he won the pole vault to help amass hiw winning 7,407 total. The NAIA record is 7,551 points, set by Jeff Bennett of Oklahoma Christian in 1969.

BOWLING

Barbara Eastland Fires 649

Barbara Eastland, wife of Country Club Bowl veteran instructor Lou Eastland, bowled her high game and high series all on the same night.

Bowling in the Sleepers League, Barbara had a high game 257 and wound up with a 649 series to top the week's scores for the women. Over at Greenbrae Lanes, Sharon Peicich was right behind with a 644 three-gamer.

High scores for the men came from Dick Treadway, 662, at Greenbrae, and Bill Henderson, 861 for four at Country Club. Top junior was Wayne Ziegler, 649 at Greenbrae.

Three Marin County gals are high on the list after the first week in the West Coast match game eliminations going on at Castle Lanes in San Francisco.

Pert Penny Tauscher is 10th with a 745 four-game series; Bea Nickel is 12th, 730; and Marilyn Epidendio 15th, 720. Leading is Pinky Yee of San Francisco, 813.

The week's honor role of Marin County league bowling:

Oakland's Blue To Receive Gift Cad From Finley

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI)—Vida Blue, the Oakland A's brilliant rookie southpaw, will receive the new car promised him by A's owner Charlie Finley in about 10 days, Finley said Friday.

The A's owner said the car, a thank-you gift for Blue's excellent start this season, now is being shipped here from Detroit and a California license plate bearing the letters "VBLUE" has been obtained for it. Finley said he will present keys and title to the car to Blue as soon as possible, probably in 10 days.

Best Scores Hat Trick; West Ham Over Nexaca

A three-goal "hat trick" by Clyde Best paced West Ham United of England to a 5-1 victory over Nexaca of Mexico in an international soccer match last night at the Oakland Coliseum.

Best, a six-foot, 200-pound forward, set up a fourth goal for West Ham on a pass to Brian Robson.

Geoff Hurst, the only man ever to score a hat trick in a World Cup final match, recorded the other British goal.

West Ham shut out the Mexican squad until the final minutes, when Nexaca tallied on a penalty kick by Miguel Perrichon.

Novato '9' Triumphs

Four key seventh inning hits and six innings of shutout pitching by Dennis Bueler led Novato's American Legion baseball squad to a 3-2 victory over Vacaville Thursday night.

Back-to-back singles by John Kidder and Dave Judnick, followed up by a double by Randy Jackson and a single by Jack Burnam netted Novato's squad its second victory of the year to raise its league won-lost mark to 2-1.

According to Gene Ferretti, coach of Novato, the team "looked real good," and cited the fact that Novato didn't make an error.

The squad played Vallejo this afternoon, and has a game against Marin City slated for tomorrow at 2 p.m. at Novato.

33 Horses Die; Arson Suspected

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS, Ill. (UPI)—Two men were sought for questioning today in connection with a fire that destroyed a barn and caused the death of 33 horses at Arlington Park racetrack Friday.

Arlington Heights Fire Chief Harvey Carother said, "This fire looks to me like somebody touched it off." He and others who arrived at the scene shortly after the blaze was reported told police they saw two men running from the burning barn.

A trainer told authorities he tried to put out one small fire with a fire extinguisher and saw several others start at the same time.

Miami trainer Robert Cramer, who lost more than a dozen horses in the blaze, said he fired two men Thursday night after having trouble with them. Police said the two were being sought in an arson investigation.

Among the horses killed was Norman, owned by Tracy Bougon, which won the Frontier Handicap at Detroit and was valued by its owner at $75,000. Other trainers who lost horses in the fire included Henry Mojena, George Geier and Joseph Dorignac Jr.

Authorities estimated the loss to the building and animals at $500,000.

Several horses escaped from the burning wooden barn but were injured so badly they had to be destroyed.

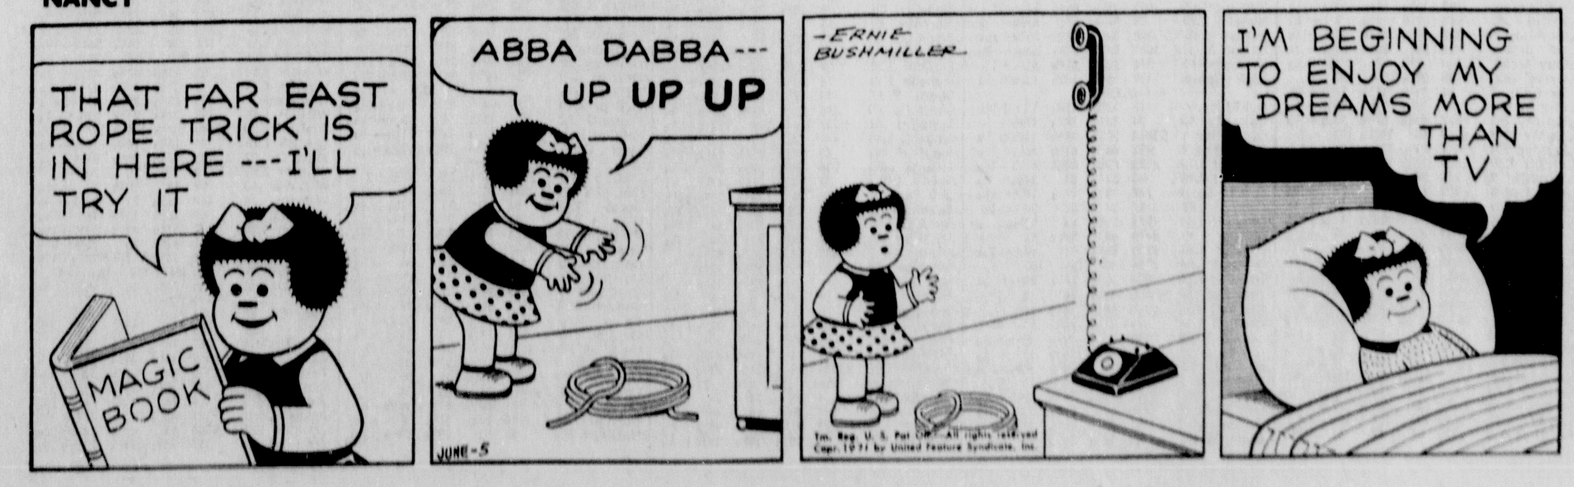
NANCY



ALMANAC

Today is Saturday, June 5, the 156th day of 1971.

The moon is between its first quarter and full phase. The morning stars are Mercury, Venus, Mars and Saturn. The evening star is Jupiter.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Gemini.

Madame Chiang Kai-shek, wife of the Nationalist China president, was born June 5, 1897.

On this day in history:

In 1917 more than 9.5 million Americans between the ages of 21 and 30 registered for the World War I draft.

In 1966 American astronaut Gene Cernan left Gemini 9 for a two-hour, 10-minute "space-walk."

In 1968 Sen. Robert Kennedy was shot in Los Angeles by a 24-year-old Arab national later identified as Sirhan Sirhan. The senator died and Sirhan remains in prison with a life sentence.

A thought for today: Franklin D. Roosevelt said, "There is no indispensable man."

Cycle Plans To Be Studied

Plans for a day of riding will be discussed at a meeting of the newly-formed motorcycle explorer post at 8 p.m. June 15 at the Bel Marin Keys Community Center.

The post, sponsored by the Marin County Motorcycle Association was organized for boys and girls, 14 to 18 years of age, to promote safety and enjoyment in motorcycle riding.

Further details can be obtained from Frank W. Joyner, 568-A Wilson Avenue, Novato.

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Correct Use Of Dummy Vital To Garner Winning Tricks

In many bridge hands there is no problem about winning certain tricks. The only question is whether you win them in the dummy or in your own hand. The difference is illustrated in today's hand.

LOW TRUMP

West led a low trump, partly to get off lead safely and partly to reduce dummy's ruffing power. The lead gave South the chance to get started on the wrong foot.

The average declarer would win the first trick with dummy's eight of spades in order to lead the ten of clubs for a finesse of some kind. If East has the ace or queen of clubs, and if South can guess which, declarer may manage to hold the club loss down to one trick.

In the actual hand, this line of play would fail dismally. West would take two clubs and the ace of diamonds, after which he would sit back smugly and wait for his high trump to take the setting trick.

BETTER PLAN

The actual declarer had a better plan. He overtook dummy's eight of spades with the jack at the first trick, cashed the top hearts, discarding a diamond, and then ruffed a heart with the queen of spades.

West discarded a diamond since it would do him no good to overuff. South thereupon led one of his carefully preserved low spades toward dummy. West could take his king of spades, but he could not prevent dummy from winning a trick with either the nine or the ten of spades.

RUN HEARTS

Declarer would then be in position to run the rest of the hearts, on which he could discard four clubs.

West could get one trump, one diamond and one club, but nothing else.

DAILY QUESTION

As dealer, you hold:
♠-10 9 8
♥-A K 8 7 4 3 2

What do you say?

ANSWER: Pass. The hand is too good for a shutout bid of any kind, but not quite good enough (in high cards) for an opening bid of one heart. Pass, with the intention of being heard from later.

Loch Lomond Head Reelected

Two officers of the Loch Lomond Homeowners Association have been reelected to second terms.

Donald B. Edmondo, of 10 Tweed Terrace, was reelected president of the 200 member organization, and Dorothy Childress, 24 Dunfries Terrace, was reelected secretary.

Other officers include Robert Robey, 51 Locksley Lane, vice-president, and J. M. Lifschiz, 27 Dunfries Terrace, treasurer and membership chairman.

Besides appointing chairmen to its various committees, the group voted to suspend meetings until October. Meetings will be called as dictated by need during the summer, Edmondo said.

Is 'Rap' Revolutionary? If So, In What Sense?

MORE NOTES FROM the bulging pocket:

Verle B. Johnston of 213 Humboldt Street, San Rafael, says that the term "rap session" derives from RAPP, used to describe meetings of the Bolshevik Alliance of Revolutionary Poets and Writers.

He doesn't cite any authority for this bit of information.

Johnson is a senior economist for the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco. He authored an article headed "So — What Else Is New?" printed in the March-April issue of 12-L NEWS, published for employees of his bank.

An over-simplified description of his article would explain it as citations of recent instances of history repeating itself.

His comments on the origin of the term "rap session" are a part of "So — What Else Is New?"

"How many, do you suppose, of those who participated in the I-J's Rap Session and have taken recourse to the expression actually are aware of the origin of the term?" he asks in a letter to the editor.

It is a safe bet that most people who gave it a second thought assumed that "rap" derived from rapport which the dictionary defines as relationship marked by harmony, conformity, accord or affinity.

ONE DAY LAST WEEK a Marin City resident, who understandably doesn't want his name divulged, made his way through I-J security guards to deliver a message to the editor in person. His message is a warning to those who pick up hitchhikers.

"People who pick up hitchhiders deserve no sympathy if they are subsequently beaten and robbed by those they have picked up," said the visitor.

"Why isn't there a law against hitchhiking?" he asked.

Others have asked the same question.

At times over the years, legislators have attempted to secure passage of laws prohibiting hitchhiking. Several problems emerge. How do you write a law, for instance, which, prohibits hitchhiking but does not penalize the fellow who runs out of gas in a remote area and needs to thumb a ride to a distant gas station?

In the present session of the legislature a strong argument against anti-hitchhiking legislation contended that it would discriminate against the very poor who have no way to travel other than beg rides.

On the other hand, the I-J's visitor from Marin City said he frequently sees hitchhikers he recognizes as being among the toughest element of Marin City. "Anybody who picks them up should know better," said the visitor.

WE ALL LIKE nice neighbors who never make waves. But this is one of our troubles. Nice people sit at home idly while activists and special interests influence the actions of our government, at all levels.

Mrs. Harriet Beckwith of Kent Woodlands is an exception among nice neighbors who don't make waves.

Like the rest of us, she is concerned about the situation in which our nation finds itself right now.

Unlike the rest of us, she doesn't dismiss it from mind and go about her own business as usual.

She has become interested in the so-called Hatfield-McGovern Amendment (to the Selective Service Act — S.B. 376) which would set a definite date for final and complete withdrawal of U.S. troops from Vietnam.

Mrs. Beckwith has obtained reprints of Congressional Record arguments supporting the Hatfield-McGovern proposal. She is busy urging friends and acquaintances to familiarize themselves with the material and then to communicate their views to our senators and congressmen in Washington.

Since S.B. 376 will be voted on in another week or two, she urges haste.

"If we want our government to act according to our wishes, we must make our thoughts known to those in Washington," she says simply.

The country can use more nice neighbors like Mrs. Beckwith who let their thoughts be known and urge others to do likewise — without rabble rousing, demonstrating, cursing or abusing.

FREEDOM OF the press has "further deterioriated" in the western hemisphere during the past six months, according to the Inter American Press Association.

The deterioriation has choked freedom to express opposition to or criticism of regimes in Cuba, Haiti, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Bolivia, Guatemala and Brazil. Press freedom, and all that goes with it, is under threat in Chile, Colombia and Uruguay.

The IAPA Committee on Freedom of the Press described the first eight nations named above as a "black list of repression and tyranny . . . where the people are denied their right to be informed."

The chairman of the Committee on Freedom of the Press speaks from first hand knowledge. He is Julio de Mesquita Neto, publisher of O Estado of Sao Paulo, Brazil. His newpaper plant was once seized by the troops of Brazilian strong man Getulio Vargas.

Such "primitive methods" as outright seizure by force are no longer being utilized. Totalitarian governments now use more subtle, sophisticated means to silence or intimidate the press.

In Chile, President Salvador Allende's Marxist regime has not yet directly suppressed press freedom, but newspaper wages have been raised astronomically by government edict while advertising rates are to be fixed at new low levels by government authority to "curb inflation." The expectation is that when the newspaper inevitably faces a financial crisis, the government will have to step in and take control of it to "save the jobs" of those it employs.

Chile is not yet on the IAPA black list because the press of Chile is still technically free to express its opinions.

But if someone offers you stock in a Chilean newspaper publishing concern at a seemingly favorable price, you would have to be daft to buy it.

Greyhound Racing And Vivisection

Assemblyman (Walter W.) Powers has introduced Assembly Bill 935 which permits greyhound racing in California. This bill is due to be heard June 10.

On the face of it, it would seem there is nothing wrong with permitting greyhound racing. However, I think your readers should know the background facts and I urge them to write Sacramento and do their utmost to kill this noxious legislation.

The simple fact is that thousands of dogs will be bred for racing. Only the best are then used for this purpose — the balance either abandoned or sold to the vivisectionists. These so-called "scientists" are usually apt to be most inhumane in their treatment of animals. Aside from the torture inflicted on these defenseless creatures, they are kept penned in cages with scarcely room to lie down. Further, most of this "research" is completely uncalled for. The same experiment is performed over and over again on trusting animals for no purpose whatsoever . . .

What happens to dogs that are selected for racing? When they become too old to continue this activity, they, too, are sold to the vivisectionists.

I hope a large number of your readers will write their assemblyman to urge this legislation be defeated.

'Accountability' Test For Students Proposed

During the past four years the parents of Old Mill School students have been split into two camps, with much bitterness and unpleasantness. There are those who approve of the experimentation being conducted on the children and those who are against it.

The parents who are against this "self-education" by the children are against it primarily for one reason, and that is that they believe the chidren cannot and do not achieve academically, and will eventually emerge from this school district unable to compete with their peers emerging from more conventional schools.

At a PTA meeting last week the principal, Mr. (David) Erskine, stated that the arithmetic and reading scores were higher than four years ago, and it would seem from this statement that the goals of greater achievement are being reached. However, such things as conditions under which tests are conducted, the admission two years ago that an undetermined number of children were not included in the testing because they had been designated "educationally handicapped" by the teacher, and the poor achievement of their own children tends to continue to spawn "unbelievers."

It would seem that the aim of all parents and the board of trustees is academic achievement, and only the method by which it is obtained is in dispute.

May I suggest therefore that the board of trustees consider the proposal that all Old Mill students take the Stanford Achievement Test at an independent school by an independent testing staff . . . The results would give an accurate and clear assessment of the impact of the last four years.

How You Can Help The FBI: Say Nothing Against Hoover

WASHINGTON — "The people who attack the FBI and its leader, J. Edgar Hoover, are doing the country a terrible disservice."

Thus spoke Prof. Heinrich Applebaum, chairman of the criminology department at the Bonnie and Clyde Institute for Advanced Studies.

"How so?" I asked.

"There are 8,400 FBI agents in the country," Applebaum said, "including 57 blacks and no women. These agents are desperately needed in the war against crime."

"NO ONE DISPUTES that," I said. "But why would criticism of J. Edgar Hoover affect our country's battle against the forces of evil that would attack us from within?"

"Because," said Applebaum, "every time someone attacks J. Edgar Hoover, which is synonymous with attacking the FBI, two agents have to be assigned to the case to find out who made the attack and what is behind it. So far this year there have been 4,166 attacks made against Mr. Hoover in the press and at universities and in Congress. This means 8,332 agents have had to be taken off their duties, which has left only six agents free to fight criminals."

"You mean the FBI has to devote most of its time these days to defending itself from attacks on the bureau?"

"That is correct," said Applebaum. "There was a time when the FBI was completely free of criticism. Then it was possible for Mr. Hoover to devote all his energies to capturing public enemies, Nazis, Communists and those who would destroy our way of life.

"But recently the attacks on the FBI director have made the bureau switch its game plan. Now hundreds of thousands of man hours must be spent finding out who is saying what about J. Edgar Hoover. As the criticism escalates, more and more people have to be assigned to making out reports on the attacks, and the backlog of criminal cases is building up."

"PROFESSOR," I SAID, "do you believe the criticism of the FBI director is a plot by criminal elements in this country to detract from the work the FBI has been chartered by Congress to do?"

"There is no doubt about it," he said. "Any time a professor, student or a former FBI agent says something uncomplimentary about the FBI director, everything stops and hundreds of bureau employees are involved in the investigation.

"Now, these attacks are no accident. They are inspired by people in this country who are aware that the more agents and employees are assigned to tracking down critics of J. Edgar Hoover, the less law enforcement people will be available to go after them. The time will not be far off when all the resources of the FBI will be used for only one purpose: to get the people who are demanding Mr. Hoover's retirement."

"THIS IS THE MOST insidious plot I have ever heard of," I said. "Surely the FBI must be aware of what is going on."

"They are," Applebaum said, "But the first priority of any law enforcement agency is to protect its leader from attack, particularly from those who want to force him to resign."

"What is the solution?" I said.

"We must persuade the media that every time they print a story or an editorial attacking Mr. Hoover, they are taking two agents off a criminal case. If the media want law and order in this land, they have to knock off their criticism of the FBI director so the bureau can go back to its original business, which is making America's streets safe after dark."

Supremely Confident Heath Plans New Role For Britain

LONDON — The poet of empire, Rudyard Kipling, wrote in "If" a flamboyant challenge to defeatists that could serve Prime Minister Edward Heath today. Not that Heath is in any sense an imperialist, since a primary goal is to overcome the dependence on the revenues of a vanished empire that gave Britain a false sense of security and well-being.

What Heath now intends to carry through must set the ghosts of the imperial past, the past of Rule Britannia, hovering over Downing Street. He means to unite Britain with Europe not only in a common market of trade and tariffs but eventually in a monetary and economic union subject to majority decision of the members. It is an earthshaking move, the full thrust of which neither Britons nor the world fully realizes.

SINCE 1940 this reporter has talked with four of Heath's predecessors in the historic and yet cozy precincts of 10 Downing Street. They all faced varying degrees of trouble in the slide from imperial power to little England, and they did not conceal their concern. With Heath the striking difference is his overwhelming confidence.

Taking Britain into the European Common Market will, he says, create a new entity. He does not use the term third force, since he and President Georges Pompidou in their meeting in Paris last week understood that inevitably they would continue to shelter under the American nuclear umbrella.

But it will be a third force in economic power, rivaling the United States and the Soviet Union in productivity and worldwide reach, both in the developed and developing nations. The two heads of government discussed at length how they would pool resources for help to peoples emerging from colonialism in Africa and Asia. To use a phrase rare in the prime minister's careful lexicon, this is an exciting moment.

He is a cool man presiding over a break with all that has gone before. Not only does he believe that Britain will become a partner with Europe, but he is confident Parliament will ratify this step before the summer recess at the end of July, and if it doesn't come by then, the Parliament can go on, against all precedence of sacred seashore holidays, into August.

THIS IS A determined man. He scoffs at the argument that Britain could not become part of a monetary and economic union bound by majority decision on such vital issues as inflationary control and interest rates. Why not? he says, confident as though Britain were already a part of the new order.

The "ifs" could be daunting to a prime minister less rooted in the rightness of his own policy. Opposition to the common market is strong both among his own Conservatives and the Laborites, with some members insisting on a popular referendum before parliament acts. In the recent county council elections, Labor scored a landslide. Upcoming by-elections threaten to nibble away the Tory majority.

Heath is a new kind of John Bull. The presence, the tricks of popular appeal, are not for him. Young Tories call him "the chairman," the take-charge director seated at the head of the table.

On the day he reported after Paris to a story Parliament, shouts of assent and dissent ringing in the crowded chamber, he could talk cool as a cucumber, dissecting the future of Heath and the nation, the two being roughly parallel. He fully expects to be sailing his 41-foot ketch at Cowes during the regatta in August. Rising from a modest middle-class background, he is no egalitarian.

INCENTIVES, EFFORT, competition, earned rewards — these are the motivations he hopes to inject in a Britain turning away from the welfare state. At their last meeting President Nixon expressed admiration for Heath's audacity in undertaking to reverse four or five decades of history. The President added that he would hardly undertake such a radical change-over. But, after all, Heath has four years to go, barring a political disaster, while for Nixon the next election is only a year and a half away.

Grudgingly, Labor party leaders concede Heath's ability, his managerial capacity, while scorning his cool, calculating personality. With their own party in disarray, he may, they allow, just make it. And if confidence is any measure there is little doubt he will.

South Africa Can Count Gains Despite Apartheid

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

"We are of Africa," declared Prime Minister John Vorster of the Republic of South Africa, "and we are prepared to make our contribution to the development of Africa according to our ability."

The occasion was South Africa's observance of its 10th anniversary as a republic.

ON MAY 31, 1961, in bitterness and anger South Africa had broken with the Commonwealth of Nations and established itself as a republic committed to apartheid, condemned by new black African nations and by most of the world as a blatant example of the theory of white supremacy.

In the following 10 years, South Africa survived economic boycott and, in the last year especially, won positive gains for the Vorster policy of "verligte" which calls for working toward friendly relations with black nations and preaching to others the validity and merits of apartheid.

Opposing the Vorster policy within his own Nationalist party are the "verkramptes" (literally the cramped ones) who favor strict isolationism.

Both major South African parties, Nationalist and United, favor racial segregation but the United party to a lesser degree.

IN RECENT MONTHS support for Vorster had come from a surprising source. It was from President Felix Houphouet Boigny of the Ivory Coast, one of the most prosperous of the black African nations.

Said Houphouet-Boigny:

"The revolting system of apartheid outrages us all ... (but) it will not be eradicated by force."

Of the white men who rule South Africa, he said:

"We must help them to consider themselves first as Africans regardless of color. The future of the continent, our joint patrimony, is at stake."

BETWEEN VORSTER'S and Houphouet-Boigny's words there was a remarkable similarity, and upon the Ivory Coast president it brought down the expected abuse from more militant African leaders such as Sekou Toure, president of nearby Guinea.

It made the Ivory Coast the first black African nation not economically dependent upon South Africa to accept the theory of dialogue over force.

There has not yet been time to assess fully the effect of the Ivory Coast action.

Ghana has accepted the idea of a dialogue with South Africa in principle and the South Africans are known to have been in contact with others among Africa's more conservative leadership.

Malawi was the first black African state to establish diplomatic ties with South Africa.

Swaziland, Botswana and Lesotho, all within South Africa's economic sphere, have custom agreements which could lead to diplomatic relations.

AGAINST ITS CRITICS, South Africa has moved to the offensive. To United Nations demands that it give up jurisdiction over the territoy of South-West Africa it has replied with an offer to let the people decide by a plebiscite under U.N. supervision.

And despite U.N. condemnation, its trade with western nations is increasing.

REMEMBER WHEN?

10 YEARS AGO

June 5, 1961

The U. S. Supreme Court, by a 5-4 vote, ordered the Communist Party to register all its officers and members with the Justice Department.

The Marin County Grand Jury was asked to investigate refusal of San Anselmo city officials to make public an auditor's report on the city's accounting system.

20 YEARS AGO

ANOTHER ANNIVERSARY — Rev. Rev. Hammond Will Celebrate 60th Anniversary As Minister

Rev. Stephen Reginald Hammond, who at 88 apparently doesn't believe in the word "retirement," will celebrate his 60th anniversary tomorrow as an Episcopal minister.

Rev. Hammond will assist his son, Rev. D. Murray Hammond at both the 9:15 and 11 a.m. services at Church of Our Saviour in Mill Valley — a church he served from 1950 to 1957 before becoming organizing pastor of the Church of the Redeemer in Glenwood.

"He's still very active," the younger Hammond said this week as his father prepared for the services. He was ordained into the Episcopal priesthood in Winnipeg, Canada, on Trinity Sunday in 1911.

Ten years ago when he observed his 50th anniversary as an Episcopal priest, he was actively engaged in directing the church in Glenwood. By that time "golden" celebrations were rather old hat for the minister. He and his wife, Hattie, celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary in 1959 with a gathering of the clan in the Erskine Baker McNear mansion which was the first home of the Church of the Redeemer.

The senior Hammond was born in Guilford Surrey, England, March 14, 1883, and came to Canada with his family in his su(-teens when his father, a dentist, bought some "sight unseen" land.

At 14 his father took him out of school to learn a trade and by 19, Hammond was foreman in a harness-making concern.

Following his ordination in 1911, Hammond began his ministry in Canada. In 1917 he became rector of St. Paul's Parish in Ventura, a post he held for 20 years. Following World War II, he was called to a mission in an industrial area in East Los Angeles.

Since 1950 when he preached a sermon at Christ Church at the suggestion of his late son, Keith, who was rector of the church at the time, the senior Hammond has been involved in the ministry in Marin.

Study Of Russian Churches

By PETER J. SHAW

MOSCOW (UPI)—Soldiers of the Red Army have come under fire from their own official newspaper for not fighting the battle against belief in God as resolutely as they should.

"In some detachments," the army newspaper Red Star (KRASNAYA Zvezda) said in a lengthy commentary, "commanders and political workers have weakened anti-religious propaganda. They do not conduct the resolute fight for the uprooting of leftovers of religion in peoples' consciousness."

Even old women, Red Star noted sarcastically, can best soldiers in religious argument and it told the story of one old woman named Anna who sat in a train compartment with several young soldiers, one of whom asked her:

"Are you a believer, old woman?"

"Why do you ask, Sonny?"

"Because it (religion) makes me laugh."

"What is there to laugh about?" said the old woman. "God helps us in everything. He is everywhere —in this bread, Sonny, in your thoughts."

Red star said "an argument began in which the old woman took the upper hand. The private could not counter her arguments with any of his own. One could see he was not prepared for an argument of this sort. He just kept repeating, 'everybody knows there is no God ...'"

Such a state of affairs, Red Star said, proved that "anti-religious propaganda should be conducted uninterruptedly, not just from time to time."

Anti-religious propaganda is official Soviet policy. Freedom of worship is guaranteed by the Soviet constitution but the state considers religion a "serious ideological adversary."

Children are told "religion is a harmful superstition. Everything is explained by science." Jesus Christ is usually referred to as "the mythical Christ."

Moscow in 1917 had more than 600 churches for a population of one million. There are today no more than 40 or 50 active churches for a population of seven million, and some are the size of small chapels.

Many former Russian Orthodox churches have been converted to museums, sobering-up stations for drunks, trade exhibition halls and warehouses. Scores have been ripped down. Rarely is a new one built. Famous St. Basils Cathedral in Red Square has been renovated—as an admission-charging museum.

There is no official estimate of active Russian Orthodox believers in the Soviet Union. Unofficial estimates run to more than 20 million. Those attending services are few, mostly elderly and mostly female.

Several other branches of Christianity still exist in the Soviet Union although services are scant. Unofficial estimates suggest there are several million persons born as Roman Catholics, Lutherans and believers in a Quaker-styled Baptist sect called the United Baptist Evangelist Church.

"There are facts which testify to the activization by clergymen of their attempts to spread their harmful influence on the youth," Red Star said.

The state continues to teach there is no God. Religion is eroded by quiet antireligious indoctrination which begins when children start school and follows them throughout their lives.

The Soviet constitution gives the state the right to propagandize for atheism. It forbids religious instruction for anyone under age 18.

The Soviet Union recognizes the right of established religious sects to their regular services but bans any effort to spread religion through public instruction, to publish underground religious magazines or to set up Sunday schools.

The Communist Party has built "houses of Atheism," and children are sometimes "baptized" in "palaces of happiness" where party officials may give them tiny Lenin medals.

Communist-style marriage ceremonies are devoid of religious content. A couple who wed at the Moscow Palace of Marriages stand near a bust of Lenin to say "I do."

"Each citizen is ensured the right to believe in God or not to believe in God, the right to perform religious rites and the right to conduct antireligious propaganda," the chairman of the government Council on Religion said in 1966.

The government contends that if the churches have the right to preach, the government has a right to preach against them.

"Grandfather Frost," the Russian Santa Claus, used to arrive at Christmas in pre-revolution days. Now he comes on New Year's Day. Secular holidays are substituted for Christmas, Easter and Saint's days.

Before the 1917 Bolshevik revolution, an old Russian saying held that, "If you're not Christian, you're not Russian."

That is not heard in Russia today.

NOW A MUSEUM — St. Basil's Church in Moscow — once a house of worship — is now a museum. This is typical of what has happened to the vast majority of the 600 churches which dotted the city at the time of the revolution. There are now only about 40 or 50 churches which hold services.

Church Relations To Be The Key Issues

ST. LOUIS (LC) — Church relations will be one of the major issues at the biennial convention of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, according to the convention workbook just published here.

The convention will be held at the Milwaukee Arena, July 9-16.

The largest number of resolutions submitted to the convention are in the area of church relations, particularly altar and pulpit fellowship of the LCMS with the American Lutheran Church.

Fellowship, adopted by the Denver convention in 1969, allows pastors to preach from the pulpits and members to commune at the altars of the other church body.

Although a small number of resolutions recommended that the convention "reaffirm" and "give thanks" for ALC fellowship, over 150 resolutions are, in one way or another, opposed to it.

The suggestions range from immediate termination to a temporary suspension of fellowship until further doctrinal agreement is reached.

For many, the major obstacle to fellowship is the ALC approval of the ordination of women at its 1970 convention in San Antonio, Tex.

Lack of unity, characterized by differences in doctrine and practice, along with ALC membership in the World Council of Churches and in the Lutheran World Federation are additional reasons given for rescinding the fellowship resolution.

A large number of resolutions also request that the LCMS sever its involvement with the Lutheran Council in the USA. Established in 1966, the council is a cooperative agency serving the LCMS, the ALC and the Lutheran Church in America.

Running five to one against LCMS membership in LCUSA, the resolutions cite excessive costs, religious unionism, political involvement and failure to promote unity of doctrine as some of the grounds for withdrawal from the council.

Another area of debate at the convention will center around the supervision of doctrine within the synod. One of the questions asked is whether this authority rests solely in the hands of the synod president.

Many of the resolutions relate specifically to the investigation of teaching at Concordia Seminary at St. Louis which Dr. J.A.O. Preus, president of the LCMS, initiated last year through the appointment of a fact-finding committee of five.

A related issue to be decided by the convention is whether or not pastors, teachers and professors are bound to teach only in conformity with Scriptures and the Lutheran Confessions, as stated in Article II of the LCMS constitution, or whether they are also bound by the doctrinal statements and declarations adopted by the synod in convention.

Baha'i Faith Sets Special Observance

The Baha'i Faith in Marin County will observe Race Unity Day next Sunday.

Theme of this year's observance is "Men Divide — God Unites." The event is an annual observance.

Social Action Programs Slated

Congregation Rodef Sholom of Marin will hold two social action programs this month with the first one next Friday on juvenile deliquency led by Rev. James Upshaw, chairman of the Marin County Juvenile Delinquency Prevention Commission.

The sabbath service on June 25 will be followed by a population national population led by Dr. Martin Carr.

Teacher To Become A Church Minister

Eb Andrew, an English teacher at Redwood High School for the past seven years, will be ordained into the ministry at 4 p.m. services tomorrow at Lucas Valley Community Church.

Andrew, who will become pastor in Jackson, Hole, Wyo., received his bachelor of divinity degree from the Berkeley Baptist Divinity School in 1960. He did his undergraduate work at Pepperdine College in Southern California.

Participating in the ordination will be Dr. Russell Orr, executive pastor of the American Baptist Churches of the West; Rev. Doug Sidon, president of the Bay Area Council of Churches; Rev. John Andrew, the ordainee's father; Rev. Hugh Collett, and Rev. Dale Nystrom, pastor of the church.

Ike Doerksen will present the candidate and Gordon Lindstorm, moderator of the church, will present Andrew's certificate.

Andrew, his wife, Barbara, and three children, Melissa, Gary and Laralyn, will leave later this month for Jackson Hole.

Second Man Is Charged In Robbery

A second man was charged yesterday in Marin Municipal Court with taking a part in the hold up of 10 young people at gunpoint Wednesday in San Rafael.

Accused of armed robbery was Larry Cleary Walker, 23, of 31 Cole Drive, Marin City, who also was jailed as a parole violator. Walker was arrested after being identified as one of the men who held up 10 persons at 27 Hillview Avenue.

Also charged with the crime is Wendel Lynn Smith, 19, of Terra Linda. Their cases have been continued to Monday for entry of pleas.

The victims were forced to lie down after the men entered the house at gunpoint. The robbers got $20 from one of the young men in the group.

Smith was arrested at his home a short time after the robbery and Walker was picked up later.

Two Marinites Get Smith Degrees

Two Marin County coeds were among 500 seniors graduated from Smith College, Northampton, Mass.

They were Margaret O. Webb, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin P. Webb, 445 Woodland Road, Kentfield, and Judith B. Hooper, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roger F. Hooper of 70 Ivy Drive, Ross.

Second Annual Novato Flower Show Opens

The second annual standard flower show sponsored by the Novato Garden Club and the city parks and recreation department opened today at the Novato Community House.

The show, on the theme "June Is Busting Out All Over," is to continue until 5 p.m. and will reopen from 11 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. tomorrow.

Ribbons will be awarded for best in show in the horticulture, cut specimens, container plants and artistic arrangements divisions.

The show, which attracted more than 1,000 in one-day last year, has been expanded to two days and includes junior competition for those from 6 to 16.

Five nurseries will present commercial displays. Stephen Halbe's sixth grade class from Marion School has an ecology display and the Miwok 4-H Club has a display about planning and planting a garden.

Bids Opened For Landscaping

Bids for reconstruction and landscaping of Tamalpais Drive in Corte Madera were opened yesterday with a low of $163,569 submitted by Ghilotti Bros. of San Rafael.

According to Arthur N. Morrison, town engineer, the bid does not include costs of street lighting or proposed brick crosswalks.

Three other bids were received for the project, with the high submitted by O.C. Jones and Co. of Berkeley at $193,200.

Tarr Floors One During War Round

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Curtis W. Tarr, 6-foot-7 director of Selective Service, floored one of five persons, including a Catholic priest, who tried to arrest him on a "citizen's" warrant because of the conscription of U.S. citizens to fight in the Vietnam War.

The five had been meeting with Tarr for 45 minutes Friday when they read a statement charging him with "complicity" in war crimes. Then they asked him to sign an affidavit. He refused.

"I think I've heard enough of what you have to say," Tarr said. He asked them to leave.

Three members of the group approached Tarr with handcuffs and said they were putting him under arrest. He pushed them away, and one fell on the floor.

"I've now heard you and from my point of view the conversation is over," Tarr said.

"The killing is not over and we want you to bring this before the American people," said Jim Good, 27, New York.

Bobwhite quail have an annual mortality rate of about 80 per cent whether they are hunted or not.

Bob Nelson Has Proven He Can Wear Many Suits, And All Will Fit

HIS CURRENT POSITION as manager of the San Rafael Chamber of Commerce represents for Thomas Robert (Bob) Nelson his third career. He was first a civil engineer, and then a highly successful insurance underwriter. As manager of the chamber, Nelson has set as a major objective a membership of 512, or double its numbers, when he accepted the position a little more than a year ago. Already a 36 per cent gain in memberships has been achieved, and Nelson feels his campaign is "on schedule." (Independent-Journal photos)

By HARRY CRAFT

For a little more than a year, Thomas Robert (Bob) Nelson, manager of the San Rafael Chamber of Commerce, has been a "staff man."

In itself, this classification is not out-of-the-ordinary. But for Bob Nelson, whose vocation for the preceding years had been doing things mainly for himself, it has meant a considerable switch, to promoting an organization that has become the chief beneficiary of his labor.

FORTUNATELY he is no stranger to group activities. His experience in fund drives and club work, including a long association with the Rotary Club, has enabled him to make the change more smoothly than might have been expected.

As an insurance man — 23 years as a life underwriter with Penn Mutual Life Insurance Co. and two years with Metropolitan Life before World War II — Bob carved a career marked by numerous awards and special recognitions, including a 20-years membership in the Million Dollar Round Table and a Chartered Life Underwritership, in addition to the financial rewards for his work.

The life insurance business is no easy profession and it takes a particular type of man to succeed in it. But it is generous to those who discipline themselves to its demands and stay with it.

BOB DID NOT start out his working career in insurance. Indeed it was as much of a change from his original profession as a civil engineer as it has been to move out of insurance into the chamber of commerce field.

He says he was born in the little South Dakota town of Dupree on a Cheyenne Indian reservation.

"Dupree had a population of 385 in 1930, and I daresay it hasn't grown any since then," he said.

His father, of Norwegian and Swedish extraction, was an attorney who had gone to the Dakotas to open a law practice and homestead a piece of land.

His mother, still living today in good health in San Rafael, was of Holland Dutch stock and from her Bob acquired some strong religious convictions which may have been modified by present-day concepts, but which still dominate much of his thinking and purpose in life.

Even as a youngster, Bob showed tendencies to "participate," which, had they been fully analyzed then, might have prophesied the type of career that later made him a success.

He was president of his high school student body, president of the sophomore class at the South Dakota State School of Mines and Technology, and also president of the student Junior Society of Civil Engineers at the college.

UPON GRADUATION and receipt of his Bachelor's Degree, he became a junior engineer for the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation, working as an instrument man for reservoir location sites. After six months he came to California to work for the State Highway Department, and there he spent another six months as traffic analyst and as a draftsman.

He moved to San Rafael in 1936 and became assistant city engineer for the city of San Rafael, staying with this almost three years.

He was not the only one from his college to settle in California. As president of his alumni association he has discovered that there are more graduates now living in this state than there are remaining in South Dakota.

Bob credits a Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. manager with convincing him that he should give up engineering for a career in life insurance. Reflecting on his eventual decision to make the change, he says he was imbued "with a missionary spirit and desire to be in control of his own destiny."

He joined Metropolitan, working in the San Rafael area where he planned to remain, and he stayed with the company until World War II. During that time he was in its upper 1 per cent in sales volume.

Deciding to devote himself to the war effort by drawing on his technical training, he first went with the U.S. Corps of Engineers for 17 months. But he was commissioned an officer in the U.S. Navy in June, 1943, and was assigned to public works activities until his discharge in 1946.

Life insurance had attracted him once and it did so again after the war. This time he became a representative of Penn Mutual Life Insurance Co.

Checking back on his accomplishments in the underwriting field, he finds that he has sold life insurance coverage to more than 1,800 persons for a total exceeding 17 million dollars.

With his experience in and inclination for meeting people, one wonders why Bob Nelson never went into politics — even at the local level. But he claims he is not cut out for it.

"I don't have that skill," he said simply. "I am more a one-to-one operator than a group operator."

BE THAT AS it may, he still has a long list of credits for his group activities and participation in civic affairs — with the Rotary Club (of which he is a past president of the Terra Linda chapter), with the Marvelous Marin Breakfast Club, with United Crusade (heading its fund drives), with the San Rafael Chamber of Commerce as a regular member — and previously with the junior chamber.

It might be said that his present job with the San Rafael chamber was tailor-made for him, and this is all the more true in that he can wear many suits, each with a good fit.

Bob's desire for a change from life insurance that eventually led him into this psotion was probably multi-motivated. He admits to a certain amount of fatigue in his previous work which he believes might have come from achieving success too early in life.

He says "it was a case of there being much more pleasure in running the race than looking at the trophy after the race was run."

BUT THERE must have been deeper motivations, for there is no sign of fatigue about him today when his eyes light up in

"What Do All Those Terms On Hang Tags Mean?"

Here are additional terms defined by the U.S. Dept. of Commerce booklet "Fibers and Fabrics."

Heat Sensitivity: Property of a material which causes softening, shrinking, melting or discoloration when heat is applied.

Heat Set: The use of heat on man-made fabrics to stabilize size or shape, or to make pleats or creases durable to repeated laundering or drycleaning.

Pilling Resistance: Resistance to the formation of pills (bunches of balls of tangled fibers) on the fabric surface.

Sanforized: A trademark indicating that fabrics so labeled conform to the shrinkage requirements of the trade name owner not to shrink more that 1% in length or width.

Wash-and-Wear: A term applied to garments which satisfactorily retain their original appearance after repeated wear and suitable home laundering with little or no pressing or ironing.

Wrinkle Resistance: The property of a fabric which enables it to resist the formation of wrinkles.

a discussion of his goals for the Chamber of Commerce.

"My real thrill now is finding a new, public-spirited member who might become president of the chamber in another 10 years," he said.

Finding new members and keeping them in the chamber, whether or not they become presidents, is no easy matter. There are some men who join early in their careers in order to improve their contacts with the public. Once this has been accomplished and they are in the higher income brackets, there no longer seems to be a necessity for it and the tendency is to drop out.

The incidence of dropouts appears to be more prevalent among professional men than among merchants, who are inclined to stick, on the premise that they need the chamber as much as the chamber needs them.

Bob fights hard to minimize these losses because he believes it takes all kinds of men to have a balanced, effective membership.

"There is always room in the chamber for a man with a cause of any kind," is the way he puts it. "We need both 'investors' and 'volunteers,' if we are to get all the things done that are expected of us."

HE BELIEVES also that one of the main requirements of his job is to make it possible for other men "to get things done" — to run interference, perhaps, for them, but not carry the ball himself. He is the chamber's principal "staff man." His is the supporting role — not the star's.

In his own words, "What we need are stars like Irv Chapman, Bob Severin, Wish Brown, Sig Herzog, Walt Zurcher, Bob Ritter, Paul Ciampi and others like them who have contributed so much of their time and effort."

Much to his personal satisfaction, membership has increased substantially since he took office last year, and today the roster stands at 348 — up 92 in the past 13 months. Always in front of him is a graph sheet showing the goal for 1975 — 512 members, or twice the number when he took office.

BOB NELSON, the individual, is a simple man and a family man, although his family is now grown.

He and his wife Eunice live on Convent Court, San Rafael. They also own 20 acres in Sonoma County where Bob frequently gets out with an axe and chops wood for exercise (he says it also helps him with his golf swing).

When this was written they were planning to leave on a month's vacation in Asia and the South Pacific. Bob had plans to look up some members of far-flung Rotary groups in those areas.

Their son Bill, now 26, is assistant products manager for Frito-Lay Potato Chips in Dallas, Tex. He is married to the former Darrel Shone of Marin County (Ray Shone's daughter).

Bob and Eunice expect to be grandparents in June.

They also have a daughter Nancy, who was married to Larry Lahargoue in March. The Lahargoues live in Larkspur.

ROTARY CLUB is a long-time interest of Bob Nelson, a "participant by nature." He is a past president of the Terra Linda unit and a holder of the certificate of merit of Rotary International. His work with such organizations, Nelson believes, helped prepare him for the transition from insurance man to his present post as manager of the San Rafael Chamber of Commerce.

HERMANN ZOPF grew his own grapes and made his own wine for his resort and restaurant on Fourth street at H in San Rafael. And visitors from afar enjoyed the hospitality. Later the resort was purchased and operated by the Joseph Coppas.

THIS HILLSIDE at Fairfax was covered by the 50-acre vineyard of Camille Grosjean, who also operated a grocery and liquor store in San Rafael. The wine from his own winer was among the goods stocked by the pioneer merchant.

When Marin Was A Grape-Growing Wine-Making Area

Vineyards Covered Its Hillsides And Claret Flowed At Resorts

(Editor's Note: This is another of the manuscripts completed for the Independent-Journal Marin Magazine by the late historian, Florence Donnelly, prior to her death.)

By FLORENCE DONNELLY

Nowadays Marinites interested in visiting the wine country must drive to the Napa or Santa Clara valleys.

But there was a time when their own county was a grape-growing and wine-making center.

This comes as a surprise to many Marin residents, accustomed to thinking of their county in its earliest years of white settlement as cattle-grazing and beef-raising country. But grape-growing and wine-making were introduced to Marin early by the Franciscan friars of the Mission San Rafael Archangel.

The hills behind the mission were planted with vines, and the grapes picked and processed into wine at the mission. Most of this was used for sacramental purposes.

THE MISSION was allowed to sell its surplus wine, but this was subjected to heavy taxation.

Travelers, however, could always count upon a glass of refreshing mission-made wine as part of the hospitality when they stopped at the San Rafael Mission.

Long after the Franciscan fathers were gone, people continued to pick grapes from the vines they had planted and to make wine. But now the vineyards were not tilled, and gradually the vines died for want of care.

HOWEVER, THE county was being settled. And part of that influx of population consisted of people from Southern European countries with a tradition and skill for growing grapes and making wines.

By the latter part of the 19th Century and into the early 20th Century a number of vineyards flourished in Marin and much of their produce went into locally-processed wines. Perhaps the best known of the Marin vintners were Hermann Zopf, Joseph Coppa, Camille Grosjean and Jean Escalle, although there were others who earned a reputation for the quality of their grapes and wines.

These vineyards were scattered throughout the county, although San Rafael and its environs remained the principal wine-making point.

EARLY HISTORIES of the county make mention of the fact that many of its large estates contained "orange groves and vineyards." And while it is not stated whether those owners ate the fruit as it was picked from the vines or made some of it into wine, it is a safe assumption that at least some of the crop was put to the latter use.

The Marin County Journal published a special edition in 1887 that featured a large sketch of the Zopf Family Resort with a brief accompanying story.

"Hermann Zopf's Family Resort, vineyard, wine cellar and wine garden is one of the best known and most frequented places in San Rafael or Marin County," reported the Journal.

THE JOURNAL continued: "Located on the Marin County road, contiguous to the West End Station, this vineyard is a conspicuous object, and draws attention of every passenger by the NPC Railroad or travelers coming from the southern, middle or northwestern townships.

"The vineyard rising behind the cellar and dwellings is a prominent feature in the panorama of San Rafael, and is about the oldest in a county which seems destined to becoming one of the most important claret-producing districts in California.

"The cellars are good and airy, the arbors are sheltered by fines, the attendance is all that could be desired, and the wine, both red and white, is excellent."

THE RESORT, popular with San Franciscans as well as Marinites, was on Fourth Street near H, and the vineyard was on a high hill behind the resort. The area is now covered with dwellings and apartment houses.

A biography of Zopf, which noted that he was known as "Honest Hermann," said that he first left his native Germany to go to Brazil where he had a tea, coffee and tobacco plantation. Later he continued on north, settling first in Sonoma, then in Solano County and finally, in the fall of 1867, coming to Marin.

The Great Register of Marin County for 1892, in listing Hermann Zopf as a San Rafael resident, also reported that he became a naturalized American citizen in Marin County Superior Court on Nov. 2, 1868.

ZOPF BOUGHT the property fronting on Fourth Street from Alexander Forbes for $300, and, since he had no horse or plow, he began cultivating it by hand, harrowing the soil with spade and rake. He planted grape vines. And while awaiting his

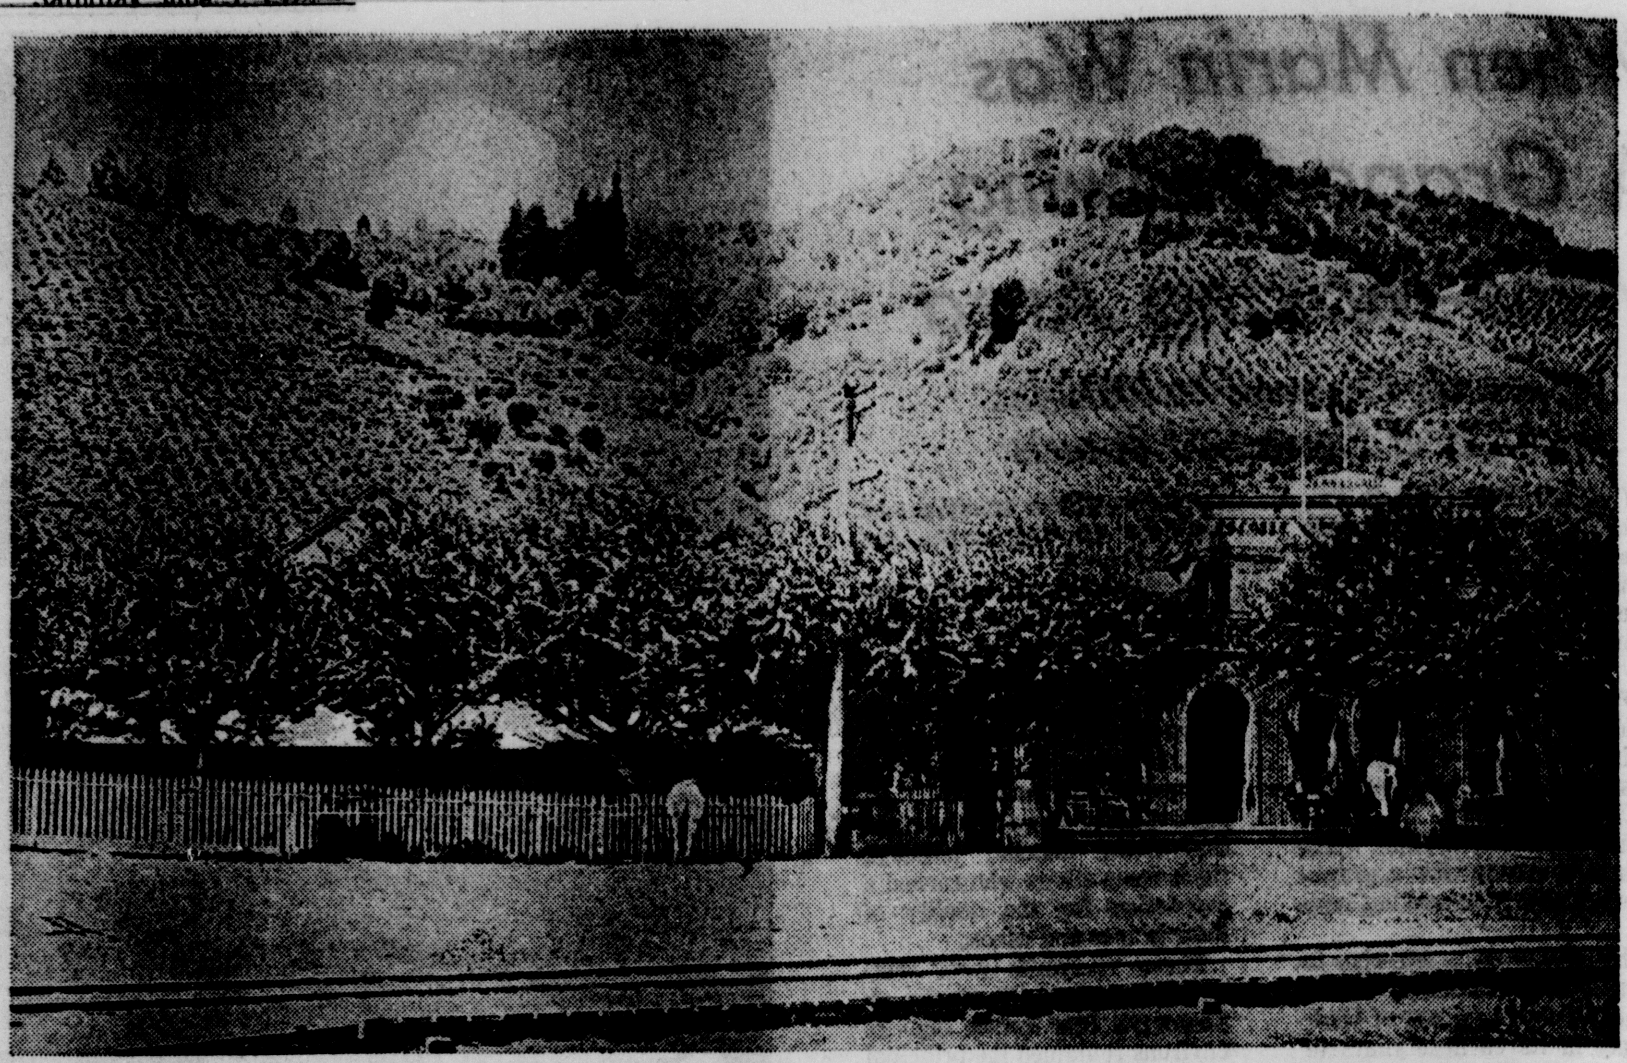
Local Product Lured Visitors



PERHAPS THE MOST widely known of Marin's several vineyard, winery and resort operations was that of French-born Jean Escalle. Located near Larkspur, the resort was housed in a brick building that was first known as the Limerick Inn before Escalle became the proprietor. But under Escalle, it took on a Gallic character. And when Escalle, widowed, married a German woman, Teutonic societies also met frequently at the resort.

first crop, began selling beer from the one-room shack he built at the rear of the property.

He was also an expert well-digger and responsible for many of the wells of San Rafael.

When his vines began producing grapes, Zopf built his winery and restaurant facing Fourth Street. He called it Zopf's Wine Garden. And as his business increased and the fame of the resort grew, so did the name of the establishment, becoming Zopf's Family Resort, Vineyard and Wine Garden.

AN EARLY writer waxed eloquently over the resort:

"It would seem that no meeting place of kindred spirits, and hundreds of them did meet there, it is said, could have a finer 'send-off.'

"In this Bohemia, gathered the young and lovelorn, the older and travel-worn, to enjoy the cuisine, the wines and the genial hospitality of the proprietor, Hermann Zopf."

Near the end of the 19th Century, Zopf sold his resort to a young couple, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Coppa. In his advanced years he operated a small store in San Anselmo, selling ice cream and sodas in contrast to his former business.

THE COPPAS had come from their native Italy, first to Guatemala where they operated a small restaurant. Among their many friends there were the brothers Guy Anthony Ciocca, who had a plantation in Guatemala, and Edward Ciocca, a partner in the Ciocca and Lombard Wine Co.

Edward Ciocca's widow, Mrs. Lena Ciocca, was for many years a San Rafael resident, and he was the grandfather of Mrs. Leon Smith.

His company had a vineyard and winery near Geyserville in Sonoma County. And it was from him and his brother that the Coppas began to hear of the wine-growing advantages of Northern California and particularly those of a community called San Rafael. The result was that the Coppas left Guatemala to come to San Rafael where they acquired the Zopf property.

THE COPPAS immediately built up a large restaurant trade at the San Rafael resort. The green-latticed summer-houses were filled with customers who came from all parts of the Bay Area to enjoy the gourmet foods and wines.

Encouraged by such patronage, the couple also opened a restaurant in San Francisco that proved an instant success.

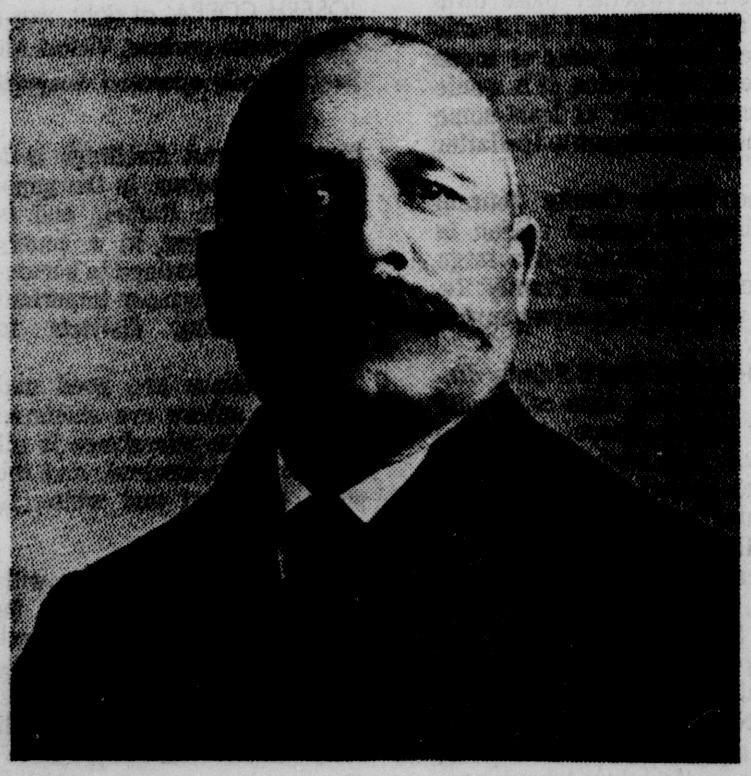
For a time, the Coppas continued their business in San Rafael. But the property became so valuable that they felt compelled to sell it.

They then — in 1908 — purchased five acres of San Anselmo land, near where the Sir Francis Drake High School now stands, built a large house there, planted a vineyard, and opened Coppa's Villa.

GRAPES WERE made into wines and bottled in the basement of the house. When aged, they were served to the connoisseurs of good food and drink who came to the Villa, as well as at the Coppas' restaurant in San Francisco.

Many a struggling artist and writer found free food and wine plus stimulating company at Coppa establishments.

The Bohemians of San Francisco flocked to the restaurants, and the Coppas at various times had food and wine operations at different localities and under different names operating in the city. Included were the Rsd Paint, the Neptune Palace, and Coppa's, the last, on Pine Street.



JEAN ESCALLE came to this country from his native France as a young man of 23 and for a time engaged in brickmaking. But farming was more to his liking, and be became one of Marin's pioneer grapegrowers and wine-makers.

THE COPPAS' son, Victor, a Tamalpais High School and University of Santa Clara graduate, joined his parents in the restaurant business. Later Victor's wife, Gladys, also became a part of the family enterprise.

Coppa's Villa in San Anselmo functioned until 1915. After the death of the senior Coppas, that property was sold, and Victor and his wife operated a small restaurant on San Rafael's Fourth Street for many years before retiring.

Many old-time residents and students of Marin County history remember Camille Grosjean as a business man, for his store on Fourth Street in San Rafael. But he was also a pioneer grape-grower and wine-maker.

A NATIVE OF France, he emigrated to America, first going to New Orleans and then living in a number of cities in the United States and Mexico before coming to San Rafael from Houston, Tex., in 1872.

He first engaged in the liquor business, specializing in fine wines of which he was knowledgeable, and then added groceries to his stock.

Many people, even then, were not aware that he also had a vineyard and winery in Fairfax.

A pictorial history of Marin County showed the Grosjean vineyard covering a Fairfax hillside. The accompanying story said that some 50 acres had been planted to grapes and yielded 2,00 gallons of wine, mostly claret, each year.

AT THAT TIME the vineyard was leased to a Mr. Arbini, but earlier Camille Grosjean himself had supervised it and the winery.

Jean Escalle, another pioneer vintner, was one of Marin's most colorful residents.

His story actually begins before Escalle's arrival in the United States when a French brickmaker. named Caillot or Callot purchased a large acreage near Larkspur from Patrick King and William Murray. There, from clay dug from the land, he began manufacturing bricks that were transported by barge to San Francisco where they went into many of that city's business and public buildings and homes.

THERE ARE several versions of how Jean Escalle was summoned to America, but the generally accepted one is that Caillot, prospering in the brick business, acquired some valuable Clydesdale horses in France, and also brought over Jean and his brother, Pierre, to care for the animals and to work in his brickyard.

Jean Escalle was then 23 years old.

When his employer and fellow countryman, Caillot, died, Escalle married the widow, Ellen, although she was 15 years his senior.

For a time Escalle continued to run the brickyard with some success. But it was not a business that was to his liking. He was, basically, a farmer. And so he disposed of the brick-making business and turned to farming on a nearby 40-acre tract he purchased at what came to be known as Escalle Station.

TWENTY ACRES were set aside for the vineyard. A winery was operated and produced 12,000 gallons a year, most of which was sold in Marin County.

A resort developed on the premises in a brick building that had been known as Limerick Inn before Escalle became its proprietor. Now it became Escalle's Inn, and the wine processed from grapes nearby was one of its chief attractions.

So was the traditional Bastille Day celebrated there by French and non-French alike.

AN ARTICLE in the Marin Journal of Jan. 19, 1893, provided this information on the Escalle vineyard and winery:

"The vineyard is 23 acres. Wine and table grapes, mostly Zinfandel and Reisling, are grown. Eight thousand to 12,000 gallons of wine are made each year. The wine cellar is 60 feet by 22 feet by 20 feet high. It is stored with casks of wine from one year to eight. There is one acre of orchard, mostly apple trees imported from France."

Ellen Escalle died in 1903, and Jean later remarried, this time to a German woman, Wilhemina Vogel, called Helma by her friends.

MRS. W. F. Wegner, foster daughter of Escalle's second wife, recalled in 1951 that Jean Escalle "was a very good-natured and stately, dignified man, quite well-liked."

She remembered "the wonderful times at Escalle's, particularly on Sunday nights, singing songs and having a social time."

And she recalled, too, the Escalle buggy drawn by a horse named Pedro that was such a familiar sight on the roads of Marin.

HELMA AND JEAN Escalle, she said, rented the inn to Nick Biegel in 1905 and he operated it for many years. Then Sam Orru had it for a time.

Bocci ball courts were added and the gardens expanded. Newspaper advertisements urged: "Spend your Sundays at Escalle's."

Nearly every Sunday German societies from San Francisco thronged to the inn for a good time in the shade of its trees.

The Escalles continued to make wine, and Jean delivered the product of his winery to customers in Sausalito, Tiburon and other communities two or three times a week, "just like a milk route," according to the late Randolph C. Doherty of Larkspur.

A COLORFUL and gay era came to an end in 1920 when Jean Escalle died. His widow, Helma, survived him for another decade, living in the big house that must have now seemed painfully empty and quiet. With her death, the property was sold.

It was really the Prohibition Era and the ravages caused by Phylloxera (a kind of plant lice) that spelled finis for the Escalle vineyards. Perhaps the vines would have weathered the assault by the lice had Jean Escalle been present to render his expert and tender care. But there was little even he could have done about the Volstead Act which had a more far-reaching effect upon the financial well-being of the formerly legal and prospering grape-growing and wine-making industry than it did upon the drinking habits of the public.

THE FINAL chapter of the Escalle story is a brief one, written upon three gravestones in the Mount Olivet Cemetery. They mark the resting places of Ellen, inscribed "1842-1903," of Jean, "1857-1920," and Helma Escalle, "1864-1930."

Over their resting places stands a small stone statue of an angel holding an open book. But its pages are blank.

WHILE Camille Grosjean was best known as a San Rafael merchant, and particularly as a grocer, he was also the owner of a vineyard and a winery.

Mount Tam — Hiker's Paradise

Trail Network Ranges From Steepest To Gentlest

By GEORGE NEVIN

"Give me men to match my mountains" was the cry of the 1840s and 50s as the pioneers pushed west, pitting their stamina against the Rockies and the Sierra Nevada.

Marin County today is lucky. Almost anyone is a match for her mountain.

Mount Tamalpais, dominating the entire Southern Marin peninsula, is Everyman's mountain. Trails, from the gentlest to the steepest, scale her flanks and circle her summit, providing a challenge for even the most experienced trekker.

BUT WHAT about those unwilling or unable to undertake a stiff hike? Tamalpais is for them, too.

Gentle, almost level paths, good for 15 minutes or an hour of communing with nature, follow a series of ridges that fan out from the mountain top. Even the most sedentary secretary or flabby executive is equal to these short jaunts.

Finally, for those disinclined to walk at all, paved roads ring the mountain like spokes of a wheel, with the summit at the center and the rim touching various starting points — Mill Valley, Stinson Beach, Fairfax and Bolinas.

IN ALL, MOUNT Tamalpais is not only the Bay Area's most dramatic mountain — rising, as it does, directly from the ocean and the bay — but also the most accessible. Literally scores of trails, from broad fire roads to steep paths originally blazed by animals and now widened for man's use, crisscross the area.

Those willing to forego the comforts of the automobile and walk across the ancient mountain will find an almost infinite variety on the way. Views of lakes, the bay, the Pacific and the entire Bay Area unfold at every turn. A wealth of animal and bird life inhabit the woods and meadows.

Waterfalls? They can be found in Cataract Gulch.

Wildflowers? Every meadow is carpeted with them in the spring.

Rocks? Amateur geologists can find many varieties of serpentine, common to California but rare in other parts of the world, and one kind found nowhere else but Mount Tamalpais.

YET WITH SO much to offer, with a variety almost beyond belief, solitude still is available in wholesale lots. It talkes a little walking, to be sure, and a willingness to strike away from the road into the wilderness. But it's there.

Like bicycling, walking is an excellent form of exercise, and hikers insist their sport is even better than cycling because it requires less investment. Feet, after all, come as standard equipment on most of us.

There is some expenditures, however. A good pair of boots, while not absolutely necessary, often means the difference between an enjoyable walk and one ruined by sore feet and blisters.

A CANTEEN or other water container is a must, as Mount Tamalpais tends to be dry during the late spring and summer.

Useful, though not essential, is a small backpack for lunch, camera and guidebook; a hat and sunglasses to keep the sun out of the eyes, and a map of the area to be traversed.

Finding one's way through Mount Tamalpais country is made easier by a new map published by the Marin Municipal Water District which shows every trail and fire road in common use on the mountain. Copies are available from the district office at 220 Nellen Avenue, Corte Madera.

MOST OF THE mountain is in the district watershed, which means the streams are used as sources of drinking water. Fortunately, the district's 16,000 acres will remain in open space, assuring Marin that the vast area will remain safe from development.

Tamalpais is relatively small geographically, but a lifetime and better could be spent getting to know it. Ask any oldtimer who has spent years on the mountain. He'll say there's still a little glen he's been meaning to explore, a lake he's never gotten around to visiting.

Three hikes, however, could serve as a fitting introduction to the peak: around the summit, through a cool, dank canyon and across a series of open meadows.

FOR THOSE hoping to see a few late-blooming wildflowers, without undue exertion, a walk down the valley from Rock Springs will serve admirably.

Park at the entrance to Cushing Memorial Amphitheater (Mountain Theater) and cross the road to Turnstile Meadows, so dubbed because of the fence and turnstile guarding the entrance, presumably to keep motorcycles out.

A patch of green grass to the left indicates Rock Springs, the modest beginning of a stream which, after flowing some miles and picking up several tributaries, empties into Alpine Lake near the dam.

BUT WHAT happens later is of no concern now. On a fine day there is nothing more glorious than strolling down the slender meadow, stopping occasionally to investigate a pool of the creek or a bed of flowers.

Many creeks join the main stream within half a mile. To the left up a valley lies Barth's Retreat and Portrero Meadows, jumping-off spots to the tree-clad north slope of the mountain.

The beauty of this particular walk is that it can be ended anywhere without the risk of missing a scenic gem. All of the meadows bordering the creek are charming, although the ones further from Rock Springs are less crowded and show the least sign of man's influence.

THE SECOND walk, a hike through a cool, moist canyon, complete with waterfalls, could be considered an extension of the first. About two miles below Rock Springs is Laurel Dell, where the trail enters the waterfall and cascade country of Cataract Gulch.

For those with access to two automobiles, the easiest way to arrange the hike is to drive to the first sharp turn beyond Alpine Dam from Fairfax and park, then take the second car up Bolinas Ridge to a parking area on Ridgecrest Boulevard above Laurel Dell.

A fire road leads down into the canyon and to the laurel grove, with its picnic tables.

BEYOND THIS point, the canyon constricts and the stream soon becomes frothy with the foam from a series of cascades. Ferns cling to the bank above the swift waters, fed by the moisture in the air.

The trail loses altitude rapidly, usually staying high above the creek. Side trails, however, dip down and afford views of ladders, rapids and out-and-out waterfalls.

Don't expect any Niagaras, but Cataract Gulch makes up in charm what it lacks in might. The trail is hewn out of solid stone at several points, and one can't help but feel a kinship with the unknown laborer who scooped out the steps.

WEEKEND traffic on the popular trail is likely to be heavy, but even on peak days the hiker who goes from the hot fields of Ridgecrest Highway to the cool reaches of the canyon will be grateful for the oasis.

Down and down the trail goes, until finally Alpine Lake, end of the journey, hoves into view, still several hundred feet below. Thick stands of Douglas Fir and occasionally a redwood

GROWING FROM an outcropping of rock, this immense oak dominates a corner of the meadow near Rock Springs. Open land such as this, common on Mount Tamalpais's flanks, is protected by the Marin Municipal Water District for watershed purposes. Combined with Mount Tamalpais State Park and Muir Woods National Monument, the watershed is open to the public for hiking and picnicking, but not for camping.

SOUTHERN Marin unfolds from the summit of Mount Tamalpais, with Mill Valley in the center and San Francisco in the haze-shrouded distance. Trails For Everyone — are encountered. Once in a while a massive tree blocks the pathway, felled by its own bulk and a winter storm.

Tam Has Paths For Hikers From The Expert To The Novice

Sometimes a section of the trunk has been removed to allow hikers to pass; other times the hikers have made their own path around the obstruction.

ALL SORTS of intriguing fungi grow from the rich earth and from stumps. Some look temptingly edible — and quite possibly are — but only the expert knows enough to risk his life to try one, and even experts have been known to be wrong.

At one point along the trail a fallen tree lies right in the middle of a fairly deep pool below a waterfall. With an adventuresome spirit and a good pair of cleated boots it's possible to walk up the giant log and peer right into the teeth of the small but still impressive waterfall.

It would be tempting to slip out of one's clothes and into the cool water of the pool, but there's a very good reason not to do so. The stream is one of dozens feeding Alpine Lake, a source of drinking water for much of Marin.

THE TRAIL finally crosses a footbridge, goes a little further and comes out at Bolinas-Fairfax Road near Alpine Dam where the first car has been left.

This hike is tremendously rewarding because it gives a glimpse of Marin that few get. Free-flowing, unpolluted streams are rare in our increasingly urbanized county, and Cataract Gulch has the added attraction of having its status protected by the Marin Municipal Water District.

Just as rewarding in its own way and quite a bit less strenuous is the third hike, a jaunt around the mountain's summit. Most Marinites and thousands of tourists have driven to the parking lot at the top and marveled at the sweeping panoramic view.

THE 20-MINUTE paved mountain-top trail is a cinch — mothers pushing baby strollers and invalids in wheelchairs often are seen here, but there's one rough spot that may prove difficult for wheels.

The summit trail is worthwhile for its magnificent, 360-degree view. Starting at the parking lot and walking clockwise around the ancient rock formations of the summit, one can see the backside of Bolinas Ridge and, still further, the hills of the Point Reyes Peninsula.

Almost directly below lies the 16,000-acre watershed of the

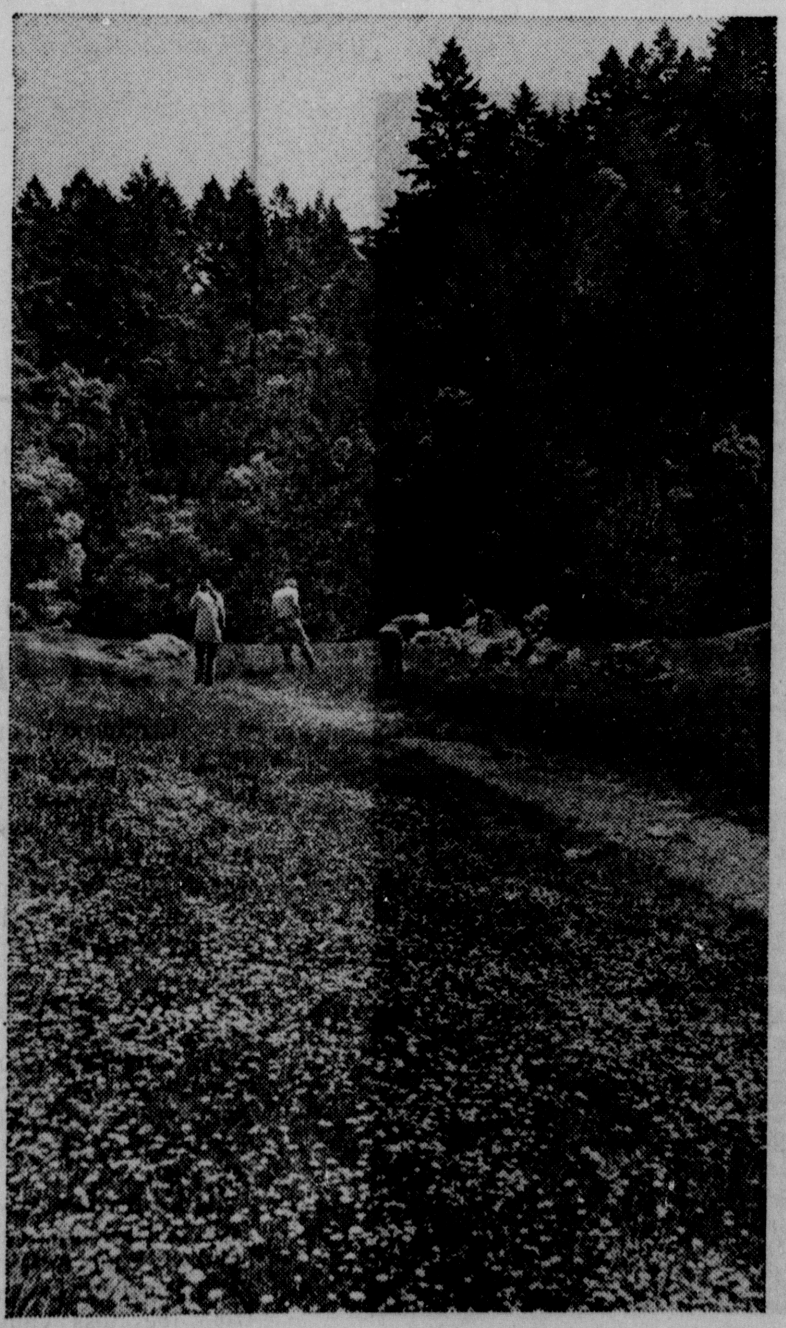
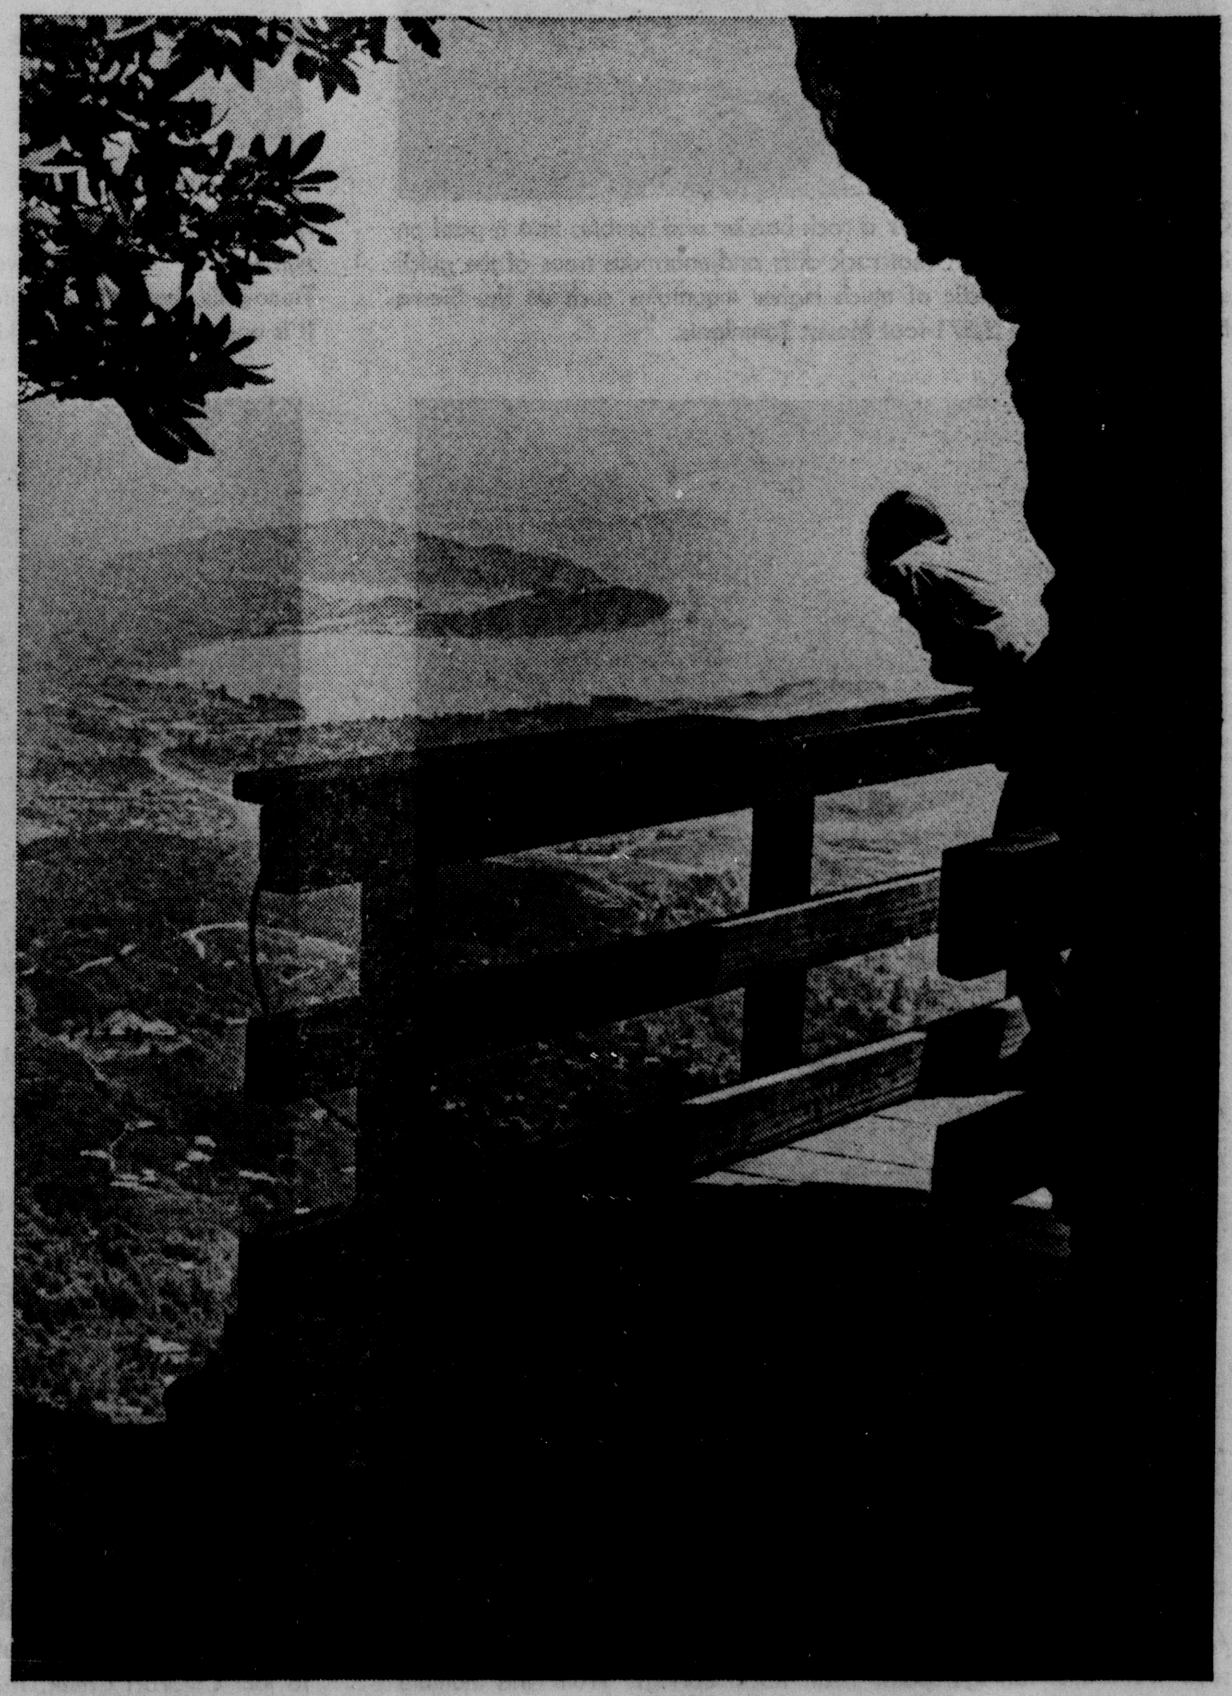
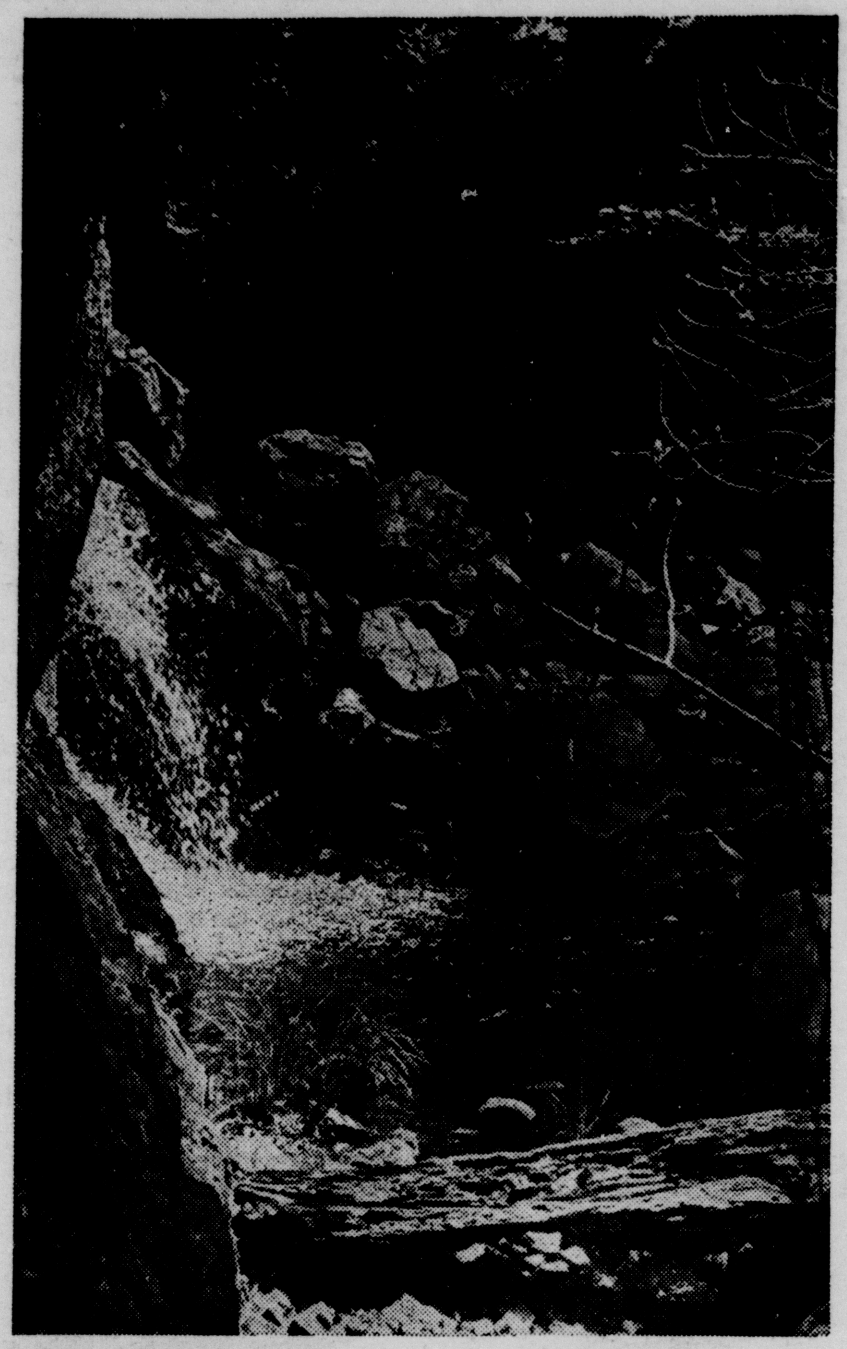
HIKERS WORK their way down Cataract Gulch along a broad, level trail hewn out of a grassy hillside. Other nearby trails vary greatly in quality, from wide fire roads to narrow, winding paths first used by animals and later widened by men.



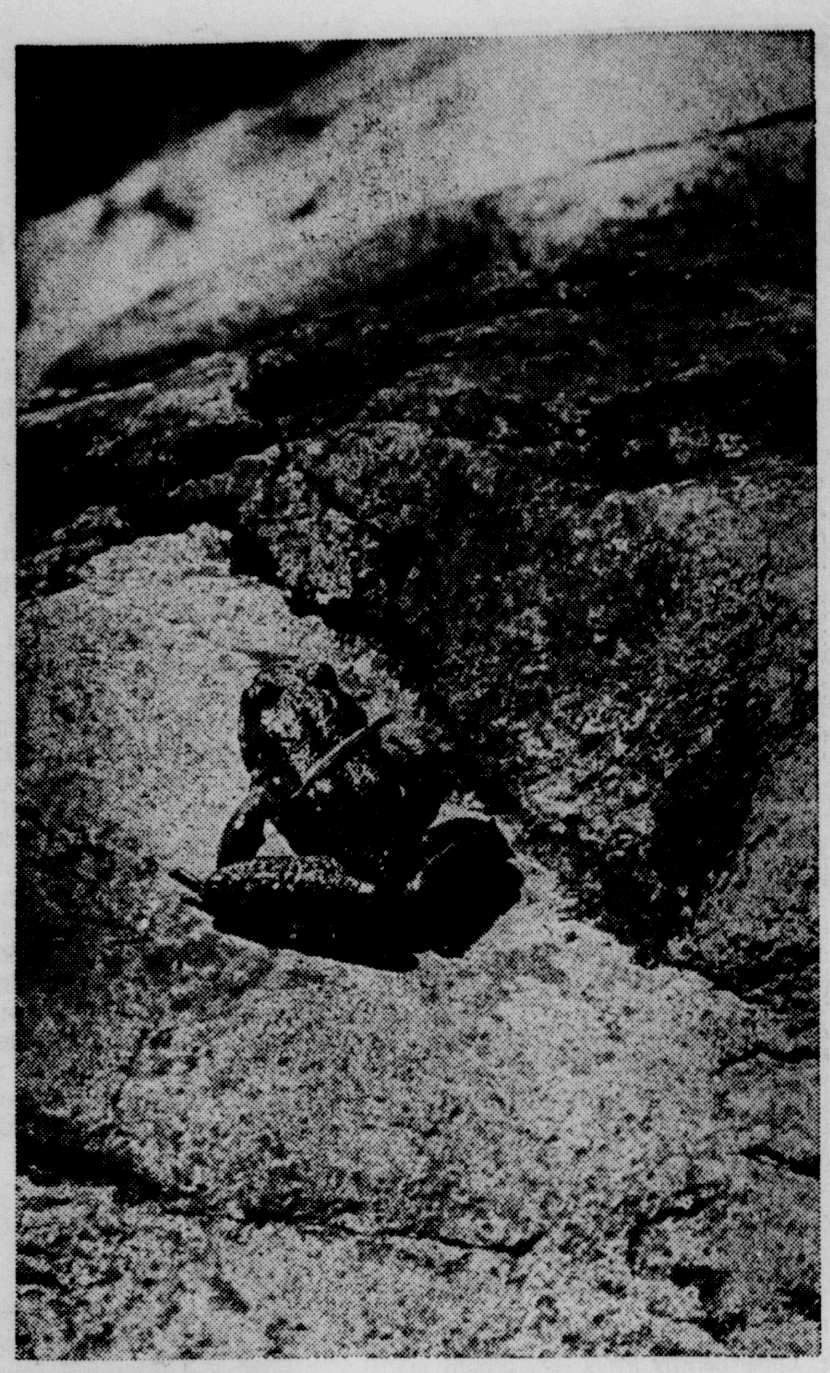
MEADOWS ARE for gamboling, as this group has discovered. Their trail alternately ducks in and out of the forest, with ever-changing views of grasslands, deep woods and the populous valleys of Marin. On weekdays it's possible to walk this trail without meeting another hiker, but on weekends the path becomes a regular thoroughfare.



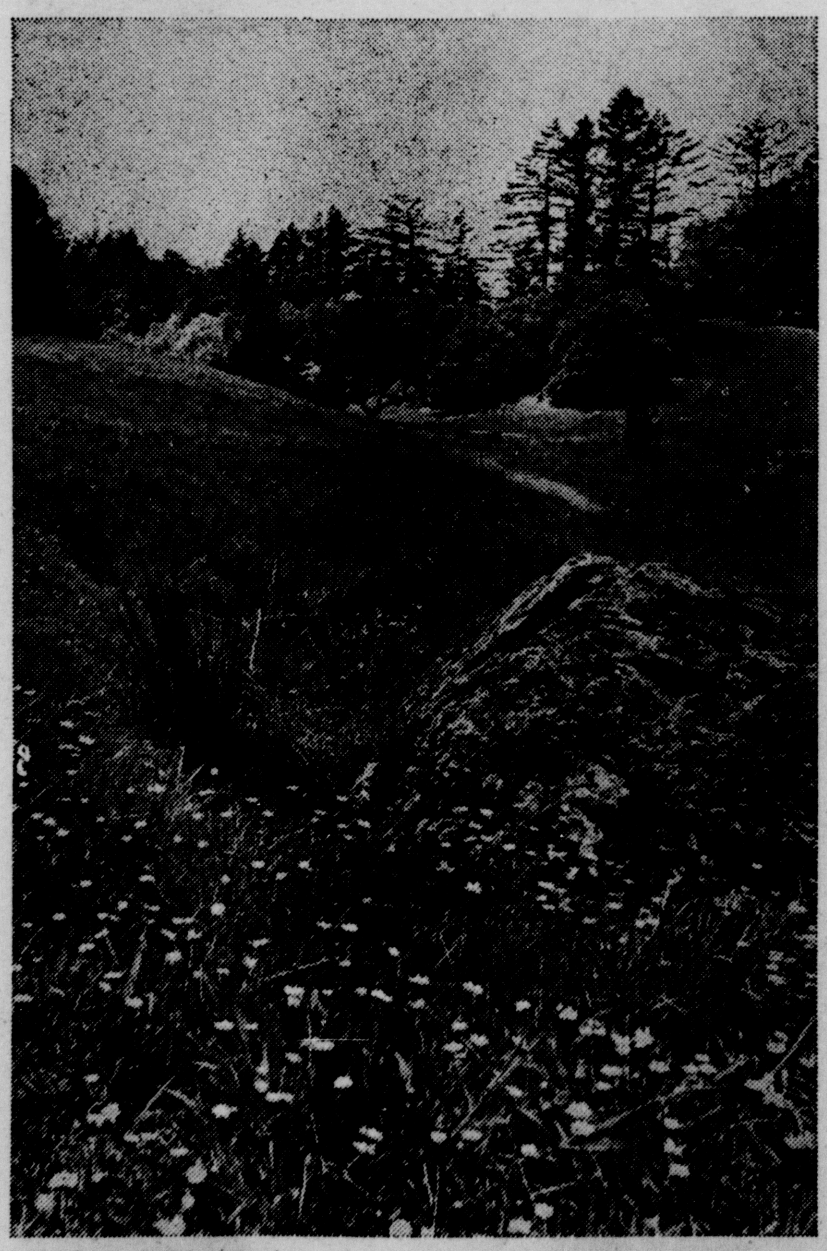
A FOOTBRIDGE leads hikers beneath a rock outcropping near the summit of Mount Tamalpais and affords a view of Belvedere and Tiburon, Angel Island and the East Bay. Visitors to the mountain are fond of carving their initials into the bridge's soft wood.



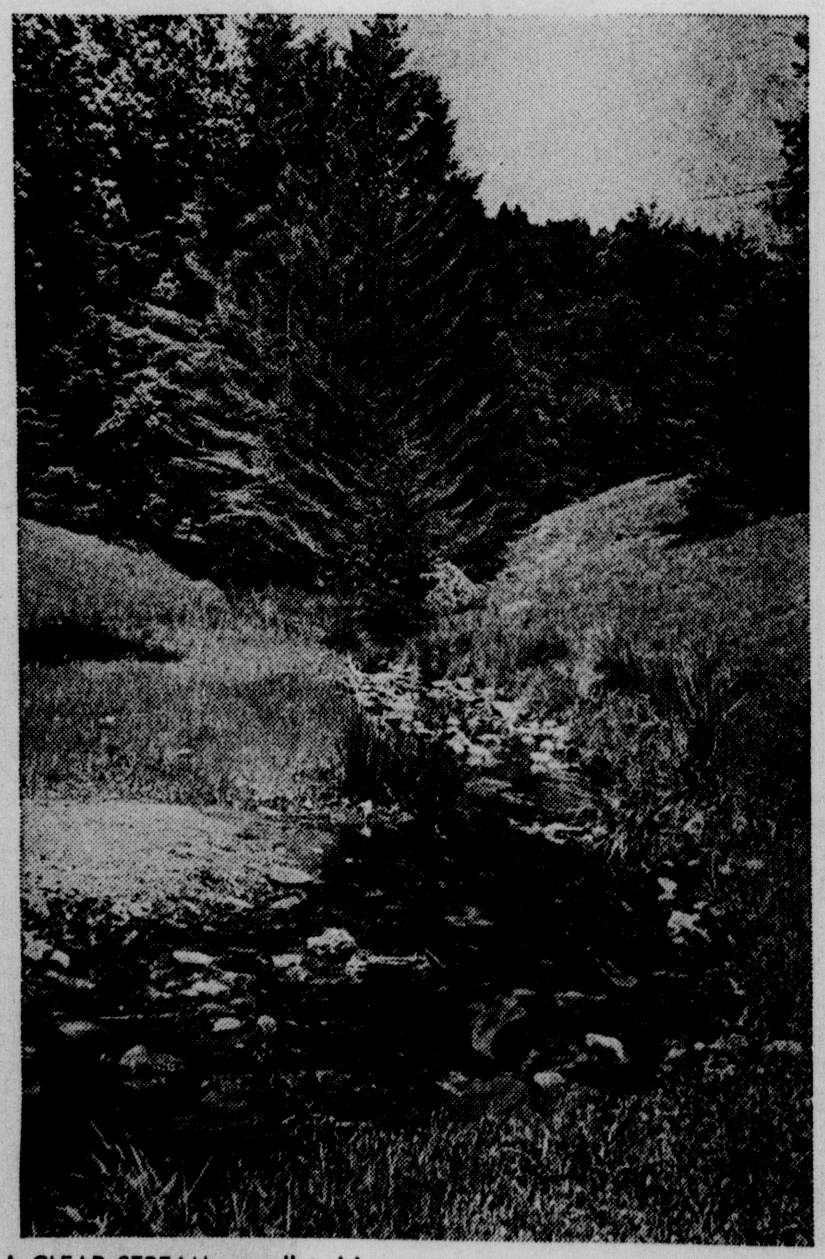
CATARACT CREEK leaps over a rock barrier and tumbles into a pool on its way to Alpine Lake. Great rock cliffs and enormous trees of the gulch seem more characteristic of much higher mountains such as the Sierra Nevada than of the 2,571-foot Mount Tamalpais.



A SMALL FROG suns himself on a rock above a rushing stream, a pine needle balanced on his wet back. The woods and meadows of Mount Tamalpais teem with wildlife, and dozens of species of birds fill the sky. It is one of the treats of hiking.



A BROAD EXPANSE of meadow, ringed by conifers and hardwoods, is seen from this vantage point near Rock Springs. From this humble beginning Cataract Creek tumbles through a canyon down to Alpine Lake and ultimately into Tomales Bay and the Pacific. The last of the spring wildflowers are in bloom now.



A CLEAR STREAM, unpolluted by man, winds down from Barth's Retreat to join Cataract Creek. This peaceful spot lies just a few hundred yards from Ridgecrest Highway and is a favorite spot for picnicking families. To the left, the hills lead to a ridge overlooking a chain of Marin Municipal Water District lakes.

Marin Municipal Water District, a roadless wilderness with fine hiking opportunities. Three of the district's lakes — Alpine, Bon Tempe and Lagunitas — are visible, as is a corner of tiny Phoenix Lake above Ross.

TO THE NORTH, Marin's rolling hills stretch for many miles, melding into Sonoma County on the horizon. Big Rock Ridge, with Novato hidden behind it, lies in the middle distance.

Marin landmarks look like toys 2,500 feet up. An ugly scar betrays San Anselmo's Red Hill. Populous Central Marin, from the Ross Valley to San Rafael, can be seen.

A little further around the mountain new vistas open up — the Richmond-San Rafael Bridge, looking weak and spindly; the East Bay, from Vallejo st Jack Lucey redrew this simplified Water District map, showing hiking trails and fire roads used by trekkers on Mount Tamalpais and in its watershed. Solid lines indicate trails and broken lines the fire roads also used by hikers. Copies of the more detailed map of the Mount Tamalpais country are available from water district offices at 220 Nellen Avenue, Corte Madera.

Favorite Mountain Beckons To Hikers

Foot Trails And Fire Roads Offer Opportunities For Solitude And Adventure

on the north to Oakland on the south; and the twin peaks of Mount Diablo near Walnut Creek, higher than Mount Tamalpais but not nearly as impressive.

THE CLOSE relationship between land and water in Southern Marin becomes evident as the trail bends south. Mill Valley, Belvedere, Tiburon and Sausalito, all with their waterfronts, can be seen. San Francisco, looking white on a sunny day, comes into view.

On around the south part of the summit, past a wooden footbridge shamelessly defaced with graffiti and the carved initials of past hikers, the rolling hills of southern Marin can be seen.

This wild and uninhabited land, now a prime site for a state park, once was threatened with dense development. It's difficult to imagine how it would look with a city of 20,000 there, as the developers of Marincello would have had it.

THE TRAIL winds past the aptly named Sunrise Point and returns to the starting point, with fine views of the Pacific and the Golden Gate along the way.

It's almost obligatory to make the summit loop, but purists who object to sharing what should be moments of solitude with hordes of other people may want to do a different kind of mountain-top hike a little further down and to the west.

A one-mile walk around the 2,470-foot middle peak of Mount Tamalpais is almost as breathtaking and quite a bit less crowded. Such a hike could begin either between the saddle between the middle and east peaks or the next gap over between the middle and west peaks, near the radar station.

STARTING AT the latter point, hike north down the Colier Trail to Colier Spring, then cut east, flanking the mountain and crossing numerous rivulets. The trail swings back across the paved road and then plunges down the south side of the mountain on a fire road.

Strolling along here, the sharp-eyed hiker will notice how the hills to the south toward the Golden Gate often are forested on the sides facing north and meadowed on the other sides, with a sharp dividing line on top.

Scientists know this as a common occurrence in mountain land with marginal rainfall (this description fits Marin), and even have names for the phenomena.

South-facing hills, called adret slopes, bear the full brunt of the sun and are much drier — and consequently support less plant life — than north-facing hills, which are known as ubac slopes.

A LITTLE further and the fire road intersects an upslope trail on the right which leads back to the starting point.

These three hikes — meadow, mountain and canyon — are an introduction to the wonder's of Marin's favorite mountain, but by no means present a complete picture.

Hikers whose appetites are whetted by these walks will find deeper satisfaction, perhaps, in a trek through the tree-clad north slope of Tamalpais, where the silence is broken by the sound of few feet.

THE BRONX ZOO

New York City Is The Place To See Rare Wild Creatures

Ever seen a balk uakari? A Bahaman hutia? A Laysan teal or a takin?

All are creatures of the wild whose numbers are diminishing. Not too many people ever see them in their native habitats.

But specimens of each can be observed and studied and enjoyed at the same place where one can see lions, tigers, elephants, giraffes, zebras, rhinoceros and other popular wild animals.

THAT'S AT THE Bronx Zoo in New York City, a zoological park which is known to zoo afficionados around the world as one of the largest and most progressive of its kind.

Visitors to New York City during the warm months should be aware that the Bronx Zoo remains one of the metropolitan area's best entertainment 'buys' for families.

The park's natural physical features lend themselves to a pleasant day's outing. Wide paths, shaded by a variety of trees native to the northeast, wind through 252 acres of wooded and rocky park land where more than 3,000 specimens of wildlife are on exhibit.

Especially for youngsters is the Children's Zoo featuring many smaller animals which children can feed and pet.

Zoos, as other cultural institutions, are undergoing change in two major ways.

First, they are changing physically. Bars and cages holding single animals are rapidly disappearing. Now, where possible, animals are shown in breeding groups in spacious modern exhibits that give visitors an unobstructed view of wildlife in settings resembling wild habitats.

SECOND, ZOOS are changing in concept.

Today more and more people, conscious of the threat that a degraded environment poses to themselves and other living creatures, are increasingly aware that wildlife collections in zoological parks are part of a treasure that must be preserved and protected.

The Bronx Zoo has been traditionally in the forefront as an innovator in the quality of its collection and in pioneering techniques in style of exhibiting captive animals.

More than 30 years ago, for example, the African Plains exhibit area was opened. Here, visitors look out across a grassy plain to a rocky knoll where a pride of lions lazes about. The same view catches a herd of antelope roaming near the lions, but across a moat camouflaged by bushes.

Other exhibits of this type are the Big Bears exhibit, Wolf Wood and the Aquatic Birds building.

THE ROUGH and rocky bear exhibit holds several Brown and Polar bears, each species occupying a section of the exhibit which is separated by sheer rock wall. Visitors see the bears over a moat partially obscured by hedging.

A mountain brook, splashing down a natural water course, enhances the real life setting.

In Wolf Wood, timber wolves move through a wooded area, which is also surrounded by a protective moat.

In the Aquatic Birds building, a variety of birds live their cycle in settings which duplicate natural habitats. So realistic is the environment that many species of birds, which did not breed in wire cages, now routinely build nests and raise young among the real and simulated grasses, mud, rocks, sand and streams of the exhibit areas.

Unique to the Bronx Zoo is the World of Darkness, which represents a new concept in exhibiting nocturnal animals. In the building day is turned into night, allowing visitors to observe creatures whose life cycles revolve around the hours of twilight and night.

THE WORLD of Darkness is the most sophisticated zoological building of its kind.

Recreating an environment so that creatures of the night are active inside the building during normal daylight hours required seven years planning and construction. It is the first time that a variety of nocturnal mammals, birds, reptiles, amphibians and fish can be observed during their waking cycle in habitats that simulate natural surroundings.

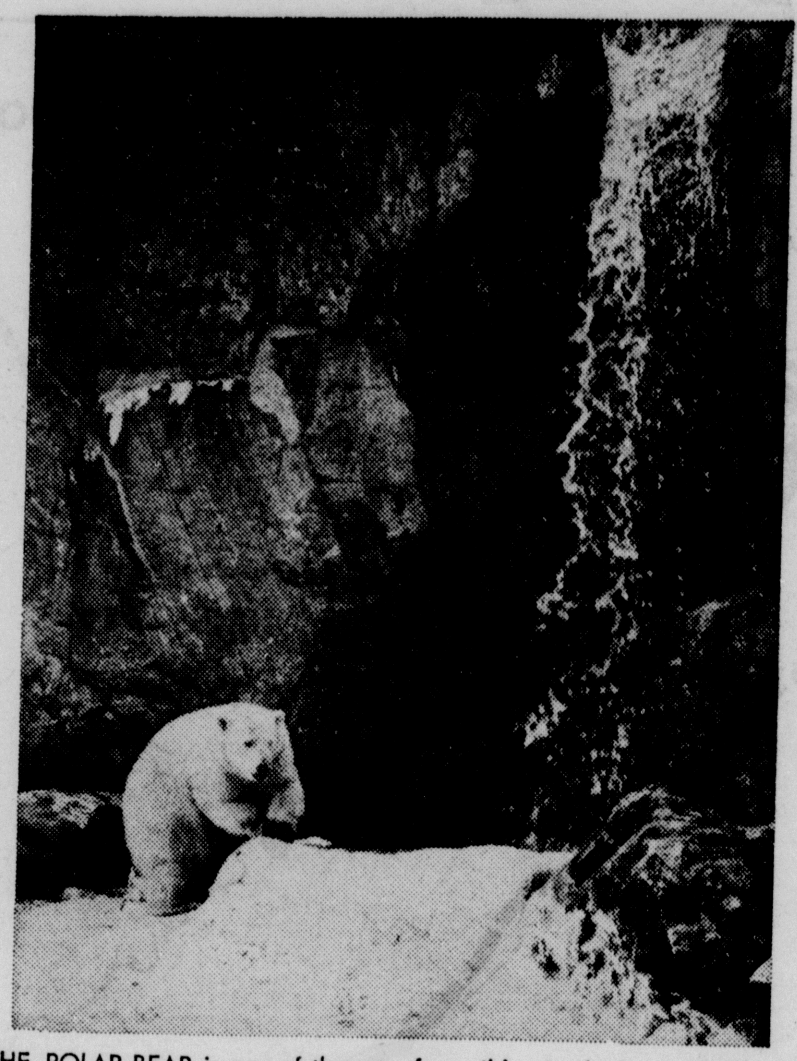
Scheduled for completion next year is the World of Birds, a stunning architectural achievement in which thousands of birds from all over the world will be seen in 24 separate exhibits. One of these is a duplicate of a tropical rain forest through which the public will be able to walk at tree-top level.

Oh yes, a balk uakari is a species of South American monkey that has a short tail, a nearly white coat, a red face and a hairless head.

A Bahaman hutia is a rodent-type animal about 20 inches long, that feeds on fruits, leaves and roots, and is considered arboreal.

A LAYSAN TEAL is a relative of the Mallard duck, but it is found only on one island in the Pacific ocean.

Takins combine the features of the goat and antelope, are a native of the Asian mountains. There are only three takins on exhibit in the Western Hemisphere, all at the Bronx Zoo.



THE POLAR BEAR is one of the very few wild animals that have been known, when hungry, to actually stalk a man. This one, though, was in a playful mood, when photographed at New York City's Bronx Zoo in the Big Bears wildlife exhibit area. The zoo is one of the "musts" for summer-time visitors to New York.

For European-Bound Young Americans

Here's Some Advice From People Who Live And Work Overseas

THE THREE most popular European cities with youthful American travelers continue to be Londan, Paris and Rome. At right, uniformed Carabinieri provide a colorful touch to the street scene in Rome. At center, the Eiffel Tower in Paris continues to be the world's most famous man-made landmark. And at right, London still features pomp and tradition that have been its hallmarks for centuries.

(Editor's Note: These tips for young Americans traveling to Europe this year were gathered by United Press International reporters who live and work in the cities and countries covered.)

By LUCINDA L. FRANKS

LONDON (UPI)—A bullfight under a hot Spanish sun. Suckling pig and "boozookie" music in Athens. A journey into the publands of East London where a Cockney will acquaint you with the Pearly Kings of yesterday.

The spring-summer migration of the young to Europe has begun and most places, from Copenhagen to Tangiers, have made it easy for the wanderer to do the most for the least money.

In Amsterdam, you can get a bed for 72 cents a night. A train ride from West to Communist East Berlin costs less than a dime and if you run out of food money in Munich, just tour a brewery and get free sausage and beer.

But keep one thing in mind. If you get caught with hash, acid or any other kind of drug, your stay in Europe may last longer than you planned.

Without exception, European countries are cracking down on drug use and customs and police will be on the lookout this summer for foreigners bringing in the stuff.

In France, no differentiation is made between hard and soft drugs and the penalty for even attempting to buy drugs is from 2 to 20 years in prison, with no suspended sentences. There are currently 10 Americans serving jail sentences for drug possession in Morocco. Even in Turkey and the Spanish island of Ibiza, both one-time hash havens, drug raids, are continuous.

LONDON is the most popular starting off point for continental travelers. Bed and breakfast hotels for about one pound fifty pence ($3.60) are plentiful in Susse Gardens and Kensington, and the pubs, with sausages and steak and kidney pie are good, cheap places to eat.

There are rock concerts in Hyde Park every weekend,. where you'll meet a slice of London's young cosmopoliton population —Indian, Australians, European, North American —and where the vibes are generally good. The Roundhouse Theatre in Chalk Farm offers experimental plays, living theater, and rock and light shows.

London's discotheques are good but expensive —generally two pounds ($5.80) to get in and a few extra shillings on the crinks. The fancier ones, complete with go-go girls and dining areas, include the Pheasantrie on the King's Road, and Annabelle's. For a less formal atmosphere and costumes ranging from hot pants to painted bosoms, try Hatchett's in Piccadilly or Samantha's off Regent Street.

One of the best ways to learn about the British is to take a pub crawl around the heavily cockney areas in London's East End. "The Prospect of Whitby" on the south London docks and "Dirty Dick's" in Liverpool Street are two picturesque old pubs where you might meet a Cockney who still has pearls on his jacket and a grandfather who was once king of the street.

IN DUBLIN, the heart of society for both young and old is in the pub. At the "Old Bailey," where James Joyce used to drink and at other pubs around Grafton Street, you will meet the worker as well as the artist and writer. The city is filled with literary history, from George Bernard Shaw's birthplace in Synge Street to Joyce's Martell Tower from his classic "Ulysses." You will find the Irish eager to get to know you and ready to buy you a drink at the nod of your hat. Try Zhivago Club and the River Club for a night of dancing, storytelling and beer. Youth hostels, for a little more than a dollar a night, are scattered about the country.

IN ROME, it is still possible to live on $5 a day, but to make sure the trip is not a flop, allow for $10. Travel by bus — it is cheap and efficient — and east at the smaller family-owned trattorias.

A lot of the city is free. The Colosseum costs nothing nor do many of the other historic and archeological sights. But beware of the paperback guides of Rome. Restaurant and hotel owners usually jack up their prices in anticipation of the rush of tourists waving their economy guides.

The night clubs are good and one of Europe's best discotheques, Scarabocchio, has live acid rock, strobe lights, and a swinging crowd for only $1.50 cover charge. Some rock spots, however, are clip joints and the best rule is to follow Italian kids to where they go. The Bohemian crowd hangs out on the steps of the Piazza di Spagna and the nearby Via Margutta Cafe.

THE MOST expensive city in Europe is Paris. In order not to fall into tourist traps, make your first stop the American Center of Students and Artists on 261 Avenue Raspail on the Left Bank. It will provide you with a meal for about five francs (90 cents) and find you a reasonably priced room.

A hotel should cost no more than 30 francs ($5.50) per night but it will be hard to find. The best place to look is around the Sorbonne University and the Rue des Ecoles on the Left Bank.

One colorful restaurant which has a mixed clientele of artists, writers and students is Julien on 16 Fauborg St. Denis where the most expensive item on the menu is four francs (75 cents), and a liter of very drinkable wine is an unmatched 1.60 francs (30 cents).

SCANDINAVIA, where even the public bathrooms are done in bright colors and modern design, has many attractions. Copenhagen is to many the most colorful Nordic city. With dozens of discotheques and cafes, it is a place for the young.

Before or after dinner, try Hvid's Vinstue opposite the Royal Theatre. It's over 200 years old and a meeting place for Danes of all trades —civil servants, students, shopgirls, and poets. Have the new and spicy "akkeleje" snaps, a liqueur which is very strong and very popular.

For traditional smorgasbord at relatively reasonable prices, try the spread of quaint inns outside the city (in town it can be expensive). But if you are a real gourmet, don't miss the Oesterport Hotel which features a multi-course meal for less than $10.

There are plenty of stag night spots —Adam and Eva, Palmehaven and Club 10 are fun for both sexes and Fingerbollet offers dancing, a good dinner and lots of local atmosphere.

The most beautiful places in Denmark are outside Copenhagen. Visit Hamlet's castle in Elsinore and Hans Christian Andersen's home in Odense.

STOCKHOLM has an abundance of nightlife; it's a city for the young and yet so safe that even Premier Olaf Palme rides the subway. There are discotheques — and pornography shops —at every street corner and good though expensive restaurants. The YMCA has four hostels in the city where you can get a bed for about $1.80.

The Swedish island of Gotland in the Baltic Sea is a choice scenic spot with youth hostels for less than a dollar a night, and several camping sites.

IN NORWAY, don't miss the mountain chalets and fiords of the western 4coast. Kristiansand, Kragero and Risor are quaint towns on the southern coast and Hankoe has become an "in" place for youth to congregate. In Oslo, go to the Dovrehallen or Valentes Clubs and visit the Holmenkollen ski jumping hill and the Akershus castle. One tip: Hotel accommodations in Oslo are impossible to find during the summer months; make reservations ahead of time.

IN AMSTERDAM, the Release Foundation for Youth Aid has published a pamphlet for young tourists, a detailed description of where the city is really at. It aims to do away with such myths as "hash is legal in Amsterdam . . . police wear flowers in their hair . . . sex in the street is prohibited during rush hours only."

The cost of living is almost as high in Amsterdam as in New York but the Youth Tourism Foundation recently completed special hostels that charge only 70 cents a night. Sleeping in the Dam Square and neighboring streets has been banned.

MUNICH AND Berlin are the most interesting cities in Germany. In West Berlin, you can take a nine-cent ride on the Communist-run elevated railway into East Berlin. The west side of the city is gaining attention with several combination spots like "Belle de Jour" which has works of art for sale alongside hotpants and minis and turns into a discotheque at night.

In Munich, visit ancient Bavarian castles outside the city, and at night hit the German youth scene at the discotheques Blow Up and The Big Apple in the Schwabing District.

AUSTRIANS describe Vienna as the ideal place for the "silent majority of young people." It is usually bypassed by the summer hippie migrants and such is the sparsity of the latter that a woman called the police last summer when a young man appeared bare-chested in front of the downtown Theseus Temple.

Young people who go to Vienna usually are high on sports or culture. Favorite places are the alpine regions for mountaineering and the Salzburg Festival for art and music lovers. There are four student hostels for about $1.40 a night, and an idyllic baroque palace for students in the Vienna Woods.

Vienna is the ideal starting point for tours of Eastern Europe, with hydrofoil boats going up the Danube River to Bratislava, Czechoslovakia and Budapest.

IN ZURICH, the young flock the Odeon Cafe opposite Bellevue Square or the Select Cafe 100 yards away. Rooms are expensive in Switzerland so avoid the hotels and stay at one of the many youth hostels scattered around the country. Zurich offers a good hostel at Mutschellenstrasse 114 at about $1.20 a night, and an excellent, inexpensive restaurant, the "Karl der Grosse," where a cohplete meal costs 50 cents to $1.

FOR SUN AND exotic surroundings, go south. In Athens, take boat trips to the numerous Greek Isles and set up camp in the old city, the Plaka. Situated around the base of the Acropolis, it has narrow roads and "boozookie" music played on lyres, sometimes in the streets.

The Plaka offers a fascinating market, the Monasteraiki, with trinket shops and local craftsmen. You can eat suckling pig, moussaka and grilled meat all at $1 or less a dish at Xino's Restaurant. For a different culinary experience, visit a restaurant in Turkolimino, the old Turkish area of Piraeus, and choose your own prawns, red mullet and other fish of the Mediterranean.

VALUE FOR your money makes Madrid one of Europe's favorite capitals for the budget traveler. Providing the lowest prices in the continent for accommodation, food and drink, the city is an open invitation tc splurge.

The streets leading off the Santa Ana Square are a beehive of activity with wine shops, taverns, and cafes selling a cup of coffee for 10 cents and a glass of wine for five.

Stop at the Restaurant Botin in Puerta Cerrada, an old haunt os Ernest Hemingway's, for suckling pig or roast baby lamb. On the Calle Echegaray in the Bar Sevillano a guitarist and singer pass their hats after a flamenco performance. A tip on bullfights: The good seats are in the shade at an average 400 pesatas ($5.80). Take a seat in the sun at half that price and get a free suntan.

PORTUGAL, with its excelshoreline, constant sun, and primitive adobe villages, is one of the best European countries for the traveler who wants to get away from the hub of the city. There are camping sites throughout the country as well as clean, pleasant pensaos (lodging houses) where you can get bed and breakfast for under $20.

Two of the best camping sites are Monsanto Park and Costa da Caparica, the latter next to a 20-mile stretch of white, empty beach. The water is generally cold except on the Algarve coast in the south which is most popular with tourists.

Don't hitchhike or wear hotpants in Portugal. Hitchhiking is rare and for that reason often unsafe. Hotpants are not worn by Portuguese women and therefore the young men, when they see them, think the worst.

MOROCCO with its deserts and Arab culture fascinates many travelers. The most scenic way to get there is by ferry to Tangiers from Gibraltar. Meals, mainly mutton and rice, start at about 50 cents and hotels charge $1-$2 a night throughout the country.

Nightclubs are reasonable. Two dollars will buy you a drink and a floor show as well. Good roads and frequent bus and train shuttles make it easy to get from town to town. Marrakech, Casablanca, Rabat, and Fez are the most popular towns with long markets full of inexpensive wares.

MOST YOUNG TRAVELERS who include Vienna in their itineraries are enticed there by its cultural and sports attractions. But Vienna can also be fun, as symbolized here by the carousel in its popular Prater amusement park.

Three Rare Fish

Three long-nosed hawkfish, one of the world's rarest creatures, are now on exhibit at New York City's Aquarium in Coney Island. Marine scientists say only nine hawkfish have been caught in the last 113 years. Those now at the New York Aquarium were found off Hawaii.

AMERICA'S GREAT national parks remain a popular tourist destination with millions of Americans. And Yellowstone National Park is rivaled only by California's own Yosemite National Park in popularity. At Yellowstone, natural wonders are the attraction, be they geysers erupting into the air, or the wild animal life such as these moose that flourish in the huge park.

America's Herbicide Policy: Spray Now And Pay Later

THE WITHERING RAIN by Thomas Whiteside; Dutton, 224 pages, $6.95.

By DON KEOWN

It is entirely possible that in retrospect the historians will look back upon our times and honor as the greatest Americans, not our politicians, our generals or even our scientists, but instead that handful of crusaders who have sought to set some brakes upon a runaway technology — the Rachel Carsons and the Ralph Naders.

Thomas Whiteside is a name that belongs upon that list, although he is not yet of the same stature as its pioneering leaders.

So far Whiteside is something less than a household word with Americans, although readers of The New Yorker will recognize his name as that of a determined and persistent campaigner against the use of hazardous herbicides in Vietnam in the ill-conceived and reckless defoliation operations, and in our own land. Now Whiteside continues his attack upon those policies in his book "The Withering Rain: America's Herbicidal Folly."

Whiteside's targets remain the 2,4,5-T and 2,4-D compounds, particularly the former.

Both are members of the complex and largely untested polychlorinated phenolic family of chemicals, and alone or in combination the two were dumped upon Vietnamese soil to the extent of 40,000 tons covering approximately one-tenth the total land area of our supposed ally, South Vietnam, and including a half million acres of croplands, before one of the rashest and cruelest programs in modern warfare's brutal history was called to a tardy halt.

And to prove the full scope of its stupidity, American society then continued to permit some use of these exceedingly toxic substances upon our own environment and in household products.

"What was manifestly involved in the subject I was looking into was an astonishing — really, a shocking — laxity in proper standards for the manufacture and use of a broad range of highly complex chemicals put out by big chemical companies and showered into the environment and brought into close contact with human beings without adequate prior testing in the laboratory for potential adverse effects on man, on animals, and on aquatic and plant life," summarizes Whiteside.

And: "I was dismayed to discover what seemed to me to be a thoroughgoing failure on the part of government regulatory agencies to set or enforce proper standards of safety for a huge number of what are officially classified as 'economic poisons.' "

When belated tests did finally make known the frightening teratological perils of 2,4,5-T, its manufacturers came up with a reply that underscores the irresponsibility that too often has attended the herbicide and pesticide trade.

The 2,4,5-T used in this testing, it was asserted, was contaminated, by a substance known as dioxin. And it was this dioxin, not the 2,4,5-T itself, that posed a teratological hazard.

What Whiteside discloses is that dioxin is present in at least minute amounts in all 2,4,5-T. That unlike 2,4,5-T itself, dioxin does not break down rapidly, but is stubbornly stable in the soil and quite possibly accumulative in animal tissue. And "the substance is of such potency that its release even in small concentrations must prompt deep concern." When it became apparent that our awakened national conscience could no longer tolerate the use in Vietnam of 2,4,5-T in combination with 2,4-D (its own alleged nontoxicity to humans unproven and suspect, according to Whiteside), then manufacturers hit upon another agent to mix with 2,4-D to form a defoliant.

The choice was picloram, and Whiteside describes it as "one of the most persistent and long-lived of all herbicides."

Four Department of Agriculture scientists had warned that "minute amounts of this potent herbicide irrigated on sensitive crops could have disastrous results," and even in spray-happy America its use on food crops had been banned. Thus, notes Whiteside, we had the uneasy spectacle of one iniompletely tested chemical being replaced by another incompletely tested chemical for the dousing of the land of the hapless Vietnamese.

Whiteside records how a program that began with the ironical purposes of "to improve the country's economy by permitting freer communications as well as to facilitate the Vietnamese Army's task of keeping these avenues free of Viet Cong harassments" shifted into an uglier phase of calculated crop devastation in an effort to induce local famine, certain to hit civilian women and children first since during any wartime food shortage the fighting men's needs receive priority.

He tells, too, how with the reluctant cessation of the poisoning of Vietnam's jungles, countryside and fields, greater supplies of these herbicides were released for use upon our own land. And of how our government again responded slowly and ineffectively with restrictions that hardly restricted at all.

Whiteside's book is a strange one in that his text occupies far less than half the 224 pages, and much of that has been printed before in The New Yorker, some of it as letters to the editors. The remainder of the book consists of appendices — statements and documents dealing with the subject, reprinted verbatim. But the inclusions are truly relevant and not mere padding — such as the December, 1969, rpoert of a U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare Commission that "prior to 1963, the Food and Drug Administration did not require evaluation of teratogenicity (fetus-deforming propensities). As a result of the thalidomide disaster, the need for data on teratogenicity became evident."

Yet even while Bionetics Research Laboratories of Litton Industries was conducting under a 1965-68 contract for the National Cancer Institute tests that eventually showed "2,4,5-T was clearly teratogenic as evidenced by production of statistically increased proportions of litters affected and increased proportions of abnormal fetuses within litters" in both mice and rats, the use os the suspected vkrbicide had zoomed in Southeast Asia and in the U.S., and continued thereaft- the use of the suspected herbicide had zoomed in Southeast Asia and in the U.S., and continued thereafter.

And Dr. Lee A. DuBridge, science adviser to the President, even as he was announcing in late 1969 a belated decision to restrict the use of 2,4,5-T as a weedkiller in this country still attempted to minimize the danger and damage by claiming that "it seems improbable that any person could receive harmful amounts of this chemical from any of the existing uses of 2,4,5-T."

That same year a resolution from the Council of the American Association for the Advancement of Science concluded "that 2,4,5-T is probably dangerous to man, and that 2,4-D is potentially dangerous to man. . . (and) there is a possibility that the use of herbicides in Vietnam is causing birth malformations among infants of exposed mothers."

And Dr. Arthur W. Galston, the Yale biologist and botanist, testified before a congressional committee that "2,4,5-T is one of the most teratogenic chemicals known. I suggest that its teratogenicity is such that even its use in such apparently innocuous domestic matters as clearing brush from powerlines is undesirable."

Whiteside has some specific recommendations for preventing reoccurences of the foolhardy 2,4,5-T gambit. One would be a re-definition of the weapons of chemical warfare banned by the Geneva Convention to make it clear defoliating agents are covered. Another would be a shifting of priorities for testing such substances, so that the burden of proof of their safety would rest upon the manufacturers before they could be put into general use. Now a dangerous toxicity must be established to the government's satisfaction if products already in use are to be removed — after injury has already been done.

And finally, Whiteside suggests that governmental agencies charged with protecting the public welfare in these circumstances have performed poorly. They are undermanned, ill-equipped, limited in authority, and lacking in will to use the powers and the tools they do possess. The author urges a complete revamping of the system so that the public safety is truly safeguarded.

Despite some misgivings over the method Whiteside has used in compiling his book, its subject matter is of such overriding improtance that we feel everyone — including those who have already seen the New Yorker articles — should read and ponder "The Withering Rain."

Working with an antagonistic industry and an often uncooperative government, Whiteside nonetheless has succeeded in compiling a damning case. And in making it clear that brakes are as essential as an engine for the steamroller that is technology, if society is not to be run over and mangled by its uncontrolled momentum.

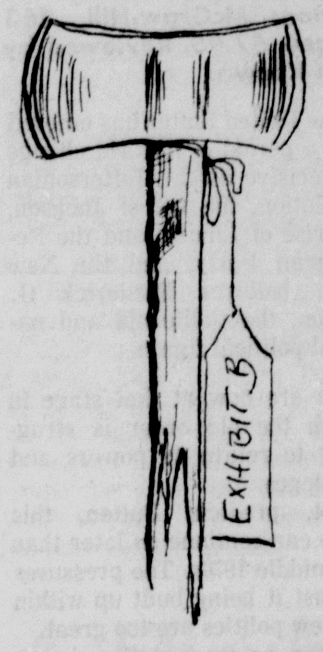
THE LATE BILL SMITH by Andrew Garve; Harper & Row, $5.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.



The jacket for Andrew Garve's newest novel quotes from our review of one of his earlier books:

"Andrew Garve is one of those elite among the authors of suspense novels who have built up sizable and faithful followings of readers. Versatility and consistency are his hallmarks. No two of his novels are alike in setting, in tone, in plot. But they are invariably well written and entertaining."

All of which can be said again, after reading "The Late Bill Smith."

Bill Smith is a salesman for an international steel firm, and for reasons unknown to him he has become the target of assassins. In his efforts to escape the would-be killers and ultimately to uncover their motive and end the threat, he has the help of Sue Hammond, a young escort for a London travel agency.

The story begins and ends in England, but involves a cruise into the Aegean, a pretended suicide and some international Cold War shenanigans.

The whole thing reads smoothly as Garve performs with his customary competence, although in a bit lighter vein than usual.

STEPHEN GREENE Press of Brattleboro, Vt., has published two softcover collections of cartoons by British humorists, Terence Parkes' "Man in Motion" continuing the uncaptioned antics and frustrations of the central figure of his "Man in Apron" and other books, and Alex Graham's "Daughter in the House" picturing the plight of today's parents of teen-age girls. The witty books sell for $1.25 each.

Time For Transition

CHANGING SOURCES OF POWER by Frederick G. Dutton; McGraw-Hill, 263 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

The United States has entered into a period of historic change as decisive as the Jeffersonian revolution, the age of Jackson, the rise of Lincoln and the Republican Party, and the New Deal, believes Frederick G. Dutton, the California and national political figure.

We are now at that stage in which the old order is struggling to retain its powers and privileges.

But, predicts Dutton, this state can continue no later than the middle 1970s. The pressures against it being built up within the new politics are too great.

If no accommodation is effected between these two opposing forces then the outcome will be one of two unhappy extremes — repression or revolution, with the first perhaps the more likely. In either event, the country will be the loser.

But if the old order recognizes the realities of a new situation and loosens its hold to permit the entrance into the American political mainstream of new faces and new ideas, then the transition into a new age can be accomplished without excesses or needless strife.

That is the thesis set forth in Dutton's book "Changing Sources of Power."

The former adviser to the Kennedys and Democratic Party official sees as the key attributes of the new age a shifting of emphasis from the old largely economical definition of politics to a broader meaning focussing upon cultural and social considerations, and a continuing decline in importance for the two major political parties as citizens become more and more independent-minded.

"The greatest shift in power taking place in American politics is not across the geography or the economy or social arrangements of the country, but simply within most individual voters," Dutton writes. "It is the current tipping of the balance of political power from the economic to the psychological to a certain extent — from the stomach and pocketbook to the psyche, and perhaps sooner or later even to the soul."

Groups that have customarily been relegated to the sidelines — the blacks, the young, etc. — are no longer satisfied with being mere spectators in the political arena, Dutton warns. They are determined to become active participants. And if refused admission to the arena, then the explosion, massive repression or violent revolution, could come..

Furthermore, much larger groups are no longer content with a part in the governmental processes that consists of a ritualistic, periodic trip to the polls to cast their ballots, often upon issues or for candidates they had no part in shaping or in choosing. Something more meaningful is being demanded as their share of the political machinery.

"What we have been going through is largely the loosening," Dutton says. "What still lies ahead is the hard and hesitant redefining of relationships, attitudes and directions."

And: Sooner or later there should come a fairly major opening for the newer forces in American life as the huge wave of young people moving into their middle or latter 20s floods into the electorate in record numbers. Such should not be characterized as an opening to the left anymore than to the right, but an Opening to the Future."

One completes the Dutton book with the realization that the author has really turned up no new, sensational truths, despite such predictions as a fourth party, a succession of one-term Presidents and a yet greater role and influence for television. Instead he has simply summarized what should be obvious to any thinking person. Certainly the ferment is there, and the resistance. So are the crucial alternatives that will decide our future.

The question, as Dutton makes it clear, is whether the Old Order will recognize its responsibilities and adapt itself to a new program of sharing its powers and whether the new forces will respond responsibly. To either, to fail to do so will invite revolution, led unquestionably by the most bizarre and irresponsible elements among the "outsiders," which, in turn, will most certainly be met by the harshest and most sterile repression from the "insiders."

Frederick Dutton's restatement of this critical crossroads in our national path, obvious though it might be, serves to remind us that time is growing short, and that 1972 would not be too early for an accommodation to begin in earnest.

ARTHUR F. SAMISH
A heyday is recalled

Voice Of Samish Is Heard Again

THE SECRET BOSS OF CALIFORNIA by Arthur H. Samish and Bob Thomas; Crown, 189 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

The title of this volume leaps like a ghost risen from the grave at those who have been around California for the last 22 years, since Lester Velie exposed the No. 1 lobbyist in Sacramento in a series of articles in Collier's magazine, entitled "The Secret Boss of California."

Velie based his "secret boss" appellation on a statement he drew from Gov. Earl Warren: "On matters that affect his clients, Artie unquestionably has more power than the governor."

Arthur H. Samish doesn't deny it. Obviously, he is rather proud of it, else he wouldn't have titled this sort-of biography, "The Secret Boss of California."

The actual writing is by Bob Thomas, Associated Press Hollywood reporter. But "The Secret Boss" is written in first person, and reads exactly like Samish sounds.

Why has Artie Samish, who called a lot of shots in Sacramento and then wound up spending 26 months in McNeil Island Federal Prison for income tax evasion, chosen to tell his story so many years later?

Anticipating that a lot of people will ask that, he (or Thomas) answers it in the book's first chapter: "It's because my life has been quiet for too long. I feel like raising hell and having fun one more time."

The "one more time" is likely to shake up quite a few politicians, present and past — and make a few others spin in their graves.

Samish explains how he got his power: through his simple formula, "select and elect," with the distillers' and brewers' political war chests at his disposal to make it possible.

"I simply selected those men I thought would be friendly to my clients' interests. Then I saw to it that those men got elected to the legislature."

And, of course, he didn't allow them to forget how they got there.

Samish describes with relish how California's old crossfiling system worked to his benefit. Cross-filing made the party organizations weak and inept. Samish put together a real organization to fill the void.

He recites specific cases, in which he does not hesitate to call people by name (as well as by epithet, i.e., "Frank Merriam was a real faker, the bald-headed son of a bitch.") His accounts probably are true — though somewhat embellished.

Of course, he includes reminiscences in which Artie Samish definitely was the "good guy." These, too, probably are true — though somewhat embellished.

Throughout its 189 pages, "The Secret Boss of California" is an uninhibited as was Artie Samish when he was the Man-To-See in Sacramento. As he says at the close of chapter 18:

"Chicanery was our middle name."

Written From Behind The Walls

INSIDE PRISON AMERICAN STYLE edited by Robert J. Minton Jr.; Random House, 325 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

Robert J. Minton resides in Sausalito and teaches speech at College of Marin. He has taught in the junior college program at San Quentin Prison and has participated in some experimental classes at Soledad Prison. In his work behind the walls, he has encouraged inmates to write.

And from what they wrote — for his classes, for prison publications, for each other, and sometimes just for themselves — he has put together "Inside Prison American Style."

The writers are all prisoners. What prisoners write ranges over a very wide field. Some of it is powerful propaganda; some of it is extremely inept and disgusting propaganda. Some of it is poignant introspection; some of it is exhibitionism.

Minton has tried to select a representative cross-section to show what it's like inside prison. He identifies with the prisoners (at least with those who write). This provides his book with its greatest strength and greatest weakness: strength because it is uninhibited, because it bares things that usually are concealed, glossed over, or ignored; weakness, because the views are necessarily all those of "losers" to whom society has become an enemy.

By his selections, and even more by the notes with which he introduces them, Minton shows both his empathy and sympathy for the incarcerated men and his lack of sympathy for the system that put them there. He is perceptive of people, rather than of systems (or of geography — he describes Soledad as "nestled in California's lush Central Valley".)

Physical Fitness Achieved Nicholas Kounovsky's Way

THE JOY OF FEELING FIT by Nicholas Kounovsky; Dutton, $6.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

"The best exercise book ever," said McCall's magazine of "The Joy of Feeling Fit." And that may not be an overstatement.

Nicholas Kounovsky, the Russian-born physical fitness expert, expounds upon his system of "engineered exercise" that he calls Sixometry. There is, first, some general discussion of fitness, and some assistance in determining your own status. Kounovsky then proceeds with the meat of his book — the exercises he has designed variously for endurance, suppleness, balance, strength, speed and coordination. The movements are demonstrated by silhouetted figures. And there are prescribed "dosages" for each of the three grades of fitness — beginner, intermediate and advanced.

The exercises include both the old-standbys and some Kounovsky originals.

And finally, the author caps his book with some advice on good living including: "Loving is a marvelous exercise."

Kounovsky can — and does — drop names like those of Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis and Mary Martin when he talks about his pupils. But more important, his theories appear sound and sensible and his system practical.

Why Not A Plant For Dad June 20?

It's A Father's Day Gift That He Won't Soon Forget

Dad deserves a distinctive gift on Father's Day, and there's nothing more appealing than an extraordinary plant — whether or not Dad is a garden hobbyist.

For instance, what Man of the House would not be pleased with receiving his very own tubbed orange tree or other dward citrus?

EASILY GROWN IN a tub, the smaller editions of citrus can be used to decorate the patio — where they beautify the surroundings and are truly a conversation piece.

Local nurseries have dwarf citrus varieties best suited to our area, and have a wide selection of other distinctive living gifts for presenting on Father's Day — June 20, this year.

Another surefire winner is one of the pre-trained shrubs which have been pruned into interesting shapes — such as topiaries, pyramids or globes. Some are called "poodle-cuts" because of their being clipped and formed into rounded heads — several per plant.

A pride of ownership goes with all such specimens.

Today, espaliered plants are enjoying great popularity. This is primarily because nurseries now have shrubs and trees already started on trellises — as espaliers. It becomes a fun pastime to establish a pattern and maintain the plant growth, by pruning and training, to carry out the pattern.

THE SUBJECTS enhance the garden and transform barren walls and fences into magnificent beauty.

Attractive additions to the porch or patio are hanging basket plants — both flowering ones and others renowned for their foliage. Nurseries have ready-to-enjoy baskets of fuchsias and tuberous begonias, both are prolific bloomers.

Distinctively-marked foliage highlights the hanging basket-type coleus ferns — such as Boston varieties — and Grape Ivy are refreshing sights the entire family will enjoy.

A big landscape-size shade tree might be just-the-ticket for certain Dads; others would be, perhaps, delighted over receiving a bonsai plant or a growing orchid.

AN UNUSUAL palm, such as a dwarf Sago Palm — in a complimentary container — is a charming accent for displaying at the entryway or on the patio.

There are many other Father's Day gift possibilities and the best bet is to visit your nearby nursery and see the extraordinary choices yourself. Whatever your preference, the plant will provide beauty for years to come — and forever remind Dad of your thoughtfulness.

Something For That Slope — A Cover Or A Shrub

Garden Page

Bare slopes can be made into areas of beauty and the transformation is easy to accomplish. There are many groundcovers and sturdy shrubs that will create a handsome and pleasing effect.

Adapted to most Marin areas is the Creeping Myrtle (Vinca major), which has glossy green foliage and is a vigorous grower. It's deep root system and spreading growth makes it an excellent cover for slopes or even steep banks. You'll thrill to the blue flowers it produces in spring and summer.

HYPERICUM, with its soft green smooth-leafed foliage, is one vigorous grower to consider. It sports yellow flowers in summer, and is a hardy performer.

Another yellow-blooming groundcover for slopes is the Trailing Gazania. Throughout the warm months you'll enjoy a profusion of daisy-like flowers. The textured gray, spreading foliage, alone, is reason enough to plant this one. It's hardy.

Iceplant varieties are worthy of consideration. The rose pink, purple and trailing types — red, rose, light pink and purple — are the best for slopes and banks.

SHRUBS RENOWN for their drought resistance and beauty include members of the Ceanothus family. Your nursery will have the best varieties for our area — all are highlighted by rich green foliage and flowers in shades of blue.

Also, low and spreading Pyracantha varieties with red or orange berries in the cool season, are attractive as they are utilitarian. This is true, too, of the white-flowered Rock rose, which thrives in difficult garden locations.

Shopping may reveal some of the creeping Manzanitas, which have small-leafed foliage and produce red berries. Once established, these require little attention.

TRAILING AFRICAN DAISIES are excellent for transforming bare slopes into colorful areas of beauty. They grow fast, and their blooms are long lasting. And they help prevent erosion in those problem areas.

A CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENERS

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

- Chrysanthemums bought in bloom this month can be cut back when flowering is finished for a second bloom in the fall.
- When Gladiolus are six inches high, spray or dust to control thrips. Your nurseryman can recommend a chemical to prevent damage caused by this insect pest.
- Hydrangeas should be planted now; they like part-sun or filtered shade. Choose from pink, salmon, scarlet, blue, or white varieties, and keep them watered throughout the summer.
- Dwarf Dahlias are available now in nursery flats and will add splashes of bright color to the garden.
- Mow your lawn regularly, but do not crop it too closely especially during the dry summer months.

Snug Deck Enhances Any House

It's Practical Whether Lot Is Level Or Slopes Sharply

Tucked into a cozy but neglected corner of a house, a small deck can offer a secluded sitting room just off a master bedroom. It's only one of many ways decks add to home livability.

A private deck for a guest room, with built-in wood benches, will add to visitors comfort and make their stay more memorable.

And for a family's outdoor summer living or informal entertaining, a 10-by-20-foot deck of two-by-four-inch Douglas fir or western cedar adds many pleasant hours.

RAILINGS COMBINED with benches help avoid the clutter of too many chairs, and a louvered wind baffle or screen is welcome where gusts are bothersome.

Often overlooked is the charm and usefulness of a firepit in a deck. This is simply a square or round hole lined with brick, and with a gravel bottom.

The simple post construction of decks allows them to be added anywhere, whether the lot is level, or slopes down or up from the house. It's a simple matter of making the posts longer or stepping the deck up two or three levels as needed.

ONE FAMILY added a small deck in an ell of the house off their master bedroom, gaining enjoyment of space unused before because of the lot's slope at that corner.

Access to the pool from this deck was gained by extending a walkway of two-by-four-inch fir, with four-by-four-inch post railing, along the back of the house.

Another outdoor living area is a pavilion attached to the house or garage, or built freestanding in the yard. Not elaborate, the pavilion is like a roofed deck, with screens for use when bugs are bothersome.

Cabinets may be built into one end of t pavilion and the roof makes it a perfect winter storage area for yard furniture, mowers and gardening euipment.

THIS CAN release carport or garage space badly needed for the automobile, or for other purposes.

And it is more convenient, too, to have the rake, the lawn chairs or the extra hose close on hand, when you need them.

A SECLUDED DECK for the master bedroom of this home has been tucked into the ell of the house, where contorta pine blocks the breezes and adds privacy. The deck overhangs a sharp drop at the end of the yard, and is connected to the swimming pool by a walkway. Two-by-four-inch Douglas fir deck, steps and walk are all stained a caramel shade.

What U.L. Label Means To You

Wise consumers have learned to look for the Underwriters' Laboratories label on electrical appliances, but few people are aware of its full scope.

U.L. labels can also be found on marine equipment, burglar-resistant safes, roofing, and thousands of other products examined and tested by Underwiriters' Laboratories each year.

The 77-year-old, not-for-profit organization has six testing departments: burglary protection and signaling; casualty and chemical hazards; electrical; fire protection; heating, air conditioning and refrigeration; and marine, covering more than 1,200 categories of products, methods and systems.

THE PURPOSE of Underwriters' Laboratories — an independent organization — is to prevent accidents, loss of life and property by investigating and testing, and setting standards for safety.

Products that pass the Underwriters' Laboratories tests are awarded the UL lable, which is not a guarantee or a warranty, but an indication that a sample, or prototype, of the product has met specific requirements.

A follow-up program provides for periodic inspection of U.L.-labeled products in the factory or on the sales floor, since their continued inclusion in the Laboratories' Listing Service depends on compliance with the requirements.

TO ESTABLISH requirements, Underwriters' Laboratories created five engineering councils whose members include authorities on public safety and experts in each of the councils' special fields. There is also a 60-member consumer advisory council that serves as an information pipeline to and from the public.

Advisory council mmembers represent trade unions, consumer magazines, retail merchants, consumer organizations and other groups that speak for the public.

Since there are several U.L. testing categories, a product may bear more than one label. A safe, for example, may have a U.L. Fire Classification C label and also a relocking device label.

Another example of multiple listing is roofing.

ASPHALT SHINGLES bearing the UL Class C label for fire resistance may also have the U.L. wind-resistant label. These classifications are combined on one label. The Class C label indicates the roofing will not ignite easily, will not spread fire quickly, and will not add to fire hazard by emitting burning brands that can create other fires. Asphalt shingles with the U.L. Class B or A label afford even greater protection.

To merit the U.L. wind resistant label, singles must withstand 60 mile-per-hour winds for two hours without lifting a single tab.

Responsible consumers guided in their purchases by the U.L. label must also take reasonable care of the products — read the appliance instructions and follow them; lock the safe door and keep the combination a secret; and refrain from walking around on the asphalt shingle roof — it's designed to resist fire, wind and rain for as long as 25 years,

Blonde Finish

For a blonde mahogany finish on raw wood, apply a commercial bleach according to directions. Rinse and, when dry, sand. Dust carefully. Use a synthetic sealer or thinned white shellac. Fill with neutral wood filler. Apply another coat of sealer, then varnish.

WALKING ON WOOD

INEXPENSIVE WALKS can be constructed of wood to add distinction to the entrance to a home, be it in the city or at the beach, where the house shown above is located. Other ideas for walkways and decks built of western woods can be obtained in a full-color, eight-page booklet available free from the Wood Products Industry Fund, 1240 Bayshore Highway, Burlingame, Calif., 94010.

The Handyman's Pages

THE BOAT that you build yourself may not be a yacht, but it is certain to be a craft in which you will take special pleasure. There is something about boatbuilding as a do-it-yourself enterprise that captures the enthusiasm of the entire family, both while the project is underway, and while it is being enjoyed, after completion. For the full-size Little Ramber Boat Pattern 147 that will enable you to construct the craft seen on the left, send $1.50 (another 25 cents if you desire air mail service) to Steve Ellingson, San Rafael Independent-Journal Pattern Department, Post Office Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif., 91409. The principal material is plywood. It is 11 and a half feet long, and more than 50 inches wide at the middle. With three seats, it can accommodate three or four people. And it is so light that two people can carry it. Either an outboard motor or oars may be used to move the boat.

Adding A Touch Of The Colonial

Colonial is an almost commonplace architectural style in northeastern United States.

But out here on the West Coast, it is seen infrequently.

Thus, when it does appear, it attracts far more attention than it would in New England, and lends a special distinction to the home.

Your house may not now be "colonial." But you can give a colonial look to the front entry of almost any traditional-styled house with a few linear feet of western wood moldings and three pieces of lumber.

To "colonialize" a plain flush door, frames made of molding and applied to the door with glue and brads do the job quickly.

But for a more complete Colonial entry, addition of two one-by-12-inch boards faced with spaced vertical strips of half-round molding and skirted with a crown molding creates the look of classic columns.

Finishing the entry is a simple matter of adding a horizontal one-by-12-inch board capped with a crown treatment across the top of the door and "columns". This board may be left plain or face-trimmed with moldings.

Identical crown treatments may be repeated above exterior windows. For further continuity, combinations of western lumber and moldings make attractive fixed-in-place shutters.

SOPHIA LOREN and John Gavin star in "A Breath of Scandal," the tale of a beautiful Viennese princess who meets a handsome, romantic American under comprising conditions. The movie will be re-shown Sunday at 9 p.m. on Channels 7 and 11.

Hitchcock Honor

Alfred Hitchock was awarded the rank of "Chevalier" in the French National Order of the Legion of Honor.

TV NOTES

By JACK GAVER

Film star Rock Hudson will participate in his first tlelvision series during the coming season. He recently completed filming a two-hour movie-for-video, "McMillan and Wife," for airing on NBC's "World Premiere" program in the fall. That will spin off three or four 90-minute shows using the same title and principal characters, with Hudson continuing to play a San Francisco police commissioner with a perky wife.

The synthetic "laugh track" has been abandoned for the new season for ABC's "The Odd Couple" as result of a poll of viewers, who were overwhelmingly against it. Henceforth, the comedy series will be filmed before studio audiences, whose reactions will be used for the weekly broadcasts.

David Frost is putting in a busy spring and summer. The host of the syndicated Westinghouse five-a-week talk program continues with that while taking on a stout schedule of nightclub appearances from May through August in such places as Toronto, Wallingford, Conn., Columbia, Md., Kiamesh Lake, N.Y., Lake Tahoe and Las Vegas, Nev.

John Banner, the German sergeant in "Hogan's Heroes" for its many seasons, has a new job now that that series has ended. He will have the role of Uncle Lazlo in "The Chicago Teddy Bears," a new half-hour comedy dealing with the turbulent 1920s in the Second City. CBS will slot it in the 8-8:30 p.m. Friday space in the fall.

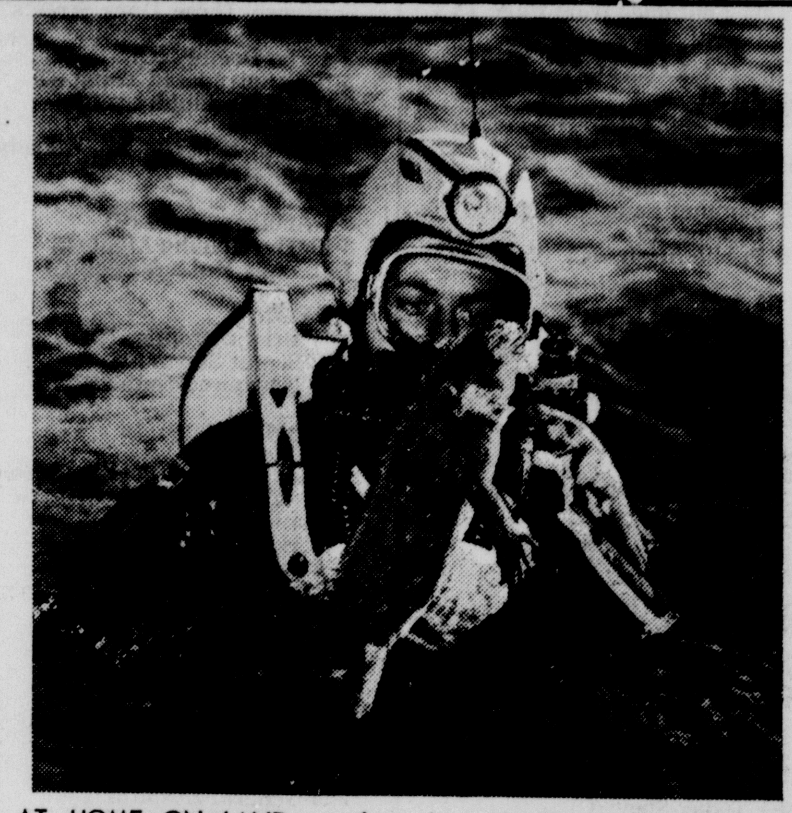
No Rush To Color

Color television is making slow progress in Denmark. Less than 30,000 color television licenses had been issued by the end of 1970. Citizens holding black and white licenses numbered 1,300,000.



AT HOME ON LAND or deep beneath the waves, this unique creature, the Marine Iguana, is the subject of "The Dragons of Galapagos," an episode in the award-winning "The Undersea World of Jacques Cousteau," series. The special will be repeated Monday at 7:30 p.m. on Channels 7 and 11.

New On The Stereo Scene

By WILLIAM D. LAFFLER

Buffy Sainte-Marie is a great singer when she is serious and she adds something extra when she shows her sense of humor.

Her latest album, "She Used to Wanna Be a Ballerina" (Vanguard VSD-7931), is good listening from beginning to end.

Buffy wrote five of the songs, including the album title number. Among the seven others are compositions by Neil Young, Leonard Cohen and Gerry Coffin.

"Moratorium," one of Buffy's contributions, describes the frustration of a GI who finds on his return from the battlefield that he cannot get a date with a girl back home because his hair is too short.

Buffy moves to the sentimental side with "Sweet September Morning" and reflects pride in her American Indian heritage with the title song from the movie, "Soldier Blue."

Neil Young's song, "Helpless," is something of a throwback in this rock age to the old pop music and has a good chance of hitting the charts, if Buffy's handling of the lyrics is an indicator.

SUSAN RAYE hasn't been around as long as Miss Sainte-Marie but she has established herself in the country music field even though she is a city girl from Oregon.

Young Susan currently has a hit song in "L.A. International Airport" and should produce another with "Willy Jones," her new album (Capitol ST-736).

Susan doesn't have the twang that ordinarily is a trademark of the country and western singer but her voice contains a fresh innocence that suggest wide open spaces.

Although "Willy Jones" and "L.A. International Airport" are the standouts in this album, there are other good numbers including Susan's own song, "Baby Sittin' With Baby."

BUCK OWNES, who gave Susan the big helping hand on her way to recognition, is well represented.

He wrote "Willy Jones," "Heartbreak Mountain," "In the Arms of Love," "Happy Times Are Here Again," "Merry Go-Round of Love" and "Hello Happiness, Goodbye Loneliness."

DEANA MARTIN, left, Frank Sinatra Jr. and Lucie Arnaz appear along with other sons and daughters of famous stars on "The Dean Martin Show" Thursday at 10 p.m. on Channels 3 and 4.

The Robert Youngs Like Country Living

By VERNON SCOTT

Robert Young lives in three separate worlds: as Dr. Marcus Welby in his television series, a country squire near San Diego and a suburbanite in Beverly Hills.

Viewers of his ABC series see Young as a widower living comfortably enough when he isn't involved with the dramatic traumas of his patients.

This life style is contrary to Young's true day-to-day living.

WHEN THE SHOW is in production he and his wife Betty, married almost 40 years, live in a two-story Pennsylvania Dutch-style stucco house with fieldstone walls and a shake roof.

They moved there "temporarily" 28 years ago, and have added rooms from time to time. It is an immense home of 6,000 square feet, including five bedrooms and an apartment over the garage.

The furnishings and appointments are faultless.

THE ACTOR AND his wife are the parents of four daughters in their 20s and 30s who all live within baby-sitting distance of the Youngs, who have five grandchildren.

Television's unflappable doctor finds they rattle around the big house now that their daughters are out on their own. But they still employ a housekeeper, who has been with them for a quarter century.

"We've kept the big house because it's more comfortable than renting an apartment when the show is shooting," Young explains.

HIS REAL LOVE, however, is a small home in Rancho Santa Fe, a resort community built around a golf course some 25 miles north of San Diego.

It is a small, two-bedroom cottage which the Youngs occupy whenever he isn't working.

Both he and Betty do the cleaning and housekeeping themselves without help. Young says it is a sanctuary, a hideaway where they can withdraw from the social and business activities of Hollywood.

THE COTTAGE, unlike the Beverly Hills home, does not have a swimming pool. Nor does Young play golf almost every day as he once did.

ROBERT YOUNG
An Enchanted Cottage

Instead, he chooses to walk along the links at off hours with a few balls and a single club just for exercise and to breathe the fresh air.

A quaint guest house has been added to the property in the event one of his daughters chooses to spend some time with them.

"BETTY AND I do the cooking, bedmaking, dusting, window cleaning and lamp repairs," Young said. "We don't consider the work drudgery. I guess you might even call it therapy."

They call their hideaway the Enchanted Cottage after the picture in which Young starred with Dorothy McGuire in 1944.

There is an enchantment about the Rancho Santa Fe home. It is an explosion of color both inside and out. The garden is a profusion of bright flowers.

BETTY HAS decorated the living room with bright yellows, greens and reds. Large windows looking out on the golf course and gardens give the visitor the feeling of being indoors and outdoors simultaneously.

On long evenings together, the Youngs watch television, read, go for long walks and just talk to one another.

Young needs his retreat and long quiet days. When he's on the Hollywood treadmill he reports to work at 7 a.m. and seldom leaves before 6 p.m.

MEET PROFESSOR DOOM

He listens to the news five times each day
Besides what all the commentators say,
So, feels that he's equipped to prophesy
That soon we all are surely going to die!
Sometimes an earthquake is the awesome threat,
Sometimes it is high-jacking of a jet.
Because we are involved in Vietnam
He fears the touch-off of a nuclear bomb
Will blow our lovely world to shattered bits,
Or else, we all will lose our scattered wits.
He says "Because of over-population
Which causes higher taxes and inflation,
Since stock reports show market fluctuating
Our whole economy is inundating."
He thinks the Communists are gaining ground
And proving other governments unsound.
He lectures us on earth's ecology,
Indoctrinates with fear-psychology,
And yet he offers us no real solution
Because he KNOWS we're dying of pollution!

SAN RAFAEL. RUTH MURRAY JONES

CALIFORNIA HAPPINESS

Come sing with me the praises of another day —
my lust for life is more than I can bear;
come share with me enchantment, come and play
mids't mountain fields and shore line sere and spare, we will explore the rainbow spangled lash upon a salty cheek - and seek - and seek the meaning of it all, as ocean wash lulls lovers into drowsy sleep

LARKSPUR. HOPE EMERY

I DO NOT KNOW

I do not know
That what I know
Is the fullest way of knowing;
I only know
That I do not know
My destination or where
I ultimately am going.
